Suspect nabbed in boat break-ins

A Hull man has been arrested in connection with a slew of boat break-ins in Cohasset Harbor over the weekend.

Hull police have charged Steven Coble, 24, of Atlantic Avenue in Hull, with receiving stolen property and carrying a dangerous weapon after investigating a boat going ashore on Gunrock Beach in the wee hours of Sunday morning.

The boat was allegedly stolen from Cohasset and piloted to Hull, said Cohasset Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon, adding Cohasset police anticipate also seeking charges against Coble. Coble may have had accomplices, Lennon said. The matter is under investigation.

Cohasset police first learned about the larcenies that involved about 11 boats from the lobstermen, who own them, on Sunday morning. Lennon said most of the break-ins were on lobster boats but a couple of pleasure craft were also burglarized.

Stolen items include lobster pots, survival suits, rods & reels, flare kits, knives and binoculars.

HSO has been busy creating the new season

An orchestra is a year-round enterprise, and some of its most exciting work is done over the summer. Hingham Symphony Orchestra, a growing organization that aims to bring the very best classical performances and educational programs to the South Shore, has been busy since June preparing for its eighth season as a professional orchestra.

"I love the summer months, because it's pure planning. Once the season begins, there is very little time to think ahead, especially when we have a concert or event at least once a month from August through May," says Music Director Jin Kim. By the end of May, most of the HSO's musicians have left Boston, dispersed across the globe to participate in music festivals such as Spoleto in or Schleswig-Holstein in Germany, or study or teach in summer music programs.

Principal oboe Andrew Price teaches at the Tanglewood Institute for the summer. Principal viola Bradley Otteson's quartet was invited to return to the Aspen Festival to perform new compositions by celebrated American composer Joan Tower. Since many of the HSO's musicians are in the early stages of their career, a core of about 24 return to HSO each season. The remaining 50 will be selected from auditions held in early September

"Throughout the year, I'm constantly thinking about the music I would consider programming for the upcoming season — how pieces fit together, whom I would like to invite to serve as guest soloist," Kim says. "At the end of the season, I sit down with all my notes and devise the full program for the next season." That includes tracking down soloists who are performing in a different country each week, and making sure that scores for an intended program are available and affordable.

Kim also takes the summer months to study. "Summer is usually the time when I browse through scores for the future, and do the bulk of my studying for the upcoming season," says Kim. Conductors also need to "practice." "Part of what we do is 'wave our hands.' But in order to wave our hands, we have to understand the score. It's a long process, and an exciting one. The notes come alive by being played on an instrument, but I first have to hear all the possibilities by studying the notes on the page. Then I fine tune the scores before heading off to rehearsals."

While Kim is immersed in the music side of planning a new season, HSO Managing Director Nina Wellford lines up the venues for each performance and special event, negotiating dates and costs, and begins to recruit corporate sponsors and advertisers. The Board of Directors weighs in with decisions about the budget and new initiatives, such as a new series called Classical with a Twist. With all the details worked out, Wellford and Kim meet with Toby Wolk and Hal Shainwald, of TobyWolk design in Hingham, to design and produce the season's brochure.

The South Shore's wake-up call for the HSO's new season centers around the annual Sunset at the Abbey Concert, held this year on Aug. 28 at 4:30 p.m. Thanks to the generosity of the monks at Glastonbury Abbey, HSO holds a relaxed chamber concert in an idyllic setting on the vast central lawn. This year's program features a virtuoso Greek pianist, Konstantinos Papadakis. He will perform pieces by Rachmaninoff, Gottshalk, Gershwin and Greek folk tunes, infused by his current experiences performing in Athens during the Olympics. In addition, select HSO musicians, including Andrew Price on oboe, Misha Grandel, trumpet, and Jessica Lyzak, flute, will share their favorite solo and ensemble pieces. Bring a lawn chair and picnic and a group of friends, for a perfect summer afternoon. In case of rain, the concert will move indoors to the Abbey Conference Center.

The South Shore's wake-up call for the HSO's new season centers around the annual Sunset at the Abbey Concert, held this year on Aug. 28 at 4:30 p.m.

Music Director Jin Kim, President of the Board Eileen McIntyre, and Managing Director Nina Wellford survey the scene at the Abbey

And there is much more wonderful music to come. HSO is excited to announce several new initiatives and a superb program of concerts and events:

- Music by the Sea returns as an early-season benefit for the HSO, on September 26 at the Roy family home on Jerusalem Road, Cohasset
- Derby Academy's Larson Hall, an acoustic gem with wonderful sight lines for the audience and a large stage, will host both Masterworks concerts on the South Shore this season. (A third HSO Masterworks event is scheduled for Boston's Jordan Hall in the spring.)
- Classical with a Twist: a solo musician and Jin Kim perform classical music at its purest in two intimate clubs: Classical Uncorked at the Red Lion Inn in November, and Classical On Tap at Mt. Blue in March
- A new Membership program keeps Members connected to the HSO by sending reminder postcards and program notes before each concert
- The HSO Corporate Advisory Council begins its second year of connecting the business community to the arts, and has helped develop a complete Corporate Sponsorship program of mutual benefit and support

The newly elected President of the Board of Directors, Eileen McIntyre, encourages people across the South Shore to get to know the HSO. "We welcome back our old friends and look forward to meeting new ones. The HSO makes classical music accessible across the region in a variety of performance spaces and through its educational initiatives. If you are not already on our mailing list, check out the 2004-2005 program on our web site, and give us a call."

The HSO brochure for its new season will be in mailboxes during the first week of September. In the meantime, the complete list of programs and events may be found on the web at www.hinghamsymphony.org or by calling the HSO at 781-740-5694.

Dog obedience

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer another session of dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School this season.

Classes will be held on Monday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting Sept. 13. For all classes the fee is $100. For the five-week, one-hour, per-week program. Dog owners are required to have their dogs' shots/inoculations up to date.

The class, which will be for beginners, will be held from 6-7 p.m.

To register for the next available session, call the recreation office at 781-383-4109. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis.

Art Center to host 'Monotype Marathon'

Nona Hershey, Professor and Coordinator of the Printmaking Department of Massachusetts College of Art will be offering a three-day printmaking workshop Friday, Aug. 27 through Sunday, Aug. 29. The aim of the course is to develop skills in drawing, in composition, and in invention. Technical printmaking demonstrations will be followed by guided hands-on practice and critique of works in progress.

Ms. Hershey has participated in more than 100 print biennials and group exhibitions internationally. Her work is included in numerous public and corporate collections including the Metropolitan Museum of Art; The Library of Congress; and the Fogg Museum. She has had residency grants at the Asillah Forum Foundation, Morocco; the Ballinglen Arts Foundation, the MacDowell Colony, NY and at the Ucross Foundation, WY. She taught printmaking at Tyler School of Art in Rome, Italy for 12 years and at Temple University's Tokyo program for one year. This workshop is a unique opportunity for South Shore residents to work with an internationally acclaimed artist and participate in a summer Master Art Class close to home.

The workshop costs $285 ($265 for SSAC members). To register call 781-383-2787 or for more information visit www.ssac.org.

Story

As [illegible] the Beach Boys — the band [illegible] was working so hard, they didn't have much of a schedule in the sweet between gigs — Mike Love hasn't had a summer off in 40 years. As the group's only remaining original member, Mike Love continues to lead "The Beach Boys" and is busier now than ever. Each summer, he tours with the band which plays the South Shore Music Circus Friday.

Born March 15, 1941 in Los Angeles, California, Love had all the makings of a Beach Boy. He was always around music growing up and loved to sing harmony with his cousins, Brian, Carl and Dennis Wilson. In 1961, he wrote the lyrics to The Beach Boys' very first song, "Surfin.'" Since those early days, Love has written many lyrics to The Beach Boys' most famous songs such as "Surfin' Safari," "Fun, Fun, Fun," "California Girls," "Good Vibrations," "Kokomo" and many more. The group, which also included Al Jardine and Bruce Johnston, has had several top ten hits and four number one songs. Love, along with the other Beach Boys, is a member of The Rock & Roll Hall Of Fame.

The Beach Boys will perform at the South Shore Music Circus, Sohier Street. Cohasset, Friday, Au. 20. For tickets and information, call 617/931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

WAXING PHILOSOPHICAL

Earwax acts as a protective coating that filters dust from entering the ear. In addition, because it is slightly acidic, ear wax (or cerumen) discourages the growth of fungus and bacteria in the moist, dark confines of the ear. Left to its own devices, earwax migrates to the outer ear, where it is sloughed away. There is no need, therefore, to place a cotton swab inside the ear canal, which risks perforating the eardrum. In cases where earwax builds up and hardens to cause a partial blockage that compromises hearing ability, visit the pharmacy for an over-the-counter remedy that removes excess earwax safely. To address wax accumulations on a hearing instrument, seek the advice of your hearing professional.

People who use hearing aids are more likely to experience build-up of earwax since the hearing aid prevents the wax from exiting the ear canal. In fact, about half of canal and in-the-ear hearing aid repairs are due to microscopic bits of wax getting into the sound outlet of the instrument. If you are using too many batteries, or if your hearing aid sounds weak or has no sound at all, it may be due to wax damage. For more information about healthy hearing, please call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144. Located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, we offer free repairs of any make of hearing air.

P.S. If an insect crawls inside your child's ear, shine a flashlight into the ear opening. The insect should move toward the light and exit the ear.

Citgo plans afoot

Tedeschi's may move in there

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Coffee lovers may one day have another option when deciding where to stop for their morning caffeine dose in downtown Cohasset, as a special permit has been filed which would allow for the inclusion of a drive-through coffee shop at the current Olympic Citgo gas station.

George Roukounakis, owner of Olympic Citgo at 55 South Main St. said he has been working with the owner of the Tedeschi Food Shops at 52 South Main St., to come up with a plan to operate both businesses from Roukoukanakis' current site. Plans also include a drive-through donut shop, possibly a Dunkin' Donuts, which would have a third owner. With the addition of a Dunkin' Donuts, residents would have four choices to purchase coffee and a bite in the Village, including French Memories, the Red Lion Inn Bakery and Atlantic Bagel. John Scott, new owner of the Village Butcher and Deli, is also thinking about adding breakfast hours.

Tedeschi Food Shops, through its attorney Charles Humphreys,

Border Street kitchen is among the best

Places first in design contest

They say the kitchen is the heart of the home and for Art and Debbie Avila, it's the showstopper as well. With 24-feet high ceilings, tiles imported from Turkey arranged in a beautiful basket-weave pattern as a back splash, and appliances fit for the most prestigious chef, it's no wonder theirs won the 40th Annual Design Competition of the National Kitchen and Bath Association.

The award is given based on the room's visual appeal, the creativity, the presentation, as well as safety and functionality.

From the front entryway of the Avilas' Border Street home, archways provide a clear view of the kitchen, located through a butler's pantry, in the back of the house. The soft sage greens and off whites of the kitchen's color palette are a wonderful complement to the views of the outdoors from the many large windows filtering in sunlight,

No lazy summer days for new school chief

Is kept busy filling posts

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The first day of school is always hectic, as students and teachers alike try to get back into a daily routine, putting the days of beach towels and cookouts behind. But while many who frequent the Cohasset schools were out of the buildings during the summer, the administration was busy behind the scenes, making sure everything is ready when the doors open Sept. 8.

"It's getting so our summers are busier than the school year," said Supt. Denise Walsh, who since having come on board July1 has had to conduct many interviews to fill positions in time for the start of school. Roughly 19 new contracts have been signed, and some are still pending. New hires include Marshfield resident Linda Gill to serve as Director of Student Services , taking the place of former director Karen Watts, and Business Clerk Karen Park, who is taking the place of Ivan Klimko.

Thanks to the efforts of a local group of parents, Walsh will be able to bring two additional teachers on board for this school year. When three elementary level teachers announced they

CBB train liaison wants to talk

Asks residents to air concerns

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Greenbush commuter ril project has been in the planning stages for more than 20 years. Now that construction could begin in Cohasset within the next few weeks, Community Coordinator Tom Carroll said an outreach program which has been very successful in other Greenbush communities will soon be in full swing for Cohasset.

Carroll works for Cashman Balfour Beatty, the joint venture working with the MBTA to construct the Greenbush line. He has seen construction begin in neighboring towns over the past 2-1/2 years and said in that time, his outreach program has gained wonderful feedback. While each town can decide what aspects of the plan it would like to implement, "The feeling I'm getting is that they'll (Cohasset) want to use as much as they can," said Carroll.

One of the most important aspects of the Greenbush outreach program is the 24-hour, seven-days-a-week hotline. "The reason we call it a hotline and not a complaint line is because if we're told there's a problem, we'll fix it," he said. Carroll said in the past 13 months, he has received 13 total calls from Cohasset, which have been mainly informational. However, he expects as construction begins, there will be more residents who have questions, and the hotline can be a very valuable tool. "An answer is only a phone call away," he said.

Anyone can call the hotline day or night, and there will

Reunited with their families

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Two local felines have used up at least one of their nine lives after leaving their respective families to enjoy an exciting summer vacation on their own. While the two are not related, both Pumpkin and Oliver are orange tabby cats with a taste for adventure, and both have been returned to their homes safe and sound.

"The fact that there are so many coyotes didn't help bolster my confidence."

— Howie Altholtz, concerned Dad

Around the second week of July, Howie Altholtz, 4 Cedar Ledge Village, noticed his daughters' cat Pumpkin was missing. Pumpkin had been adopted from the Scituate Animal Shelter last

Veterans committee seeks information

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee is looking to find Cohasset residents who served in the Armed Forces during the Persian Gulf War. The recently updated Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site has posted honor rolls for every war dating back to the Civil War, as well as hero profiles and information about Gold Star mothers. Currently, the committee has an honor roll page for the Persian Gulf War on its Web site, but no names to add to the list. In addition, the committee is always looking to update its lists for other wars, and residents are asked to send along the names of any veterans who have not been included to date.

Anyone with names of any Cohasset veterans is asked to pass them along to Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt via e-mail at gpratt@suburbancompanies.com. For more information, please visit the committee's Web site at cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

MBTA ombudsman position proposal

Noel Collins, 15 Forest Ave., sent a letter to acting Town Manager Michael Buckley expressing his interest in serving as the ombudsman between the town and the MBTA. Collins said he has extensive experience in land use planning, development, litigation, and mitigation, which "uniquely qualify me to serve as an advocate or ombudsman. I am qualified to deal with virtually any land use related issues including complex legal issues, property disputes, mediation agreements, governmental or political agreements/disputes."

Collins said if chosen, he would make himself available virtually seven days a week, or on an "as needed" basis, and would keep office hours in Town Hall twice a week. He would also be available by telephone and/or cell phone.

Collins said he would provide weekly written reports and would construct a Web site to keep interested parties updated. He said he would not require a contract for the position, but would charge the town $60 per hour.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall this week:

Conservation Commission, Sept. 2 & 16, 7:30 p.m.

Library trustees, Sept. 8, 7p.m., at the library

School Committee, Sept. 9 & 23, 7 p.m., at the high school library

Selectmen, Sept. 14, 7:30 p.m.

Waste Water Committee, Sept. 1, 7:30 p.m.

Water Resources Protection Committee, Sept. 13, 7:30 p.m., King St. plant

Water Commission, Aug. 30, 7:30 p.m., King St. plant

Water Commission and Water Resources Protection Committee, Sept. 13, 7:30 p.m., King St. plant

ZBA, Sept. 7, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise. Call the Town Clerk at 781-383-4100 for updates.

Absentee ballots are available at Town Hall

Absentee ballots for the State Primary on Tuesday, Sept. 14, are now available at the Town Clerk's office.

Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Sept. 13, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican, Libertarian, or Green Rainbow and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is enrolled in a political designation they may not vote in any state or presidential primary.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Sept. 14, to be counted.

The town will use the Accu-Vote optical scan system. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the oval to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Harborview residents say upgrades are just magical

Entertainment, cookout provided

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There are new refrigerators and stoves, a new security system and new door handles at the Harborview Apartments off Elm Street. There is also a whole bunch of grateful senior citizens who live in the 30-year-old complex behind the police-fire station.

To show their appreciation, Harborview residents invited town officials to a cookout complete with an interactive magic show last Thursday conducted by professional entertainer, David Oliver, who knows how to generate a lot of laughter and good will.

The upgrades to Harborview – which was built in 1974 — are possible thanks to money raised through the Community Preservation Act that the town adopted in 2001. This year's annual Town Meeting approved allocating roughly $80,000 from the Community Preservation Fund for the appliances, lever-style door handles and intercom security system.

The Community Preservation Committee – which reviews requests and makes recommendations to Town Meeting – backed the expenditures.

"This was an ideal way to spend some money and help our neighbors in the community," CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said during last week's event. "This project was ideally suited for the Community Preservation Fund."

Marilyn Le Blanc, director of the Cohasset Housing Authority that runs the complex, tried to get the community involved because state funding for upgrades is long in coming. For example, Harborview has been waiting since 1996 for new sidewalks that were promised.

The Harborview complex at 60 Elm St. consists of 64 units of subsidized housing in 16 buildings. The units are for income qualifying senior citizens 60 and older. There are also 12 units for the developmentally disabled. The complex was built with state funds in 1974.

Le Blanc said the outside doors to the buildings have never locked and now they do.

"It has always bothered me," says Le Blanc about the lack of security. "It is so wonderful to now have safety and security be part of the daily life of the residents."

She said the cookout and magic show were a way to thank the town officials who supported the expenditure including the members of the CPC, the Advisory Committee and selectmen. All the food was donated and Oliver of DO Magic Entertainment provided his magic show at no cost.

Before introducing Oliver – whom Le Blanc knows through a mutual friend – she choked back tears as she thanked the various town committees.

"You can tell I'm emotional about this," she told the audience in the packed community room.

Tears of joy soon turned to tears of laughter as Oliver – who is regularly featured in "Monday Night Magic" on Broadway – regaled the room with magic tricks including tearing up a $10 bill provided by Police Chief Jim Hussey. Oliver soon put the bill back together again to the delight of the crowd.

"This project was ideally suited for the Community Preservation Fund."
— Stuart Ivimey, CPC chairman

Oliver, who has also appeared on "The Early Show" on CBS and has been featured on the Discovery Channel, picked several assistants from among the residents to help with some of the magic tricks.

Community preservation funds derived from an annual 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge must be spent on three areas: open space, historical preservation, and affordable housing. The CPC can use a small percentage of its budget for administrative tasks, such as appraisals. The Harborview upgrades fall under the affordable housing category.

With the surcharge the town raises about $230,000 a year and with an anticipated 100 percent state match, the Community Preservation Fund revenues total about $460,000 annually. Left over money can be banked for future years.

The fund has $162,000 available in fiscal year 2005 which is what was left after CPA projects — including Harborview — were approved at the annual Town Meeting in March.

Wastewater committee drafts plan for the future

Pinpoints areas of most concern

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There has been a great deal of attention paid to the land in town which could possibly one day be the site of large housing developments. Their potential to add to the wastewater problems has been discussed at length. But that land is not the only land which is currently undeveloped, and the smaller parcels could have just as much potential to affect wastewater in the future.

During the past 18 months, the Wastewater Committee has been operating under the radar screen, quietly compiling information from years of reports and studies on the townís wastewater. Its members, including Steve Bobo, John Cavanaro, Joseph Godzik, Jim Dedes, Jeff Moy, Ann Swanborg, Vicky Neaves, and Raymond Kasperowicz, have been compiling a draft report for managing the townís wastewater, which Bobo says is currently 85 percent complete. The committee is looking at the townís wastewater problems from every angle, and members are assessing whether current open parcels could one day serve as possible solutions to the townís wastewater problems, or potentially add to them.

The draft report says homes in the Ledgewood Drive and Brewster Road areas have poor soils, and that wastewater problems have been a big burden for homeowners. There are an additional 62 homes in the Beechwood area, which have failed septic systems, and numerous other older systems that should be upgraded because of their proximity to Lily Pond, the townís drinking water supply. The town is also under a mandate from the Department of Environmental Protection to reduce pollution entering Little Harbor, and there are roughly 130 homes in the Little Harbor area for which a wastewater solution must be found.

The plan must address the existing and future wastewater collection, treatment, and disposal needs for the town.

In addition to the existing problems, between AvalonBay, with its proposed 200 units of housing, Cedarmere with 105, and the Cook Estate with 95, the town could potentially usher in 400 units of housing which would all need a wastewater solution. Although the town is trying to meet the 10 percent affordable housing threshold set by the state, and any of the three projects would help meet that goal, the town may have trouble accommodating them from a wastewater standpoint.

In addition, Ellen Morrissey, 488 Jerusalem Road, has been trying to develop her land located off Beach Street for roughly the past 10 years. The last set of plans she presented to the Planning Board included 61 units of senior housing, but plans were denied because the board said they lacked basic fundamental aspects, such as access to the property and through the property. Morrissey could come back with modified plans at any point in the future.

But the undeveloped parcels with no current plans could provide the town with some wastewater alternatives, including the potential for satellite systems. The draft report says there have been rumors that the Vedanta Center, located at 130 Beechwood St., is or will be for sale. There are 37 acres of land north of Route 3A which are also undeveloped. There are undeveloped acres on Whitney Woods Lane, and the Jerusalem Road Estates have yet to be built. There are also 13 open lots on Beechwood Street, and there is open property on Doane Street.

The Wastewater Committee has been charged with developing an equitable, cost-effective, and environmentally acceptable plan for both sewer and off site systems, which will span the next 20-30 years. The plan must address the existing and future wastewater collection, treatment, and disposal needs for the town. Wastewater management includes wastewater treatment, wastewater collection systems, septic systems, and their interaction with the natural environment.

Throughout the next few weeks, the committee will be revising its draft report, which will be discussed at the committeeís Sept. 1 meeting. The committee hopes to make a presentation to the Board of Selectmen sometime in September.

Changes brewing at Olympic Citgo station

filed a petition for a special permit Aug. 16, which if approved by the Zoning Board of Appeals, would allow the changes. The Planning Board, which will have to approve a site plan for the project, was slated to take up the issue at its meeting last night (Wednesday Aug. 25) after the Mariner went to press. The ZBA will hold its public hearing on the matter on Tuesday, Sept. 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Roukounakis said he would continue to operate out of the left side of the building, but the garage where he currently works on cars would be transformed into the new Tedeschi's. The donut shop would be located in the rear of the building.

The queue for the drive-through would be on the right side of the building and curve around the back. Roukounakis said there could possibly be room for between nine and 11 cars to queue up in the parking lot. There would be parking in front of the building. Roukounakis said aesthetic improvements would be made as well, including a new awning across the front of the building.

However, Roukounakis is quick to point out, "The plans are not concrete," as the ZBA and Planning Board will ultimately decide whether the project will go forward. However, in the event Tedeschi's does move across the street, the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, which owns the building housing the bank and Tedeschi's, may choose to expand its operation.

Plans also include a drive-through donut shop, possibly a Dunkin' Donuts, which would have a third owner.

Pilgrim Cooperative Bank President Frank Campbell said until the Planning Board and ZBA have weighed in on the proposed plans, future plans will only be speculation. However, he said it would be possible for the bank to expand, or take on another tenant. "That's something we'll have to discuss once we have a definitive decision from the town," he said. Whatever the outcome, Campbell said having Tedeschi's in the Village no matter which side of the street it is on, is a benefit for all businesses because it is such a huge draw. If plans are approved, "I think it's going to be a great thing for the Village," he said, adding if they're not, the bank intends to have Tedeschi's as its tenant for a "long, long time."

Town Planner Liz Harrington said the plans for the Citgo site are very similar to proposed plans for the KoKo Island and Hair Affair site off Route 3A. Proposed plans for that site would transform the current Hair Affair building into a Dunkin' Donuts with a drive-through window, and turn KoKo Island into another family-style restaurant.

However, many abutters to the 3A site said the drive-through window will cause excess traffic, noise, and air pollution. In light of those complaints as well as a thorough review of the plans, the Planning Board recommended the ZBA not approve the special permit for the site which would have made the drive-through window possible.

Applications are public records and are available in the Town Clerk's office. The ZBA will hold its public hearing on Tedeschi's and Olympic Citgo Tuesday, Sept. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

George Roukounakis' Olympic Citgo may soon include a Tedeschi's convenience store and Dunkin' Donuts with a drive-through.

always be a person to answer questions on the other end. Any call can be directed to Carroll at any time, day or night. "If I go away, I leave the number at the hotel where I'll be staying," he said.

When a call comes in on the hotline, Carroll is immediately notified on his pager, which tells him who called, the number, and what the issue is. If it is after 8 p.m. Carroll will receive a call at his home to make sure he has received the message. After 11 p.m. the caller is asked whether Carroll can call them back in the morning, if not, Carroll will be notified at home in the middle of the night, and he said he is always happy to answer any questions. While he said being so available can get crazy at times, he understands the importance of responding to questions in a timely fashion, and he treats every call very seriously. "Think about what would have had to go on in your day to stop and pick up a phone and call a hotline," he said.

Every call that comes in on the hotline is documented an d Carroll said he has the ability to segregate phone calls by town or issue, enabling him to keep a better watch over the projects. Carroll said the day after a call is made, he faxes a copy of the outreach status report to Town Hall, which outlines the concern of the resident, any action taken, and other information, to make sure the town can keep track of what has been addressed.

While Carroll said many times once construction begins in a town, the residents become used to having the contractors around and will ask them questions as they become friendly faces, having the calls documented through the hotline gives him the avenue to make sure the problem is fixed quickly.

"An answer is only a phone call away."
— Tom Carroll

In addition to the hotline, Cohasset residents can sign up for e-mail updates at the Cashman site at www.cbbgreenbush.com. The Web site is updated weekly. While Carroll said mainly abutters to the project have been signing up, anyone who is interested can have their name added to the list. "We have just under 700 on our e-mail list," Carroll said.

Every Greenbush town also has the option to participate in cable access programs. Currently, towns have the option to participate in a cable access show every two weeks, and programs have taken off in Hingham and Scituate. "The towns run the shows themselves," said Carroll, adding the individual town ombudsman usually host the program. "In Cohasset, I may do it myself," if necessary, as a future ombudsman position has yet to be decided upon.

Carroll said the programs give an informational update on neighboring towns where construction is in progress for the first roughly five to 10 minutes, and from there, the focus changes to cover the local issues. "I want to get something going like that in Cohasset," he said.

In addition to the cable show, towns have the option to have updates on a rolling screen on the local cable access channels.

Towns can schedule meetings with the MBTA whenever it would like to have an update on progress, and Carroll can make that happen. Carroll will also be providing updates to local papers to make sure residents have many ways of accessing information. Carroll has plans to send out mass mailings as well as drop letters to neighborhoods prior to construction, to let residents know what they should expect.

Although only a few minor construction projects have begun in Cohasset, Carroll said he has been corresponding with both town officials and residents about the project for some time. Carroll said he knew it was time to begin steady outreach efforts when he received word from the construction employees, who said they might be ready to take on Cohasset soon. "There's coordination that needs to take place with the town," said Carroll, and the communication will need to be ongoing throughout the duration of the project.

Plans to reconstruct the 17-mile Greenbush line have been in the works for 20 years, and have been surrounded in much controversy. The Greenbush Line is the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project, and is being built as mitigation for the Central Artery/Tunnel Project in downtown Boston. The project is intended to reduce automobile traffic on the congested highways leading into the city. By diverting South Shore commuter traffic from automobiles to transit, the MBTA says it will not only help keep the roads clear, reduce fuel consumption and air pollution, but will encourage more transit-oriented development and alleviate congestion on other transportation facilities in the area - including the Braintree Red Line. According to the MBTA, the project will cost roughly $479 million including planning, engineering, land and permitting costs, along with the cost of construction and new trains.

Contacting the MBTA

For general information, please visit the MBTA's Web site at www.mbta.com, or the Cashman Balfour Beatty Greenbush site at www.cbbgreenbush.com.

- For questions or concerns regarding construction activities or to see plans, please call the Greenbush hotline at (781) 682-6350.
- For questions or concerns about the trains after construction is complete, please write, call, or e-mail the MBTA's commuter rail chief under the MBTA's "Write to the Top" program. From the MBTA Web site, click on "Contact Us," then "Write to the Top," for current contact information.
- To report an emergency situation such as children playing on the tracks, or to report vandalism, call 911. Local police and fire departments will contact the MBTA as required. The MBTA police can be contacted during an emergency at (617) 222-1212.

including one large arch-topped window above the stainless steel range. There are large cabinets with glass panels and detailed dental molding, chandeliers hanging from the high ceilings, and abundant counter space for easy entertaining. With its sprawling angular design, the kitchen is anything but ordinary, and has proved to be a wonderful combination of beauty and function, for this very busy family of five.

Every year, designers from all over the country submit their designs for the competition, and this year Cameron Snyder of Kitchen Concepts in Norwell chose the Avilas' kitchen to submit in the large kitchen category. Snyder had worked closely with the couple to bring their vision to life, and Debbie said the work he has been able to do has been amazing. "This was such an awkward space," she said, but with Snyder's help, the kitchen has become very functional. "It was exactly what I wanted."

Debbie said there were a few different ideas she had for the kitchen, and knew there were specific design elements she wanted to incorporate, although she wasn't sure about a complete design concept for the entire kitchen. She knew she wanted the feet for her cabinets to look like furniture, and she had other similar crowning details in mind, and Snyder came back with a design plan that was everything she had hoped for and more. "If you really want a custom kitchen, they can literally do anything," at Kitchen Concepts, she said.

Debbie said she chose the colors for the room as well as the counters, after much of the design work was done. Art did much of the kitchen installation himself. "It was a huge joint effort with everyone and everyone did such a good job," she said.

Designers are responsible for submitting competition entries, and entries must be unpublished subjects at the time of the competition. The award is given based on the room's visual appeal, the creativity, the presentation, as well as safety and functionality. Debbie said Snyder approached the couple and, "asked us if we'd mind," and when the two gave the go-ahead, it got the ball rolling to begin compiling the entry. Debbie said it took one day for a crew to come in and photograph the kitchen, to enable Snyder to send the best photos possible, and from then, all they could do was wait to hear.

When Snyder received word the kitchen had won first place, he took Debbie and Art to dinner to surprise them with the news. Snyder traveled to Chicago to accept his plaque for the competition, as well as a second award, as he also won honorable mention in the medium kitchen category for an apartment in Marina Bay in Quincy.

Having an award-winning kitchen is the icing on the cake for the Avilas, who are especially proud of their home because Art built it himself. The two purchased the empty lot where their house now sits, and lived through the 17-month transformation, watching the house take shape from the ground up. The couple had always wanted to live in Cohasset, partially for the small town charm and beautiful vistas, but also for the school systems, and Debbie found the parcel of land by accident. In search of the Golden Rooster restaurant (now the River Club), Debbie was driving down Border Street and decided to keep exploring past her destination. She passed the open lot and soon came to find the road ended up at the Atlantica restaurant. She wondered if the land was in Cohasset or Scituate, and turned around to take another look. She called her real estate agent later that afternoon, and to her surprise, the land was in Cohasset

The couple hired an architect to help with the blueprints, designing the home to help them make the most of their views of the harbor and ocean, and Art used his skills as a professional builder to bring the drawings to life. When the walls were up, Art added many architectural elements to the home, including arches, built-in window seats and built in entertainment system and book cases. While the inside of the house is mostly complete today, Debbie said there are still some small items that need to be done, which Art will take care of when the winter weather brings him inside. But for now, while the weather is still warm, Art is concentrating on making the outside of the home and its grounds, just as beautiful as the inside. "He does it all," said Debbie.

Artist exhibit

South Shore Art Center Gallery artist, Ted Polomis, presents an exhibition of oil paintings at the library until August 30. The show features a variety of intimate still life and studies painted in the tradition of classical realism.

Upcoming exhibit

Landscape paintings of Lisa Marder will be on display at the library from Sept. 10 until the end of October. There will be an opening reception for the exhibit on Sept. 19 from 5-7:00 p.m.

Congratulations

Congratulations to all the summer reading program participants. We had over 350 students register for the statewide summer reading program entitled "explore other worlds @ your library". Participants who have successfully reached their personal goal of reading everyday will receive a tee shirt with the summer reading logo on it. Congratulate all children you see wearing this tee shirt! Please pick up tee shirts before Sept. 1, as Mrs. Moody will be going on vacation.

Thank you

Thank you to Marjie Murphy, the Children's Global Discovery Museum (for generously allowing us to use their space), the families, and all the staff of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for making "explore other worlds @ your library" a huge success. More than 1,700 people participated in Drop-In Story, Puzzle Club, Tuesday Evening Family Night, and Story and Craft.

Many thanks to the Friends of the Library for funding the summer reading program. Their continued generous support allows us to begin to plan for "going places @ your library", the summer 2005 theme. Thanks again to everyone involved in "explore other worlds @ your library".

Lost and found

Please check the lost and found basket and coat hooks to the left of Mrs. Moody's desk for any items left in the Children's Room during the summer. The items will be discarded at the end of the month.

Free screenings at the health fair

The Cohasset Board of Health will offer free health screenings to the residents of Cohasset at the Annual Health Fair on Tuesday Sept. 14 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church next to the Cohasset Town Hall in Cohasset Village.

Screenings will include blood pressure, vision and hearing, cholesterol and blood sugar (funded by the Cohasset and Scituate Rotary Clubs and the Hull Lions Club), oral cancer, osteoporosis (bone mineral density) chiropractic and skin analyzer. There will be demonstrations of magnet and massage therapy, holistic health methods including acupuncture, nutrition and water purification methods.

Refreshments will be available and will be provided by Stop and Shop, Dunkin Donuts and Atlantic Bagel. For more information contact Judy Fitzsimmons, RN, public health nurse at the Cohasset Board of Health 781-383-2210.

Legion clambake supports scholarship

The George H. Mealy Post 118 of the American Legion will sponsor its 22nd annual Christine Burke Scholarship Fund Clambake on Saturday, Sept. 11, from noon to sunset at Sandy Beach. Proceeds from the event will once again benefit worthy graduating South Shore High School students seeking higher education.

There will be a traditional New England Clambake Catered by Gulf River Clambakes, featuring lobster, steamed clams, chowder, barbecued chicken, your favorite beverages and more This year's event will also include live entertainment by The Irish Volunteers and DJ Jay Flori. The American Legion Auxiliary "Play Ladies" will have games and activities for the kids. Tickets are $35 for adults. Children not eating the clambake are free and there will be plenty of complimentary hot dogs and watermelon.

There will also be a raffle drawing at the clambake for, the winner's choice, of two Vespa Motor Scooters with a trailer or $5,000. The motor scooters and trailer were donated by Herb Chambers Vespa of Boston and local businessman Neil Murphy. The chances are $10 each and only 1,000 chances will be sold.

Gridiron Club supports team with Football Book

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

FOOTBALL BOOK

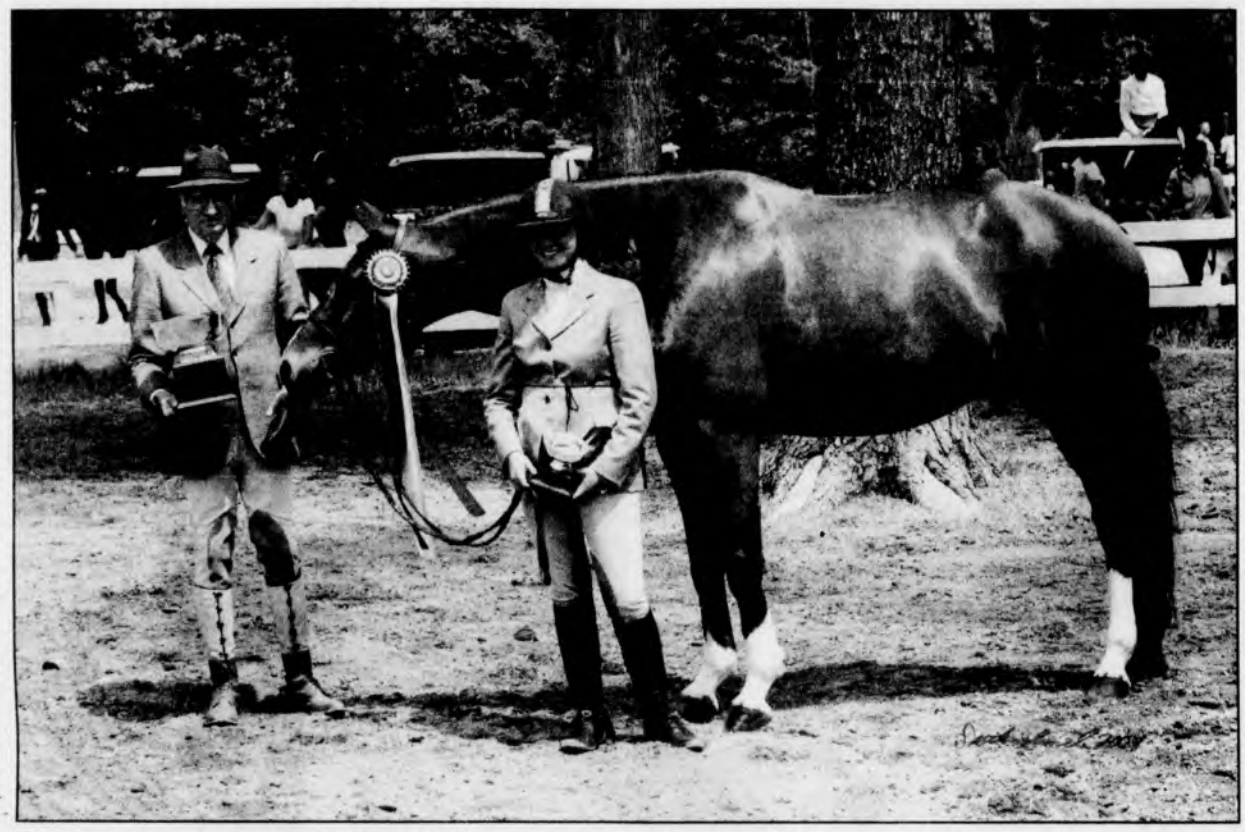
The Gridiron Club is accepting ads for its 2004 Football Book. New ads can be called in to Alan and Linda Snowdale, 781-383-9131. The Football Book Drive is the major fundraiser for the Gridiron Club. The Club provides scholarships and support for the Cohasset High School football program from the proceeds of the Book Drive. Football players deliver the books to most homes and many businesses in town in November.

EQUESTRIENNE UPDATE

When CHS graduate Sarah Lambert, starts her freshmen year at Hobart William Smith next week she leaves behind two childhood communities — Cohasset and River Wind Farm.

The Lambert-Trachtenberg family moved to Cohasset 10 years ago and as soon as they unpacked Sarah started to ride at River Wind Farm. Sarah expressed an interest in horses at a young age and has approached the sport with passion and dedication.

At the age of 11, Sarah started competing at local shows in the short stirrup division. Last year, Sarah and her horse, Teddy Bear, were USA Horse of the Year, Zone 1 Champion: Junior Hunter — Large 16-17. This summer Sarah and Teddy qualified to compete at the National Indoor Finals in Pennsylvania, Washington, D.C., and New York City. At the finals this fall, Sarah will compete against the top equestrians in the country.



The trainers that taught Sarah to ride, Carl Catani and Cohasset — native Abby Greer, will be by her side this fall along with many friends from the barn.

Carl opened River Wind Farm 30 years ago and he has watched many of his students grow up and then return to the barn after college.

COLLEGE GRAD

Catherine LeBlanc, daughter of Mary Ann and Dana Cushing of Cohasset and Paul LeBlanc of Beverly Farms, completed her bachelor of science degree in management with a concentration in marketing from UMASS Boston in July.

She is now an account coordinator with PR Newswire in Boston. Congratulations, Cat on both achievements!

ART COURSE FOR TEENS

The South Shore Art Center is offering several classes that will be of special interest to teenagers. The fall course lineup includes High School Studio —2D & 3D Projects. This course is designed for high school students considering pursuing an art career or including a portfolio with their school admissions packet.

A variety of assignments will be completed in both two and three dimensional media, including pencil, colored pencil, charcoal, watercolor, pastel and ceramics. Assignments will be focused on observational drawing, portrait, and sculpture required for portfolios. The course allows high school artists the opportunity to enhance and supplement artwork to be used for admission to art school or college.

Teen Printmaking Workshop will explore printmaking applications. Students will learn methods and techniques. There will be individual guidance as well as a group demonstration and discussions. Emphasis will be on developing the student's own expressive style and building his/her portfolio. This workshop will meet on the weekend enabling busy high school students to participate. For information about these classes or other autumn offerings at the South Shore Art Center call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org

WELCOME BACK

Welcome back to Cohasset, Rebecca Dickinson! Rebecca journeyed to Australia as a People to People Student Ambassador along with 41 other fifth and sixth graders from Massachusetts. Highlights included visiting the Sydney Opera House, swimming at the Sydney Aquatic Centre, bush-walking at the Kroombit Farm Stay, spotting wildlife at Whitsunday Island, snorkeling the Great Barrier Reef, exploring the Capricorn Caves and attending Our Lady of the Assumption School where she spent the day attending classes, lunch, tea-time, and of course, recess.

People to People was started in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to improve relations between students of the United States and students of Russia. Since then, the program has expanded its reach to other countries. It has become an opportunity for U.S. students to share their culture and experience with people of other countries.

'NUNSENSE' AUDITIONS

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be holding auditions for the play "Nunsense" at Cohasset Town Hall on Aug. 30 & 31 at 7 p.m. Call backs are on Sept. 1 at 7 p.m. The production will take place on: Nov. 12-13-14 & 19-20-21 with a possible benefit performance to be held on Wednesday, Nov. 17. Please call Jean D at 617-750-8987.

Rebecca Dickinson is back from Australia where she was a People to People Student Ambassador.

SCHOOL CLOTHES

Send the little ones to school in style! There will be a "Back to School" trunk show of clothes from nicknackpattywack at the Our World Children's Museum Aug. 27 from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. and Aug. 28 from 9 a.m-3 p.m. Many of the nifty separates for kids ages 1 to 10 were designed by Cohasset's own Karen Oronte, who is sponsoring the show. The prices will be an unbelievable $5-$25 per item and proceeds will benefit the Museum. Clothes will be displayed in the Museum's lower level at 100 Sohier St.

That is all for this week. Send me in all of your news, photos and event information no later than Mondays by 5 p.m.

OPEN HOUSE

From left, Jim Sandell, Werner Diekmann, Stuart Ivimey, and Tom Gruber cut the ribbon to officially open the two apartments at the Pratt Building on Sunday. The apartments will provide affordable housing for people over 55.

A crowd heads for a tour of the two new apartments in the Paul Pratt Building which is now the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society. With Town Meeting approval, the town's Community Preservation Fund provided the money to build the apartments.

An open letter to residents

The Cohasset Police Department wants to improve how we work with our community. To do so we need your help. Please take the time to complete the survey on page 12. Please attach a sheet of paper with any additional comments you may have.

This information will help guide the police department in developing strategies to provide the public safety services our town both wants and deserves. After completion, please return the survey to the Cohasset Police Department on Elm Street by Sept. 24.

Thank you in advance for participating in this survey. We look forward to working with you to ensure our community is safe for everyone. If you have any questions about the survey, feel free to contact me at 781-383-1055.

Copies of the survey are also available at Town Hall, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the Senior Center, and at the police station. Copies may also be downloaded from the CPD Web site at: www.cohassetpolice.com.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

St. Stephen's sidewalk upgrades

This letter was sent to the Selectmen and the Downtown Revitalization Review Committee. A copy was also provided to the Mariner for publication.

TO THE EDITOR:

You're all intelligent people. You all have abilities, thoughts, ideas and suggestions that contribute to your value to these two groups as well as the Town. You are all in the positions to be decision makers — to use your judgement regarding various aspects of the revitalization of the Village. And yet you insist on including in the plans the sidewalk beneath the Episcopal Church. You all know deep down in your minds that this was a mistake — is a mistake. It grew like paths turn into roadways then highways but in this case it grew in the wrong place.

All of you should experience this "sidewalk" in use — see the near hits that occur. All of you should visit that area and watch. I don't mean at midnight or other off peak times. I mean during a normal weekday — and you'll see near hits. And sometimes you'll see a hit and you're going to be very unhappy when you do.

If my information is correct this area will be cut back five feet from the existing roadway. This means some cutting back of the Episcopal Church steps. This also means some cutting back of the entrance to the new store the Wild Plum.

There was $169,000 allotted to this sidewalk about seven years ago. Inflation (10 percent) will have changed that total to about $185,900. Now add the fund needed to cut back the church steps and the entrance to the Wild Plum. These figures are unknown. Let's use a figure of $50,000 to cover them. The total now for the unnecessary and dangerous sidewalk is now $235,900. And the other figures that are unknown are those for lawsuits from the individual(s) that will be killed or injured on that sidewalk.

Easy answer - return the $169,000 to the State — cancel that part of the project. Save yourselves and the residents $66,900 and sleep at night.

The pedestrians who would use the unnecessary and dangerous sidewalk now are directed across the street at the Wild Plum and at the Episcopal steps. There is a safe sidewalk there already.

Rekindling a capacity for wonder and delight

COMMON GROUND

AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

We are the music makers,
And we are the dreamers of dreams,
Wandering by the lonely sea-breakers,
And sitting by desolate streams.

— Arthur O'Shaughnessy

Not long ago, I was reminded of how often we take for granted the small — dare I say, common — events that unfold every day out there in the natural world.

I have a friend, Andrea, whom I met last fall when I enrolled in the tin whistle class she was teaching at the Irish Cultural Center in Canton. I don't think that she would mind my now presuming a friendship, even though we first got to know each other in a teacher/student capacity. She fulfilled one of my deepest desires (my secret is out!), that being to learn to play the tin whistle. A simple instrument in terms of its construction — it is little more than a piece of rolled metal with six holes and a mouthpiece — the whistle is as common as it is simple, played by young and old alike all over Ireland. Simplicity, though, can be deceiving. In the hands of someone like Andrea, the whistle can make hauntingly, mysteriously beautiful and layered music that evokes deep and heartfelt emotion.

Perhaps because of its association with the ancient Irish landscape, whenever I hear it played the whistle speaks to me of nature, the rhythms of swirling wind and seeping mist, breaking waves, sweet bird song and the whispering, primal Earth. And, like the whistle nature, too, can be deceptively simple, so available that we take for granted its capacity to touch something deep within us, to rekindle our wonder and delight.

And so it happened that I was standing in my driveway one evening with Andrea after returning home from a concert. In the diffused glow of my garage lights and a nearby street light, the arched and crooked branches of the Catalpa at the edge of my driveway gave the tree an eccentric posture, a very different posture from its rather stately daytime incarnation. This year, the tree had an especially profuse bloom with huge trusses of white flowers nearly covering the big, heart-shaped leaves. The flowers, with their very subtle, cloying fragrance are about two inches across, trumpet-shaped and flecked with a yellow and purple spotting that is said to be unique to each blossom, a flower fingerprint if you will. While Andrea and I stood talking, blossoms dropped, one by one, like dollops of wet snow covering a corner of the yard, a scene that Andrea described as magical. And, indeed it was, especially in the deep stillness and shadowy dark of the late hour.

It is not often enough that we are still and quiet, that we let nature's magic show itself. Though I am outside all day, working in the yard, I am always moving from one task to another, trying to get the yard just right, but rarely taking the time to enjoy the yard and its many small events. But every summer, it seems, there is a moment that reminds me to be still and quiet, to notice things. This year's moment was that night under the Catalpa tree and since then I have tried to make time every day to enjoy the swirl of perfumes, the visitors to the yard and the unseen voices tucked away in the trees.

From out front comes a delicious fragrance, ghostlike in the way it invisibly wraps around the yard and tickles the nostrils. The haunting perfume is from the Basswood tree, swarming with bees that will turn the flowers' nectar into honey. Nearby is a mulberry tree, a Red mulberry I think, that was a gift from the birds that dropped a seed some years ago and are now enjoying the fruits of their labor. Like the profusion of blossoms on my Catalpa, my mulberry has had its own profusion — of juicy purple, blackberry-like fruits — that has become a natural feeder for the songbirds. The fruits of the mulberry are unusual in that they ripen over the span of several weeks, not all at once as many fruits do. Despite the variety of goodies that I set out for the birds, never have I had the kind of activity that I have had this summer in the mulberry. Red squirrels and chipmunks have joined the festivities, scooting across the stone wall and up and down the tree trunk. Branches quiver with Baltimore orioles and cardinals — both the dashing males and the more demure females — with Red-bellied woodpeckers and catbirds that pluck the berries and wing away to their nests. I quietly approach the tree to get a closer look and the flock explodes in a frenzy from behind the leaves. Why do they fear me and not my cat, sitting under the tree watching their every move? Can they know he is not a threat, that he has reached the age where he is no longer a predator, only a spectator?

One pair of catbirds, nesting on the other side of my yard, was the first to discover the banquet. I've watched them all summer making their round trips, berry in beak as they plunge into the tangle of thorns that is protecting their nest. The male has stood guard all summer, chasing off the gang of sparrows that had always made claim to the shrub. The Orioles and woodpeckers grab their berries and fly away into the neighbors' yards. Come the fall, when the trees drop their leaves, I'll look for their nests where they are living their mysterious lives, all but invisible to us humans.

A year ago, fulfilling another long-time wish, we had a gazebo built at the back of the yard, at the edge of the woods, a perfect spot from which to take in the garden activity. A Ruby-throated hummingbird has found my feeder. This is the only species of hummingbird that visits the East coast and I last saw one four or five years ago when the little jewel flitted back and forth through the stream of my hose. I thought it was a big bug until I realized it was a hummingbird, the only bird that can fly backwards. The sight of it left me transfixed, then, and still does now every time she visits, beating her tiny wings dozens of times each second, hovering with her needle-like bill in the nectar. I watch her land on a branch overhead and I hope that that is where she has decided to build her tiny nest, no bigger than half a walnut, woven of plant fibers and lined with spider silk. But, her repose is momentary and she flits away.

The Mourning doves scratch around under the feeders for the seed spilled by sparrows. One bird seems especially content to just sit. Thinking it injured, I approach and it allows me to get close enough to see its delicate turquoise orbital ring and neck iridescence. The goldfinches vie for a perch on the thistle feeder, bouncing off over the air after they've had their feed. A red-tailed hawk circles overhead and a Blue jay swoops in to grab the peanuts I've scattered on the ground, scattering all the other birds with its aggressive entrance.

An Eastern chipmunk has made its home under the gazebo and I see it scurrying back and forth from the birdfeeders, its cheek pouches stuffed with seeds and corn kernels. Chipmunks, those cute, colorful, friendly members of the squirrel family, have been everywhere this summer, thanks to a bounty of acorns last fall that enabled the population to survive the harsh winter. I imagine the chipmunk's underground den, turned winter bunker, piled with the eight pounds of food that the little fellow will collect before it hunkers down for a partial hibernation.

As twilight spreads, the bats emerge to perform their aerial maneuvers. A firefly twinkles in the woods, answered by the first star in the night sky.

Tomorrow will bring much of the same, as will the next day and the day after that and little that comes through the yard will be unusual. In fact, most of the goings-on are, dare I say, quite common. There's always the chance that something extraordinary and unusual will find it's way into the yard, but it would be a mistake to think that it would be any more mysterious or magical than the simple, everyday events — the flash of the cardinal's red, the whine of the dog day cicada, the flutter of a Viceroy butterfly, the perfume of a rose blossom — in which nature's elegance and eloquence are so poetically expressed.

I think that's why I like the tin whistle whose simplicity so eloquently interprets the mysteries of nature, her melancholy and joy, her harmony and dissonance, all the happenings from dawn to dark that we too often take for granted.

Fertilizer, pesticides at root of pollution

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Storm water, or really surface water runoff, is normally a healthy way for nature to "wash up" our land areas. The problem comes when we inadvertently introduce too much harmful material for the water to carry away naturally. Storm water of which we have aplenty this summer damages our ecosystem in many ways:

Storms cause physical destruction, but the less visible way is that thousands of tons of pollutants are carried into our streams, ponds and estuaries, by every rainfall, posing health threats, degrading and in some cases creating dead water bodies like the dead zone in the Gulf of Mexico which is caused by fertilizer runoff from farming. It takes a much smaller introduction of chemicals to kill our sensitive smaller water bodies. Harmful lawn care practices are a fairly recent development; arriving with the advent of phosphate mining for farming and the intensive marketing of fertilizers. You might say that purveyors of turf builders and weed controllers have the same effect on our lawns as fast food establishments and Coollata vendors have on our overweight population.

The mantra of the so-called "perfect lawn" has damaged our environment and changed our way of life...

The mantra of the so-called "perfect lawn" has damaged our environment and changed our way of life — a process which will continue for decades until we somehow wake up and recognize what has happened.

• It took Rachel Carson to warn us about DDT, and repair to the environment took about 20 years.

• Musquashicutt and Straits Pond have had midges for decades, and it took until this year for us to recognize that increasing salt water flushing will control the midges.

Other danger signs are all around us:

• Shellfish beds closed.

• Bassing Beach and Cohasset Cove closed to swimming for much of the summer.

• Changes in water flow in upper Little Harbor causing nearly three months of green algae instead of a few weeks in June.

• Flow from Mealys Pond, a former ice pond (when we all had ice boxes) on Beechwood Street into a fetid algae covered swamp.

• Pegram's Brook taking all the algae nutrients from Mealy's and spreading them into the Gulf River.

• The findings from the Center for Student Coastal Research that there are several "hot spots" of enterococci from point sources

Revisionist Olympic history — bet you didn't know

DISPATCH FROM ATHENS

MIKE ELLIS

The origins of the ancient Olympic games are linked with many myths. So too are the origins of the modern Olympic games. Myth, and a variety of body parts!

French Baron Pierre de Coubertin has been generally credited with reviving the pagan festival and founding the International Olympic Committee (IOC) to protect the valuable franchise. On his death, his heart was plucked from his body and buried in Ancient Olympia.

True, de Coubertin was the heart and soul behind the 1896 games, But what the IOC doesn't mention — and still refuses to acknowledge — is that the brains behind the modern Olympic games were buried in the cornerstone of his namesake building well before the Frenchman was even born.

In this case, it was the freedom fighter Evangelis Zappas, who provided both the drive and the drachmas. Zappas made a fortune in the Romanian distillery business following the War of Independence (1821) with the Ottoman Turks. In Romania, Zappas corresponded with other Greek patriots about the possibility of staging a modern Olympic games to restore the brilliance of the ancient days, and bolster the morale of a country emerging from a 400-year occupation.

Zappas later returned to Greece a wealthy man, and immediately put his plan into action with the fledgling Greek government. With Zappas footing the bill, the first modern Olympics were staged in the Greek capital in 1859, featuring familiar events such as the 200-meter sprint alongside less orthodox sports such as "bladdering" in which athletes leapt six times over a wine skin. Athens hosted three more successful games from 1870 to 1889, all of which included competitions in music, drama and poetry as it had been in ancient times.

Zappas' work, however, was successfully expunged from the Olympic record by the Baron de Coubertin in his 12,000-page "Memoires Olympiques," crediting himself as the sole architect. Only recently, academics have uncovered the documents and personal histories which detailed Zappas' contributions. Although the IOC won't deny the veracity of the facts, they maintain that de Coubertin's legacy is of primary importance.

For his part, Zappas' Olympic legacy includes the Zappion Hall — one of Athens' centerpieces built for gymnastics in 1873 and still in use today. Upon his death, and according to his wishes, Zappas was decapitated. His head was entoumbed in the Zappion, and the remainder sent to the village of his birth. His ghost is now a spectator at the homecoming of the Athens' games.

Mike Ellis migrated west to Colorado soon after graduating from CHS in 1982. He is providing weekly updates for us during the Olympics.

Gold medal for lobster-eating

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where Sonya Thomas of Alexandria, Va., has won the gold medal in lobster-eating.

No, not in the Olympic Games in Athens, silly, but in the World Lobster Eating Games in Kennebunk, Maine.

Sonya, who weighs in at 105 pounds, put away 38 lobsters or 9.76 pounds of meat in 12 minutes while the silver medalist, Jason "Crazy Legs" Conti of Boston, could only down 7.65.

The last time I saw that much lobster it was on the menu at the Hearth and Kettle and there were no figures after it, only the ominous notation "Market Value," which means we won't tell you how much it was until after you eat it.

And to think the Pilgrims used to look at lobsters the way we look at dogfish and feed them to the hogs.

And to think the Pilgrims used to look at lobsters the way we look at dogfish and feed them to the hogs.

Anyhow, Sonya won $500 in cash money and a championship belt known as "The Claw" for her efforts at the lobster table and the Associated Press thought enough of her fete to devote eight paragraphs to it on a busy news day.

That reminds me of all the publicity that little (120 pounds soaking wet) Japanese boy got when he won the annual hot dog eating contest at Nathan's on Coney Island for the third or fourth time.

I recall that a couple of years ago Boston sent former Bruin Lyndon Byers to New York to represent us in the Nathan's eat-in and he returned soundly trounced by the same small Japanese eating machine.

Lyndon weighed in at about 220 pounds when he was playing for the Bruins and if you've seen him lately you'd think he has been practicing for a rematch ever since.

But I digress . . .

It is interesting to note that Thomas, the lobster queen, also holds the record for eating hard-boiled eggs and Ed "Cookie" Jarvis of New York, who finished fourth behind Thomas in the lobsterfest, claims the world's record for eating corned beef and cabbage.

Is there a tour for professional eaters to show off their talents like the one the PGA has for professional golfers?

What is there about eating that so excites Americans that they hardly have time to take up the latest diet that promises them they can eat all they want and still lose enough weight to get into last summer's bathing suit?

I'm a great Sopranos fan. Have you noticed that when Tony is not whacking out somebody, he's eating? And when Carmella is not yelling at Tony, she's cooking?

I'm also a Robert Parker fan. How many times has Spenser put his detecting aside to whip up from scratch in his gourmet kitchen a delicious coq au vin for Susan Silverman?

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth, the best eating contests were for small boys on Memorial Day, the Fourth of July and Labor Day when a blueberry pie was placed in front of them and they had to eat it with no hands.

Cohasset Harbor study raises new questions

CSCR REPORT

RYAN DAVIS

Further compounding the analysis is the proximity of the entrance to James Brook, which, as of yet, has not been tested by the CSCR for bacteriological agents.

As part of the CSCR's ongoing effort to ascertain the health of Cohasset Harbor, a team of students has collected data on the enterococci bacteria levels therein. These students have concluded that their data represent a significant improvement in water quality.

In Massachusetts, a body of water is deemed safe by the Department of Public Health for bathing based on the geometric mean of the enterococci colonies per 100-mL sample over a 30-day period. The current standard is either an average of 35 colonies per 100 mL for a representative sampling or 104 for any individual sampling date. The CSCR group, comprised of Caren Garber, Kara Wilcox, and Lara Novak, has been sampling since the beginning of July and thinks that its findings elucidate several trends regarding rainfall and flushing in the harbor.

At two inner harbor sites, the lobstermen's pier by Gulf Bridge and the Cohasset Sailing Club dock, the average enterococci counts fell below the standard set for safe bathing – 33.17 and 22.36 respectively. However, at the inner harbor third sampling site, the fishermen's pier by Atlantica, an unsafe level was recorded – an average of 43.36 colonies per 100 mL. At a fourth site, near to the mouth of the Gulf River, the highest average was recorded – 44.23 colonies. Given that these averages included data taken after the remnants of Hurricane Charley swept through the area, washing debris and waste into the watershed, it is likely that the average colony counts would have been even lower over a more routine sampling period. This is particularly true for the Gulf River site, which is subject to greater pollution from runoff than the harbor given that its dilution potential is less than that of the harbor.

Jack Buckley, CSCR president, summarized the group's conclusions based on the differences between the Atlantica site and the other two: "[the so-called Atlantica cove] doesn't flush as well as the rest of the harbor." In support of this hypothesis, the group highlighted a glaring trend in their data: the colony count never exceeded 100 at high tide, while at low and mid tides levels rose as high as 2005 colonies, the greatest countable number. If their hypothesis is correct, it could mean that there is not necessarily a point source of pollution entering the harbor – instead, non-point source pollution could be simply accumulating in one section of the harbor that does not get flushed as frequently or as thoroughly. However, Mr. Buckley did acknowledge that more evidence is needed to substantiate the claim that it is not flushed as often.

He also pointed out that the outfall pipe from the Cohasset Wastewater Treatment Plant discharges in the vicinity of the so-called Atlantica cove. Further compounding the analysis is the proximity of the entrance to James Brook, which, as of yet, has not been tested by the CSCR for bacteriological agents.

Richard Nye, the Cohasset Wastewater Treatment Plant operator, strongly decried the notion that the outfall pipe's discharge could be contributing to the elevated levels nearby. He pointed out the plant's rigorous testing of the treated water. He noted that fecal coliform testing is done "consistently three times a week – and [the colony count] is always less than 1 [colony]," also adding that "only a couple times a year [do counts exceed] more than 1 [colony]." He quantified his data by adding that fecal coliform counts roughly correlate to enterococci counts because of UV treatment process for wastewater. UV rays are equally harmful to both species and so low fecal coliform counts should correspond to low enterococci counts.

When pressed for a conclusion based on the CSCR's data, Mr. Nye offered the possibility of James Brook, which has not been tested since he personally collected data before the opening of the new treatment plant. At that time, he measured in James Brook levels of "2000 plus [colonies] of fecal coliform upstream of the treatment plant, and that was before the new sewers went in." (The homologous standard for fecal coliform is 1000 colonies per 100 mL, which "shall be considered a guide requiring additional investigation, survey or special analyses as may be necessary," according to Massachusetts law.)

Further analysis of their data ensures that CSCR students will be busy in the coming days and weeks.

Ryan Davis is a student at the CSCR. He is an upcoming senior at Phillips Academy in Andover and lives in Hingham.

readily identified which are contributing substantial amounts of bacteria into the upper Gulf.

We never think that by heedlessly spreading chemicals and pesticides on our carefully maintained lawns and gardens we are planting next year's problems.

If we think our gardeners and lawn specialists know what they are doing, they do! They are using the easiest and cheapest way to profit from our need for a neat, well managed plot of land around our property; neither the cheapest for the homeowner nor the method with the least damage to the environment.

What to do? Well, there's a group, the Water Resource Protection Committee (WRPC) who are beginning a public outreach program and believe the town needs four things:

- A policy which tells us what experts say is the best option for landowners on turf management.
- Care in selecting professionals, manifested by the WRPC creating and maintaining a listing of lawn care professionals.
- WRPC guidelines on practices by turf management specialists which will be a prerequisite for getting on the WRPC list.
- Local neighborhood groups leading neighborhoods in development of the most appropriate lawn-care methods.

You'll read more of this important committee in the future, but in the meantime, remember the citizens promoting this environmental viewpoint are not fuzzy headed tree huggers, but practical scientists who know about which they speak. Nor do they have an axe to grind; none are developers or in real estate nor interested in selling plant food or any of the other things we are instructed to buy for our "better lifestyle" or revitalization. They just want to preserve the existing beauty of our town for its future generations.

Filing sets stage for water sale to Hingham's Linden Ponds

The Water Commission has filed a Water Management Act permit application and an Interbasin Transfer application, to allow the Commission to sell up to an average of 306,000 gallons of water a day to the Linden Ponds (Erickson Retirement Communities) development in Hingham.

"The Water Commission has signed a contract to sell up to 306,000 gallons. to Linden Ponds over the next 20 years," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission. "This sale of water will provide revenue to help us to continue our aggressive water system improvements program, while not significantly depleting our supply. Cohasset uses about 710,000 gallons of water per day on an annual basis, while the water supply is capable of safely delivering more than 3,000,000 gallons per day."

The Water Management Act permit application is to withdraw an additional 380,000 gallons per day from the Cohasset water supply. The 380,000 gallon figure is the projected amount of water that the Town of Cohasset will need over the next 20 years plus the water to be sold to Erickson. Comments on this application may be submitted until Sept. 30 to the Mass. Department of Environmental Protection Northeast Regional Office, One Winter Street, Boston, MA 02108.

The Interbasin Transfer Act permit is to allow the Cohasset Water Commission to deliver up to 306,000 gallons of water per day from the Cohasset supplies in the South Coastal Watershed to Linden Ponds, in the Weir River Watershed. This application is anticipated to be discussed at the Oct. 14 meeting of the state Water Resources Commission and voted on at their Nov. 14 meeting.

Copies of the applications are available for review at the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, the Town Clerk's office at Town Hall, and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Notice of these applications was published in the Aug. 25 Environmental Monitor, which can be viewed at:

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on three roll calls and local representatives' votes on one roll call from recent sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

INTEREST EARNINGS ON STATE FUNDS (H 4850)

House 134-22, Senate 31-7, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $150,000 in funding for the state treasurer's office for administrative, transactional and research expenses associated with maintaining and increasing the interest earnings on the state's general fund and Rainy Day Fund investments. Override supporters said this funding enhances the research capabilities to help ensure that the state earns the maximum interest possible on its investments. They noted that it also covers administrative expenses that the state incurs when trading its short-term investments. In his veto message, Romney said he vetoed the funding because it is not consistent with his original fiscal 2005 budget recommendation. (A "Yea" vote is for the $150,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $150,000).

DISSECTION OF FROGS IN SCHOOLS (H 1252)

Senate 35-3, approved and Gov. Romney vetoed a bill mandating that the Board of Education establish guidelines requiring all public schools to allow students who do not want to participate in frog or any other dissection in science class, to demonstrate their competency through an alternative method. The measure prohibits requiring a student to watch another student perform the dissection as an alternative method and forbids a teacher from discriminating against any student who chooses not to participate. Supporters of the bill said forcing students to participate in these dissections is unfair and argued that many people are squeamish or have moral, ethical or religious problems with the procedure. They noted there are several alternative technological methods, including computerized dissection, to accomplish the same educational goals for students who object to participation. Some noted that advanced computer software might be an even more effective teaching tool than actual dissection. Some opponents of the bill said that local communities, rather than the state, should have the power to decide whether local students should have the choice to opt out of performing a dissection. They noted that the state curriculum framework already addresses this issue by encouraging schools to allow alternatives to dissection. Others said the bill would send an anti-research message and discourage biomedical research companies from locating in Massachusetts. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill).

LOCAL OPTION OF DISSECTION OF FROGS IN SCHOOLS (H 1252)

Senate 11-27, rejected an amendment to the bill requiring all public schools to allow students who do not want to participate in frog or any other dissection in science class, to demonstrate their competency through an alternative method. The amendment would make the requirement effective in a city or town only if approved by the local school committee. Amendment supporters said this home rule amendment would leave this important educational decision up to local communities and prevent the state from imposing the requirement. Amendment opponents said the amendment guts the bill and would not protect many students who have "weak stomachs" or moral, ethical or religious problems with dissection. (A "Yea" vote is for the local option amendment. A "Nay" vote is against the local option amendment).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

MANDATORY HELMETS (H 1920)- The Senate gave final approval to and sent to Gov. Romney a bill requiring children under 16 to wear a helmet while riding a bicycle or using inline skates, skateboards or scooters on public ways. The measure also applies to passengers under 16. Current law requires only bicyclists under 12 to wear a helmet. The legislation also requires any store that rents or sells the equipment to display a sign informing customers of the new law.

FIRE SAFETY (H 4550)- Gov. Romney signed into law legislation making changes to the state's fire safety laws including increased penalties for violating some provisions of the laws. The legislation requires bars and nightclubs that hold more than 100 people to install a state-approved system of automatic sprinklers and offers a tax depreciation deduction for the costs. It also requires any club with a capacity of less than 100 to install the sprinklers if it is cited for exceeding the occupancy limit twice in one year. Other provisions provide $10 million for a fire fighting equipment grant program for local fire departments and $1.078 million in local grants for student awareness of fire education (SAFE) programs.

DAY CARE PROVIDERS (H 4418)- The House gave final approval to a proposal requiring all licensed day care providers to notify their local fire department in order to be listed in the department's computer and recognized as a day care site in the event of a fire or other crisis. Only final approval by the Senate is necessary prior to the measure going to the governor.

DRIVERS' LICENSES- The Massachusetts Office of Consumer Affairs said that drivers can help prevent identity theft if they stop using their social security numbers as their license numbers. The Registry of Motor Vehicles has for years given drivers the option of being assigned a random "S" number. Consumer Affairs Director Beth Lindstrom said that 46 percent of drivers are still using their social security numbers and noted that this number is the master key that criminals use to steal a person's identity and commit fraud. Beginning in October, drivers who renew their licenses on-line will no longer have the option of using their social security numbers as their license numbers. Only drivers who go in person to a full-service Registry office will have the option to request the use of their social security numbers.

Frisky felines take a summer vacation without permission

October and had always lived indoors. But one Tuesday night, Pumpkin pushed the screen out of his window to freedom. "The girls were away and they didn't know he was missing," Altholtz said.

With many coyote sightings in the area, Altholtz wasn't optimistic about Pumpkin's being returned safely home, especially after talking to some of the neighbors who had reported hearing "unpleasant sounds" outside during the night. However, Altholtz didn't give in to pessimism.

Altholtz hung posters on telephone poles all over the neighborhood, but when his daughters, Maddy, 12 and Cally, 11, were about to come home, he quickly went from pole to pole taking each one down. "I didn't want them to find out about their cat from a poster on a telephone pole," he said.

However, Altholtz told the girls that sometimes cats come home on their own and Pumpkin could make his way home too. "I tried to keep some hope alive," he said.

But gradually Altholtz began to lose hope. He found some fur in the yard, which was not a good sign, and knowing Pumpkin had never been taught to face the great outdoors, the future seemed bleak. "The fact that there are so many coyotes didn't help bolster my confidence," he said.

However, Maddy and Cally didn't want to close the chapter on Pumpkin and wouldn't give up looking for him. The posters went back up in the neighborhood, and stayed up while the family left for a vacation in Georgia.

While on vacation, Lois Hughes, 488 North Main St., called Altholtz on his cell phone to tell him she had found a cat that matched Pumpkin's description. "She had found him on Saturday," after he had left the house Tuesday, and Pumpkin had been out on his own for a few days, Altholtz said. Hughes had kept Pumpkin at her house for roughly two weeks before seeing Pumpkin's poster, and called Altholtz right away.

"I told her we'd be back in a week," and Hughes agreed to cat-sit until they returned.

On the way to retrieve Pumpkin, Altholtz told the girls not to get their hopes up too high because there is always the chance the cat Hughes had wouldn't be Pumpkin. However, Altholtz said after just one look it was plain to see, "It was quite obviously Pumpkin." Although Maddy said Pumpkin looked a little skinnier than he had before he left, he had the same loud purr he always had when the girls picked him up.

Maddy Altholtz, 12, (sitting) and her sister, Cally, 11, are happy Pumpkin is home again.

While the girls were very happy to see their cat again, it was even more special because Pumpkin made it home in time to celebrate his first birthday on Aug. 2. "If we hadn't found him, we would have had to celebrate without him," Altholtz said. But thanks to some help from a kind neighbor, the family was able to celebrate together.

Oliver goes AWOL

On the day Pumpkin was found, Colby Smalzel's cat Oliver left on his summer adventure. "He's an outside cat," said Colby's mother Candy Ford, adding he's very friendly and has been known to visit other animals in the neighborhood. She said he often goes to visit a poodle down the road, and everyone in the neighborhood knows who he is. "He's an extremely friendly cat," which is why he always wears a tag with his name and address, Ford said, adding if the doors are open to a home, car, or anywhere else, "He'll walk right in." Ford said she has had to ask the milkman to please check his truck for Oliver when he leaves, because he'll crawl in to investigate when no one is looking.

Oliver was missing for almost two weeks when the family began to give up hope. He had just had a routine operation and wasn't wearing his collar, and finding him without it would be much more difficult. With his friendly personality, there was no telling where he might have gone. Colby, who had found Oliver in a newspaper ad in May 2003, began looking again for a new kitten.

Ford decided to take Colby to the Scituate Animal Shelter to see if there were any kittens there that needed a home. After looking around for a while and holding some of the kittens, Colby still hadn't found the one she knew she was meant to have, so she asked if there were any more cats in the building. She turned to look in one of the bottom cages and right there before her eyes was Oliver.

"The girl at the shelter actually got tears in her eyes," said Ford, adding the girl said being reunited with a lost pet almost never happens. Coincidentally, Oliver was found on Friday the 13th, which for Colby and her family, turned out to be a lucky day after all.

Taking lax to the max

MaxLax lacrosse expands with opening of new facility in Pembroke

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Sports Illustrated recently named lacrosse as the fastest growing youth sport in the country. So, is it finally ready to join the "Big Four" of youth athletics? Judging by the success of one local enterprise, some might say it already has.

With the explosion in interest in lacrosse in our region, it appears as if Curt Mills has long known what SI has just recently declared, as his lacrosse program has not only provided a solid foundation for this growth, but is helping to define and promote this fast emerging sport for players all over New England.

OLYMPIC NOTEBOOK

JULIE ANN NEVERO

One of things I've always enjoyed most about the Olympic Games is the camaraderie shared between athletes of different countries. One of the better rivalries of the 2004 Athens Games were the showdowns in the pool between American Michael Phelps and Australia's Ian Thorpe. The two battled in several races, all the while wishing each other well, constantly congratulating each other, and talking each other up in post-race interviews. Equally talented, the two men had the utmost respect for each other and that's what the Games are all about.

Perhaps someone should have mentioned this to Shawn Crawford.

While US sprinters have been traditionally cocky, I thought this particular American took it a little too far Saturday and Sunday nights. After winning his 100-meter quarterfinal heat Saturday night, Crawford ran another 15 meters and slammed his fist to the track before talking a big game into the camera. Hello, it was a quarterfinal! He hadn't really won anything yet. Anyway, that wasn't the worst of it. During Sunday's semifinal, Crawford and training partner Justin Gatlin were running side-by-side in lanes three and four. Both comfortably ahead of the field with roughly 10-meters to go, Crawford looked over at a focused Gatlin and waved his hand at him as if to tell him to "take the race".

In post-race interviews, Crawford said he was motioning

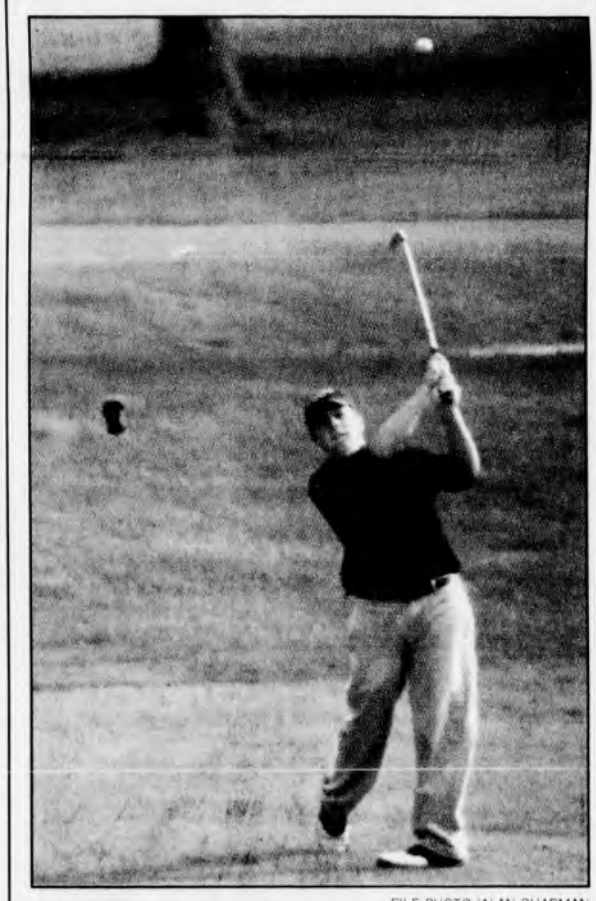
New ADs step to the helm in Marinerland

EXTRA POINTS

MIKE SPELLMAN



The high school year has just ended, and we already know of four new Athletic Directors in Marinerland.

Pembroke High will open its doors for the first time in a little more than two months with Bill Fallon bringing an impeccable resume from Foxboro High.

The prospect of starting a program from scratch as well, no doubt, as working with Fallon--who oversaw one of the more successful athletic departments, top to bottom, in Eastern Mass—brought out several quality candidates for the fall coaching positions. This list was announced last month and was highlighted by the name of one Foster Cass.

"Frosty," as Foster is more commonly known, is already arguably the most successful boys soccer coach in Massachusetts school boy history. Cass, who will turn 64 in August, retired as head coach at Duxbury High in 2002 after a 34-year career that saw him compile an amazing record of 575-63-44, which included a national record 72 straight wins, 12 Eastern Mass. titles, 17 sectional titles and 19 undefeated regular seasons.

Tim Pilczak and the rest of the CHS golf team kick off the fall 2004 sports season with a match a week from today, Sept. 2, versus South Shore League rival Abington at Strawberry Valley Golf Course. See the complete fall athletic schedule in next week's Mariner.

The Cohasset 9A Travel Baseball Team won the District 8 -League Championship, August 12 at Connely Field in Whitman. Coached by Pete Timothy and Steve Kozma, the boys won their last seven games to take the title. Congratulations to all the players for a terrific summer season. This wonderful group of players was Conner Goetz, Jamie Timothy, Colin Gideon-Murphy, Trevor Schramn, Michael O'Brien, Conor Dooley, Connor O'Brien, Nick Brown, Christian Davis, Shane Haggerty and Craig Davis.

South Shore sports scene gets facelift

League changes aplenty on tap for 2004-'05

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Regular followers of the local high school sports scene will no doubt be surprised by a lot of what they see this fall.

Old rivals we've all become use to seeing come to our home town high schools on a regular basis aren't going to be there any more. In place of these teams will be representatives from schools we've never before seen or, perhaps in some cases, even heard of.

This is all largely the final byproduct of the abrupt departure of nine schools from the Pilgrim Conference and the subsequent dissolution of the Conference—the home for many years of the South Shore League, Patriot League, Atlantic Coast League, Old Colony League and Big Three League.

The OCL receives the greatest facelift. That league was home to eight schools the last several years, but Plymouth South, North Quincy, Falmouth and Silver Lake have all exited. The former three schools were part of the nine-school exodus from the Pilgrim Conference, and will now join Nauset, Sandwich, Dennis-Yarmouth, Plymouth North, Whitman-Hanson and Quincy in a brand new Atlantic Coast League. Silver Lake took advantage of the fact the timing of this split coincided with the jump of Pembroke from its four-town region.

Weymouth Club offers 'back to school' kids programs

Labor day is nearly upon us and it's "back to school time" for thousands of South Shore youngsters. The turn of the calendar will also signal the start of an eclectic schedule of fall fitness programs for school age youngsters at Weymouth Club in South Weymouth.

Among this fall's offerings at the South Shore's largest fitness complex will be a number of programs for youngsters in various age groups. These include Kids Karate for kids 5 to 10 years of age. The eight-week program will be held from 3:30 to 4:15 p.m. on Tuesday afternoons, beginning September 21st. All skills levels are welcome.

Yoga for the Athletic Youth, a six-week program for ages 12 and up, will be held from 4-5 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons, beginning September 22nd. This program is designed to increase flexibility, enhance concentration and teach relaxation and stress reduction. It's non-competitive and fun, taught in a relaxing atmosphere.

The programs are open to both members and non-members on a course or drop in basis. For additional program information and fees, please call Weymouth Club at 781.337.4600.

For information, please contact Stephanie Meyers-Roche at Weymouth Club (781.337.4600) or Darryl Elliott at Bay State Physical Therapy (781.335.1151).

The Cohasset 14-year old all-star team captured the nine-team Suburban League championship two weeks ago with a thrilling 3-2 win over Cedar Grove of Dorchester. The core of this 14-player team was the 10 14-year olds: Sam DeGiacomo, Chris Rose, Cliff Musto, Ian Cundell, Tom Chase, Cody Morgan, Pat Doonan, Ken Muir, Kyle Pinkus and Dave Snowdale, who missed the end of the season after undergoing elbow surgery. The team also carried four 13 year olds- Evan Richardson, John Sturino, Adam Berger and Danny Martin—who also contributed, according to coach Mark DeGiacomo.

Crawford's behavior ugly

at Gatlin for them to "cross the line together into the finals." Perhaps a nice thought for the close friends, but ARE YOU KIDDING ME?! This is the Olympics, not some neighborhood race between buddies. To his credit, Gatlin seemed surprised by Crawford's gesture, turning his head toward him in a seemingly reactionary way. But he didn't celebrate their advancement until after the race. AS HE SHOULD HAVE!

Never in my life had I seen such a disgusting display of unsportsman-like behavior at the Olympics. Crawford's show of arrogance and disrespect is exactly why some countries just plain hate Americans. Heck, even I kind of hated us after seeing that! True, Crawford was a favorite having run the fastest 100-meter time in the world this year, but again, winning your quarterfinal and semifinal heats still isn't really winning anything yet. Confident displays are part of track, which I've always maintained is about 80 percent mental, but there's a difference between being confident and being cocky. If you're going to be that cocky, you better back it up (i.e. winning when it counts).

Which brings me to the race that ACTUALLY mattered — the final. The American pair was again placed in neighboring lanes Gatlin in three, Crawford in four, with other contenders Asafa Powell of Jamaica and defending Olympic champ and American Maurice Greene in lane seven. (Greene has always been a dynamic character and this year, even went so far as to declare himself the "Greatest Of All Time", even donning a tattoo of a lion with the initials G.O.A.T on his shoulder).

Gatlin and Greene got great starts, but Gatlin surged with a late kick and out-leaned runner-up Francis Obikwelu of Portugal and Greene at the line to take the gold in 9.85 seconds. All that hoopla and the overly cocky Crawford, 26, didn't even medal, finishing fourth in a still very fast 9.89.

An elated Gatlin, 22, screamed with joy after winning before being embraced by Crawford then Greene. He then made the rounds with fans from the US and beyond, touching virtually every outstretched hand and accepting an olive wreath from a spectator clutching the flag of Greece.

During a post-race interview, a very humble Gatlin was quick to give credit to those who came before him, like Greene and Marion Jones, the women's dash champion at the 2000 Games in Sydney. Then, he gave a "shout-out" to his grandparents, thanking them for making his Mom and Dad. A bit corny, but genuine nonetheless. It was exactly how a champion should act. Respectfully and humbly. Pretty, non-cocky behavior for a guy who had just won the fastest 100-meter final in Olympic history, with the first five finishers all breaking 10 seconds.

I think it's safe to say the right man won and also that his training partner could learn a few things from him.

Oh no, say it ain't so

Even though the 100-meter hurdles have always been American Gail Devers' best event, it has never quite been her forte at the Olympics. Devers has suffered devastating blows in the event throughout her Olympic hurdling career and unfortunately things weren't any different in Athens.

During yesterday's prelims, Devers pulled up lame before the first hurdle then collapsed and crouched in agony on the track. Aggravated by a strained left calf muscle for the past few days, Devers, 37, said she heard it "pop" just after coming out of the blocks. It marked the end of what was to be her final attempt at winning the Olympic gold medal that has eluded her.

Devers' long, troubled history in the hurdles at the Games began in 1988, when she failed to run out of the preliminaries. In 1992, she was winning the finals before getting tripped up on the last hurdle and crawling to the finish line out of the medals. In 1996, she was a tight fourth, just 0.01 shy of the bronze. And last time around in Sydney in the semifinals, Devers pulled a hamstring before going over the fifth hurdle and didn't finish the race.

This is not to say that her Olympic career has been a total wash. Devers did win consecutive golds in the 100-meters in 1992 and 1996. She was asked to run in that event again this year, taking the place of suspended American Tori Edwards, who tested positive for performance enhancing drugs. Devers made it to the semifinals.

Softballers cruised

I hope that some of you might have headed the advice I gave in last week's notebook to forget the supposed US men's basketball "Dream Team" and start watching some real dreamers. More specifically: the US softball team. Talk about a Dream Team, the Americans have been nothing short of perfect, winning all seven of the preliminary games they played without surrendering a single run. Yeah, that's right. Seven games, no runs allowed. Monday night, the squad dominated Australia in the gold medal game, cruising to a 5-1 victory.

It was the third-straight gold medal for the Americans since Olympic softball began at the Atlanta Games in 1996. However, it is their dominance in the sport that may lead to it being pulled off the Olympic slate in 2012. The Americans allowed just one run in 56 innings and outscored their opponents 51-1 as they were never challenged.

Great turnaround for gymnastics

After leaving Sydney completely empty-handed four years ago, the US men's and women's gymnastics teams are certainly making statements in Athens. The American gymnasts have combined to win a very impressive 9 medals.

Both the men and women took home team silvers, and America was home to the men's and women's All-Around champions as Paul Hamm (despite a recently discovered scoring controversy) and Carly Patterson each won gold. Most recently at the individual event finals, the women were well represented by Annia Hatch, who took silver on the vault, and Terin Humphrey and Courtney Kupets, who took silver and bronze on the uneven bars.

Hamm came up short on floor exercise and pommel horse, taking fifth and sixth, but won a silver on the high bar Monday night. Patterson also took a silver medal on the balance beam.

More to come next week as the Olympics start to wind down.

Congratulations

The split of Pembroke from the Silver Lake district essentially broke the student body in half. Silver Lake -- which will continue to be the public high school for Kingston, Plympton and Halifax-- figures to have in the neighborhood of 1,000 students this fall, while Pembroke High is expected to open its doors on Sept. 7 with over 900. This leaves Silver Lake with a far smaller student body than the remaining four schools in the OCL. Thus, when the Kingston School was invited to join Pembroke in the Patriot League, the jump only seemed to make sense.

"The competition is good and almost every team in this Patriot League was a member of the Old Colony League before," said SL athletic director Bill Johnson. "When I started coaching soccer in the mid-1970s, we had rivalries with almost every one of them, so I think it is going to be great to have that again."

Unfortunately, the OCL is the loser in this whole proposition…at least for now. This league will operate for the 2004-'05 school year with just four schools: Barnstable, Bridgewater-Raynham, Taunton and Marshfield. Subsequently, Athletic Directors at these schools have been left scrambling to fill out their various schedules, as many automatic dates with league rivals have now been lost.

Fortunately, it appears this will be a problem for only one year, as Somerset, Attleboro and Dartmouth have applied to leave the Eastern Athletic Conference to join the Old Colony League. If the moves are, as expected, approved by the OCL and the MIAA without any glitches, the OCL would become a seven team league as soon as the 2005-2006 season.

The departures of Attleboro and Dartmouth were expected, but losing Somerset is a crucial blow to the EAC. The once-solid league could find itself looking at a quartet of Bishop Feehan, Bishop Stang, Bishop Connolly and Coyle-Cassidy.

The Patriot League has also undergone a major upheaval. The additions of Silver Lake, Pembroke and Randolph—the lone member of the old Atlantic Coast League that did not approve the exodus from the Pilgrim Conference—has taken this league from seven members to 10.

In order so that the PL schools could maintain some of their favored non-league rivalries, it was voted to split these 10 schools into a pair of five-member divisions. Duxbury, Silver Lake, Hingham, Scituate and Pembroke will become the East Division. Rockland, Hanover, East Bridgewater, Middleboro and Randolph will form the West Division.

"In the long run, in terms of competitiveness, this is a good move for the league," said longtime Rockland High athletic director Bob Fisher. "Geographically it makes sense, schedule-wise it makes sense, and from a budget standpoint it makes sense."

The fact that Pembroke and SL will be league rivals has heated up the talk of them also becoming Thanksgiving Day rivals. Pembroke is scheduled to become East Bridgewater's Turkey Day opponent this fall. Silver Lake is 0-6 against present Thanksgiving rival Bridgewater-Raynham, and it's tough to imagine that match-up becoming more competitive now that SL has lost half of its student base.

Bill Johnson insists, however, that his school will not pull out of this arrangement until B-R can find another rival.

"B-R came to our rescue when we lost our Thanksgiving game with Plymouth," said the Silver Lake Athletic Director. "We know how painful it can be to lose that game. We would never do that to B-R."

One possible scenario that has been raised is simply flip-flopping Thanksgiving opponents: B-R getting East Bridgewater and Silver Lake getting Pembroke. However, though geography and the fact that both E.B and B-R are traditional football powers in their respective leagues may appear to make this a good fit, there may simply be no way of getting around the fact that B-R's student body (1,500) is more than double E.B.'s (670).

The South Shore League, the "small school" league in the now defunct Pilgrim Conference, will remain unaffected by all of this realigning, at least for now.

There had previously been talk of a few of the smaller Patriot League schools joining the South Shore League—home to Norwell, Cohasset, Abington, Hull, Mashpee and Harwich, with only five of them having a football program (Harwich has a cooperative program with Cape Cod Tech that plays in the Mayflower League). East Bridgewater, the smallest school in the PL, actually applied for admission to the SSL before the Patriot League approved the two division format, but was turned down, SSL administrators feeling EB was still too big for its league.

Another school rumored to be casting an eye toward the South Shore League is Holbrook, as the Vocational Technical schools in the Mayflower League (Blue Hills, Southeastern, South Shore Voc Tech, Bristol Plymouth, Diman, Cape Cod Tech) continue to make noise about forming their own league.

In other words, folks, it seems best not to get too accustomed with what you'll be seeing this year either.

The others hirings included John McIntyre, a former Whitman-Hanson assistant, as head football coach, Kara Connerty, who oversaw a very successful JV program at Cohasset, as girls soccer coach, Scott Turley, moving from Silver Lake to Pembroke, as girls volleyball coach, Tom Duggan, a former Silver Lake track star, as the cross country coach and Colleen Gibbons, former assistant coach at Hull and Medfield High Schools, as field hockey coach.

Reports have several quality candidates also applying for the winter and spring posts.

Tony Wood comes aboard from St. John's- Shrewsbury to take over as Athletic Director at Scituate High from Kathleen McCarthy.

McCarthy, who had been at the helm of the Athletic Department for the last four years, stepped down in order to return to a full-time position as a Physical Education/Health teacher at Scituate High.

Gary Graziano replaces everyone's favorite AD at Rockland High. That's right: Bob Fisher is now officially retired as Athletic Director. Fish has not yet decided, though, whether or not he'll return as head basketball coach and try to defend his program's Div. 3 state championship.

Graziano is a Guidance Counselor at RHS and a longtime coach of the freshman girls basketball team and assistant with the football team. Good luck, Gary. You've certainly got some big shoes to fill.

Last but certainly not least is Scott Payne taking over as Norwell High's new AD. Payne, an assistant hockey coach for the Clippers the last three years, is another favorite at this address.

The enthusiasm Scott has for athletics, working with young people and, really, life in general has come across in virtually every conversation he and I have ever had. He makes no bones about it: Athletic Director is his dream job, and Norwell High Athletic Director is a dream come true.

Kudos to the Norwell School Committee, Principal Steve Mahoney and outgoing AD Jim Sullivan for having the vision to look past the fact Scott is not an educator, per se, and getting behind this hiring.

"I feel this school is unbelievably fortunate to have someone with Scott's enthusiasm coming in," said the outgoing Sullivan, who now looks forward to devoting more time to his football program and returning to full-time duty as an English teacher, of his successor. "I've had a chance to watch him closely over the last three years, and I can honestly say he's the type of person you want running an athletic program."

Scott owns and operates General Auto Parts Supply in Quincy. His plan is to continue being a hands-on owner in the morning, but then to get himself to Norwell High by noontime on all school days.

"Not having Scott in the building all of the time will call for some tighter coordination and communication, whether that's between the two of us, or Scott and coaches or whatever," conceded NHS Principal Steven Mahoney. "But I definitely think it's doable and I definitely think Scott's a great fit for this position.

"To be honest, I think it's a dream come true for him, and I expect he's going to put everything he can into it."

Better yet, I can now chum around with Scott even more at the hockey rinks.

Speaking of changes, the bigger and reportedly better Patriot League seems to be meeting with across the board approval.

The split of Pembroke from the Silver Lake Regional School District has provided two schools for the Patriot League, as both SL's and Pembroke High's student population will be comparable to the current higher end schools in the PL. Randolph jumps from the bigger and some say better Atlantic Coast League to bring the Patriot to an even 10 schools, making it much more practical to form and East and West division. Administrators certainly are happy with the divisional split, as it could provide potentially significant savings in the travel budgets.

Pembroke and Silver Lake will join Hingham, Scituate and Duxbury in a cozy East Division, with no more than three towns separating any of the schools from one another.

There will be a bit more travel required in the West division, with holdovers Hanover, Middleboro, Rockland, and East Bridgewater taking on Randolph. The trip to Middleboro has always been the biggee, and is no doubt one coaches in the East division won't miss.

Pembroke, to no surprise, will play an independent schedule for football in its first season, and join the Patriot League as a full fledged member in 2005. The Pioneers will, however, play three Patriot League teams in 2004, including their old Silver Lake running mates and E.B. on Thanksgiving.

The divisions will be dropped in football, meaning there will be only one bid up for grabs for the Super Bowl playoffs. It also means that eight of each teams scheduling slots have been prefilled this season, and it will be nine next fall when Pembroke comes aboard.

Most of the other sports (soccer, field hockey, basketball, hockey, baseball, softball, tennis) will play divisional rivals twice, with the traditional home-and-home arrangement, and cross divisional rivals once, alternating years for home dates, giving these teams a total of 13 "set dates."

"Seadogs players usually realize their potential quicker because they receive quality coaching from our experienced staff in addition to playing with and against the best players from this area as well as across the country," SSBC president Frank Niles, Jr. said. "They also get to share their family vacation, develop new friendships with teammates, and will always have great memories."

The Seadogs program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which has been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The Seadogs compete against other Massachusetts AAU teams for the right to qualify for the AAU National Baseball Championships held all across the country. The Seadogs program is intended to supplement, rather than replace, local Little League, Babe Ruth, or American Legion baseball programs.

Taking lax to the max

move to its new indoor facility in Pembroke-- have clearly succeeded in tapping into the collective consciousness of the youth lacrosse movement in our area.

Founded by Mills, a Cohasset resident, as an alternative to other lacrosse programs that he claims "weren't focused on developing the kid's skills as well as their passion for the game," MaxLax has become a force to be reckoned with on the New England sports lacrosse scene.

After starting up and coaching an Under-10 program in Cohasset to give his son and his friends a place to play, it didn't take long before Mills discovered there simply weren't many good options out there for youngsters who wanted to play beyond the spring season.

Mills, a product of Lincoln-Sudbury, one of the most successful high school programs in the state, went back to his roots and contacted former coach Andy Oleski, a 25-year veteran coach and a member of the New England Lacrosse Hall of Fame, to get his advice on starting up a program locally.

Sharing with Oleski a passion for the game and friendship that has lasted to this day, Mills' MaxLax program was borne as an extension of the model of Oleski's "Peak Performance Lacrosse Programs" – one of the largest and most respected teaching and recruiting programs in the area. As a sister program to Peak, MaxLax benefited from proven methods of instruction, organization, and commitment to not only providing an opportunity for kids to play and develop their skills, but to also learn how to enjoy the game and to feel as if they can contribute every time they stepped out onto the field.

Coupled with many years of experience as a coach, player, referee, and member of both his town lacrosse board and the state lacrosse body-- Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League (MBYLL) – Mills brought his passion for the sport and his commitment to providing a positive role model for the kids to the formation of MaxLax.

It proved to be a successful combination for launching a career in lacrosse and for responding to a growing need for a high quality lacrosse and youth athletic experience.

Today, MaxLax (named after one of its first players from Cohasset) is one of the area's largest year-round lacrosse providers for both boys and girls, with over 3,000 players and over 300 teams participating each year. During the "off-season," from September through early March, MaxLax hosts three indoor sessions of playing leagues and instructional "Learn2Lax" programs for kids from third grade all the way through high school at multiple locations throughout the greater Boston and South Shore areas.

In addition, MaxLax sponsors an extensive tournament series for both in-program and at-large select teams – the ProShots, a program that has already won its fair share of Championship hardware.

During the summer months, MaxLax provide a full slate of tournaments at both the select and "for fun" levels, as well as a comprehensive summer instructional series, highlighted by their acclaimed ProShot Adventure Camps held locally as resident instructional programs.

In addition to Coach Oleski, who remains on the Advisory Board, MaxLax's full time staff is headed by Steve Schairer, another New England Lacrosse Hall of Fame member, a renowned high school coach with over 200 career wins and a 25 year veteran of collegiate coaching and education.

Recent additions to the staff also include Tom Flanigan of Hingham Youth Lacrosse, Bill Contento of Marshfield Youth Lacrosse, and a deep faculty of top high school and college coaches and players who oversee the programs throughout their various facilities.

"Our philosophy is fairly simple," said Mils. "We want to provide a safe, productive, and enjoyable youth athletic experience for every participant and their families. Too often in youth sports, the emphasis is on the expectations of the people on the sidelines and not enough on the needs and desires of the kids.

"At MaxLax, we encourage the kids to develop their skills and a level of confidence in their abilities so that they believe that they can contribute to a team effort every single time they get on the field. Whether as a high school starter on a state championship team or as a 'Little Laxer' just starting out, MaxLax has a program suited to meet their needs and at their pace.

"Our leagues are casually competitive and administered by professional referees and coaches, according to the rules of the real game of lacrosse. We also want to keep it fresh and fun for the players and we realize that most of our younger kids, and their families, have other commitments, so we keep it to an hour of play per week to keep a stick in their hands and smile on their faces."

For the more dedicated players, MaxLax also provides advanced competitive playing opportunities as well as a higher level of instruction if they want to pursue these options.

"One of the biggest differences between MaxLax and other programs is that we do not believe in playing 'box lacrosse' where kids are forced to abandon many of the skills that they use in the outdoor game and play a rough and tumble game that many coaches and spectators feel resembles rugby more than it does lacrosse, continued Mills.

MaxLax game formats resemble the field game as much as possible, with offsides, long poles (where allowed), field rules and positions, and a format that promotes lacrosse skills rather than survival skills.

"MaxLax has also made the commitment to host our programs at facilities that can provide this 'real game' experience, which is why we will be opening a brand new, state-of-the-art, indoor facility in Pembroke, the ProShot Athletic Center," said Mills. "This will be the area's first and only dedicated lacrosse facility."

The ProShot Athletic Center will be located right off Route 3 at Exit 12 (Rte 139), a seemingly strong central location for all South Shore players.

"With the largest non-boarded indoor playing field and the same field turf that is used by the Patriots, players now have a choice of not only which program to play in, but where they are going to get the best playing experience," said Mills, "and we believe that the clear choice will be MaxLax."

The new center will also host professional athletic training and strength conditioning services, a family fun arcade, concessions and glassed viewing area, taped games, and a full-line retail lacrosse equipment and apparel store.

Fall sessions for MaxLax Lacrosse will start at all locations the weekend of Sept. 17 for both girls and boys and registrations are already filling up for all divisions. Players can register as individuals, as a group of friends, or as a 12-14 player team. All registrations can be done on-line at www.maxlax.net or by calling their offices at 877/MAXLAX1 or locally at 781/383-2725. Past players and teams will receive a discounted session fee and will be guaranteed spots in the next session if registered by Sept. 1.

For more information on the grand opening of the ProShot Athletic Center, send an email or call to request an invitation to join the party when they open the doors on Sept. 11. You may be one of the lucky few who get to play the first games out on the new field or win any number of cool MaxLax logo'd gear made up especially for the occasion. Several professional players from the Cannons will also be in attendance to celebrate and there will be many skills competitions with prizes throughout the day. Email MaxLax at info@maxlax.net to be added to the guest list.

Swim center success spans 31 years

By Samantha Brown

Mimi Mahoney, Natalie Hunt and Sara Goggin wait to dive in during practice for the 10-and-under team at the Cohasset Swim Center in this July, 2001 photo.

After 31 years of service to the town, it may be hard for many Cohasset residents to imagine a time when taking a dip in the Cohasset Swim Center pool was not an option. Many moms and dads who bring their children to the pool today grew up swimming in its waters as well. But the pool is only able to operate with the help of many volunteers, who donate their time and energy to making sure this non-profit town pool's future is as bright as its past.

Tucked down a long driveway off Sohier Street, the swim center is located in a prime spot in Cohasset. Just a short walk to the South Shore Music Circus, Paul Pratt Memorial Library and adjoining Our World museum playground, and even downtown, the pool is central to many different points of interest in town. For years the swim center has catered to many different groups in town, from senior citizens all the way down to little children taking their first swimming lesson, fulfilling a need many other area towns have not been able to meet.

The history of the swim center dates back to the 1960s, when a man named John Meyer took the idea for a town pool into his own hands and purchased the land which would one day serve the community. "He wanted it to be a true non-profit community service," said Diana Karcher, who is currently on the center's Board of Trustees.

From the very beginning, Meyer tried to involve residents from every corner of the town, and when the first Board of Managers was compiled, he appointed a wide cross-section of residents to make sure everyone in town felt well represented.

The Cohasset Recreation Trust was formed to raise money for the installation of the pool in 1972, and in 1973, residents were invited for the very first time to test its waters. From day one the operation has been run as a non-profit, which is exactly the same way it is run today.

"When it was opened it served a great need for the town," said Karcher, adding before the center was built, the Cohasset Swim Team was forced to practice in private pools, rotating from home to home throughout the week. During the American Red Cross swimming lessons, students would practice four days at Sandy Beach, and every Wednesday they would rotate using private pools. "Having swimming lessons at the beach, the kids were freezing," said Karcher.

Sue Mavilia, a member of the Board of Managers whose parents were both founding members of the pool, said once the pool was open, swimming lessons were held four days at the pool and one day at the beach, which Karcher said enabled the children to "get used to swimming in salt water." But as membership increased, the resounding preference was to be consistent, and swimming lessons are now held five days a week at the pool.

Karcher said while there were many important services that were offered in the earlier years of the pool, one of the more interesting services were the swimming lessons for local fishermen. "A good percentage of fishermen couldn't swim," she said, adding considering the amount of time they spend on the water, it is a good skill to have. For two to three years, the program was offered, and Karcher said it was well attended.

Because of its location, the swim center has been able to partner with many of its neighbors. It has worked with the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, allowing overflow parking to filter into the swim center during big events, and the library in turn has allowed the swim center to hold lifeguard training sessions when they need space to teach CPR, or show videos. In addition, the South Shore Music Circus has been a great friend to the pool, and its entertainers have been known to cool off in its waters over the years. Lou Rawls used to play ultimate Frisbee with the lifeguards, and some members of the Osmond family have visited the pool as well. However, because entertainers typically only perform one show these days, rather than stay for three or four days as they used to, the center hasn't been receiving as many celebrities.

The managers of the pool have always prided themselves on the fact that the pool is completely financially self-sufficient, and money from memberships is able to carry out the operation. However, there have been contributors over the years who have greatly helped the cause. Some of the main contributors to the Cohasset Swim Center were Jane Bancroft Cook and her sister Jessie Cox. Karcher said both the women visited the pool often, and even into their last years, they would have their drivers bring them to the swim center for the annual "pool day," festivities. "They were very proud of the pool," Karcher said.

The pool does run on the money provided by memberships, but Mavilia said if anyone in town cannot afford the membership fees, they can go to the Social Service League and apply for a scholarship anonymously and will be given cash for their membership. When the family goes to pay for their membership, it will be kept completely confidential where the money came from. "It has always been critical to the trustees that every person in town be able to go to the pool," Karcher said, and that is an offer that will always continue.

While the Cohasset Swim Center's season is coming to a close, the Trustees are always looking for volunteers to help out in any way possible. Anyone interested in helping out, whether it be landscaping or helping apply a new coat of paint, may call the center at (781) 383-9463, or send an e-mail to cohassetswimcenter@attbi.com.

New hires keep school chief busy

would be retiring at the end of the school year, it was determined there weren't the funds to fill those positions in the fiscal year 2005 budget. Although the town passed a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override for the schools at the ballot box in April, the money wasn't enough to prevent a reduction in teaching positions. Prop. 2-1/2 is the state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year.

In light of the cuts, a group of concerned parents dubbed the Committee to Save Three Teachers, set out to raise the $105,000 necessary to keep the three positions for one year, which would enable the schools to maintain smaller class sizes. Thanks to the committee's efforts, which has worked with the Cohasset Education Foundation — a non-profit organization made up of concerned residents who raise funds for various educational expenses — a $69,000 donation has been given to the schools, which is enough to pay the salary of one second grade teacher and one third grade teacher for the 2004-2005 school year. The Foundation has typically given funds for tangible items, and helped with the purchase of equipment for a new computer lab, but this is the first time money has been used to retain positions in the schools.

Thanks to the efforts of a group of local parents, Walsh will be able to bring two additional teachers on board for this school year.

The School Committee accepted the funds from the Committee to Save Three Teachers the last week of July, allowing Walsh to move ahead with interviews. In order to find the teachers best suited for the job, Walsh said interviews are still being conducted. However, she said "All positions will be filled by the time school starts."

Walsh said an orientation program for new teachers was slated for Wednesday (yesterday) at Deer Hill. Throughout their first year, new teachers participate in a mentor program where they are partnered up with teachers who are experienced in the school system and can provide support. During orientation new teachers are "given a tour of the town, and are introduced to the school district," helping them become acclimated before students arrive on the first day, Walsh said.

The Cohasset school system was not the only one to have a busy summer. Hingham's Supt. Dot Galo spent her summer vacation conducting interviews and filing paperwork for more than 50 individuals who are either new to Hingham or are signing their first contracts for new roles. In addition, there are roughly 20 new staff anticipated to fill support roles as paraprofessionals, tutors, bus drivers, or food service workers in Hingham.

She has a twinkle in her eye, a smile on her lips and autism.
Rosie's family understands that for Rosie, and the more than one million Americans like her who ar living with autism spectrum disorder, research offers hope. That's why they joined forces with 7,000 other people in Boston last year, to raise money for the National Alliance for Autism Research (NAAR), the first organization in the country dedicated to funding and accelerating biomedical research to unlock the mysteries of autism spectrum disorders. To date, NAAR has committed $20.9 million to directly fund autism research — more than any other non-governmental organization in the U.S. Most of the money raised for NAAR comes from the Walk F.A.R. IT'S HAPPENING

Yard sale to benefit the community center

The South Shore Community Center will hold its annual yard sale (rain or shine) on Sept. 11, from 9 a.m. to noon at the SSCC located at 3 Main St. Cohasset. The SSCC is seeking donations (no clothing), which are tax deductible, for the yard sale with all proceeds going to support the Center. Donors can drop off items at the SSCC on Sept. 2 and 3, and Sept. 7 to Sept. 10, between 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day. For questions, contact the SSCC at 781-383-0088.

Dog obedience

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer another session of dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School this season.

Classes will be held on Monday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting Sept. 13. For all classes the fee is $100. For the five-week, one-hour, per-week program. Dog owners are required to have their dogs' shots/inoculations up to date.

The class, which will be for beginners, will be held from 6-7 p.m.

To register for the next available session, call the recreation office at 781-383-4109. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis.

Holly Hill Farm offers fall family farm series

Adults looking to expand their knowledge of organic gardening or parents seeking activities for their children will be glad to hear Holly Hill farm has just finalized its summer and fall schedule for its organic gardening workshop and family farm series.

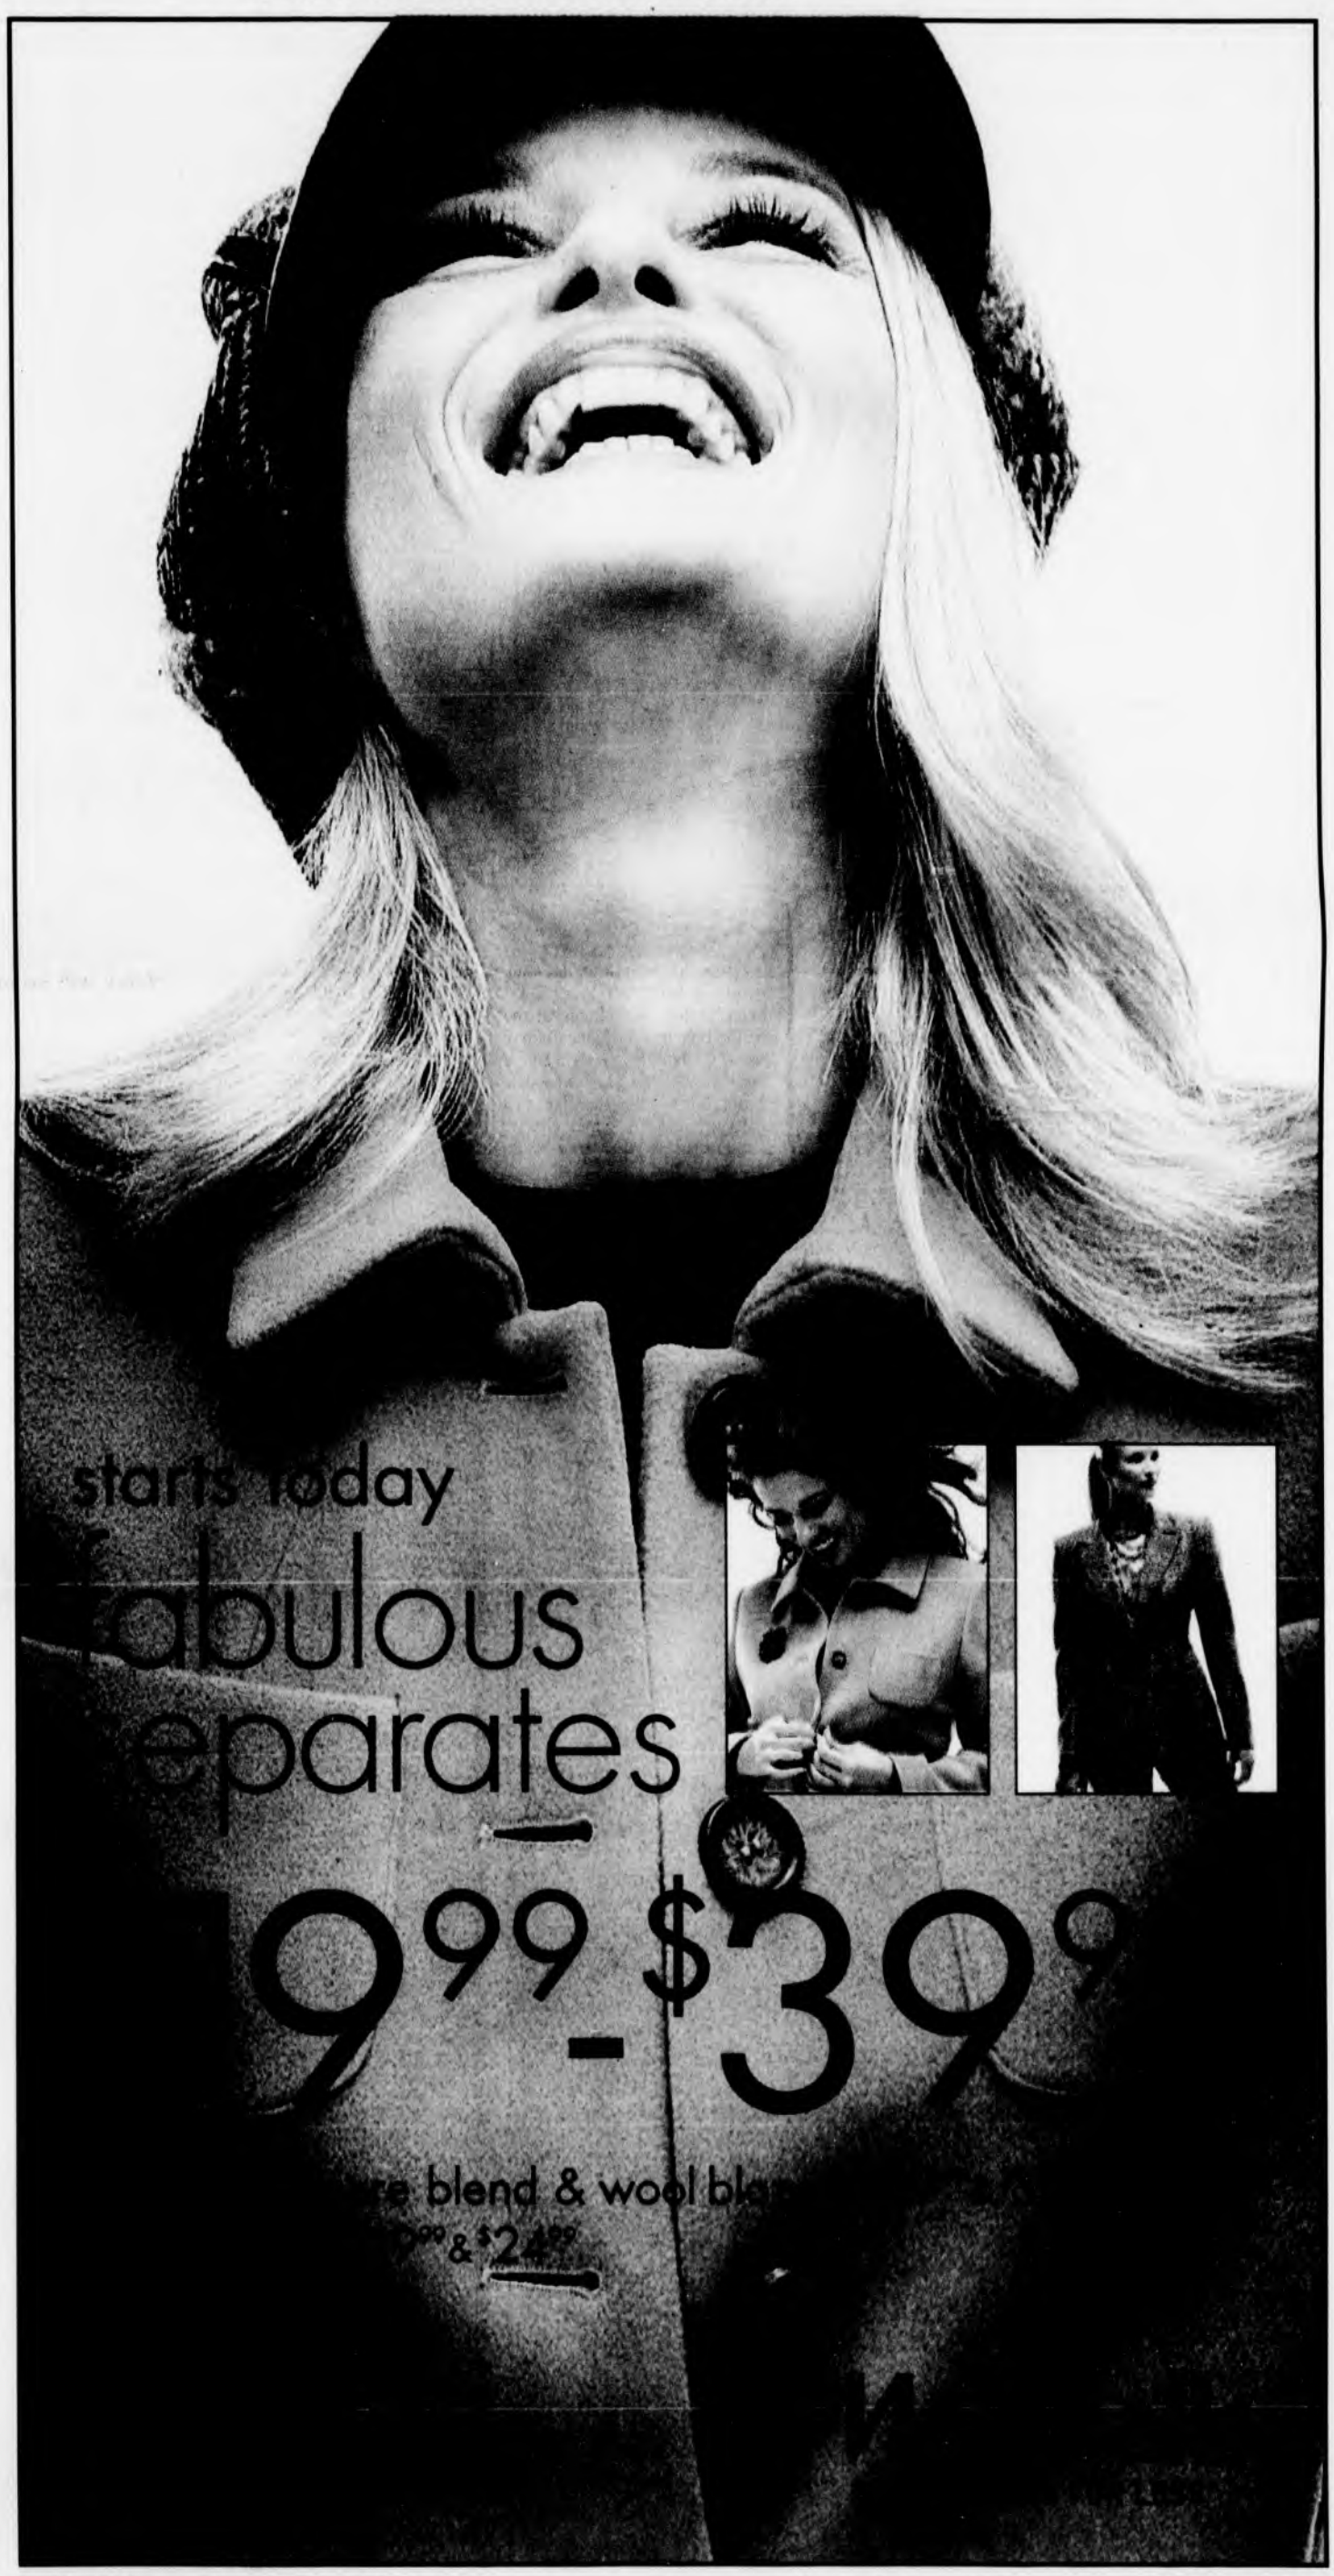
- Saturday Aug. 28 from 2-4 p.m. the farm will hold its class "Growing organic cut flowers," during which time students will learn about growing cut flowers in a home garden. Topics range from seed sources to sowing tips. Students will practice deadheading and harvesting and will make a bouquet to take home. The cost for the class is $20 for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members and $25 for non-members.
- Saturday Sept. 18 from 10 a.m. until noon, the farm will host its "Bees Buzz," class which teaches students about the 20 hives at the farm which produce honey for sale. Students will learn about pollination and the importance of bees in nature from expert apiarist Luke Lambert. Friends of Holly Hill Farm pay $6 for the class, non members pay $10.
- Thursday Sept. 30 from 7:30-8:30 p.m. and Saturday Oct. 2 from 8-10 a.m. local naturalist Sally Avery will host a two part birding workshop. It will begin with the Thursday night indoor evening presentation, followed by the Saturday morning guided tour through Holly Hill Farm's walking trails. Friends of Holly Hill Farm members pay $16, non members pay $20.
- Saturday, Oct. 30 at 1 p.m. Farmer Frank White will lead a guided walk through Holly Hill Farm's trails. Suggested donation, $5.
- Sat. Oct. 23 from 10 a.m. until noon there will be a family farm tour. Farmer Jean White will lead a guided tour around the farm, with visits to the greenhouse and growing fields. Attendees will also get to meet the farm animals. Friends of Holly Hill Farm members pay $12 per family, non members pay $15 per family.
- Saturday Oct. 16 from 10 a.m. until noon there will be a family composting workshop. Attendees will learn how to develop a compost pile at home. Children and adults welcome. Holly Hill Farm members pay $12 per family, non members pay $15 per family.

The farm will also host after school programs. The two session series includes four afternoons at the farm, during which participants will learn about organic farming. Highlights include: sowing seeds and planting crops, making compost and preparing fields for Spring, harvesting and tasting the fruits of Summer before frost, and a trip to Weir River Farm. (Cost: $60 per child)

- Session 1 (ages 5-7), Wednesdays beginning Sept. 22, 3:30-5:30 p.m.
- Session 2 (ages 8-10), Thursdays beginning Sept. 23, 3:30-5:30 p.m.

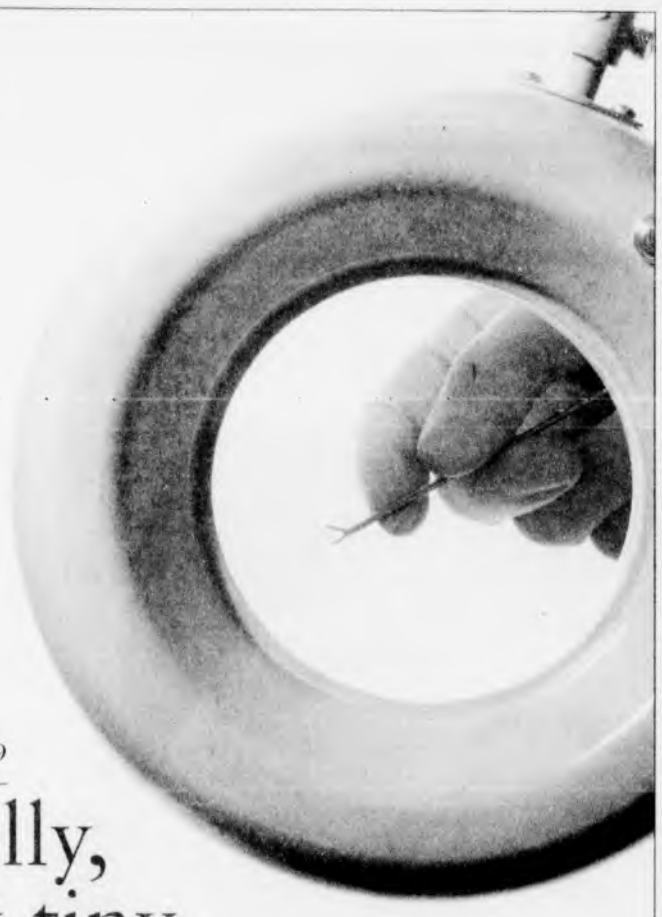
For additional information and registration for all events, contact Jon Belber by phone at 781-383-1455 or by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com., or visit the farm's Web site at www.Hollyhillfarm.org.

South Shore Quests booklets are available



South Shore Quests announces its new association with the Weir River Watershed Association and the printing of the 2004 Quest booklets. This years booklet features 20 quests with eight quests new this year. Booklets are available for $6 at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell, the Hull Lifesaving Museum, Bookport in Hingham Square, and the Hingham Public Library. Quest boxes remain in place until Nov. 15, with several open year round so the time for questing has just begun. Any questions regarding quests can be directed to 781-749-6121.

Revolutionary War encampment Aug. 28



The call is out! British redcoats are on their way to Fort Revere Park in Hull, expected to arrive on Saturday morning, Aug. 28, at 10 a.m. Unfortunately for them, they will be trying to occupy space already claimed by Colonial militia and allied French soldiers. What will happen when they come together? Come to the annual Fort Revere Revolutionary War Encampment to find out.

Experience Revolutionary War camp life as presented by the men and women of the Billerica Minutemen and other living history actors from the region. Kids can learn candle making and other historical skills, talk to a battlefield surgeon, and even drill with British soldiers. Cannon and mortar firing displays will be mixed with mock battles and more.

All events at Fort Revere Park are free of charge. No alcohol is allowed on the site, and visitors should dress appropriately. Light refreshments will be available for purchase. For information call John Galluzzo at 781-724-7131, or Matt Tobin at 617-727-4468.

OBITUARIES

Frederick L. Huntwork Sr.

Frederick L. Huntwork Sr., 86, of Hull, a former Cohasset police officer, died Aug. 21, 2004, at home following a lengthy illness.

Born in Huron, S.D., son of the late David and Lola (Adamson) Huntwork, he was educated in Huron. He served in the U.S. Army during World War II while stationed in Hull.

Mr. Huntwork was employed as a police officer for the town of Cohasset for 25 years.

He was a past commander of the American Legion George H. Mealey Post in Cohasset.

He was a resident of Hull for seven years.

He leaves his wife of 60 years, Virginia F. (Grassie) Huntwork; a son, Frederick L. Huntwork Jr. of Hull; a daughter, Melissa A. Richardson of Scituate; three grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral service was held at St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Memorial contributions may be made to Beacon Hospice of Plymouth, 45 North Main St., Fall River, 02720.

Mary Joan McCarthy

Mary Joan McCarthy, 73, a homemaker, of Plymouth, died Aug. 18, 2004, at Jordan Hospital, Plymouth, after a brief illness.

Born in Medford and raised in Milton, she was the daughter of the late Leo and Eva (VanAlphen). She was a graduate of Milton High School and Boston College. Mrs. McCarthy lived in Cohasset for 42 years before moving to Plymouth eight years ago.

She was the former CCD director at St. Anthony's in Cohasset. She retired in the late 1970s.

Mrs. McCarthy leaves her husband, Richard A. McCarthy; her children, Kathleen A. Stillman of Vernon Conn., Gregory T. of Camp Verde, Ariz., Leo J. of Avon, Ellen M. Maher of Cohasset, Richard M. of Grand Rapids., Mich., seven grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was held on Aug. 21, at Saint Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset, handled the arrangements.

Kathryn T. Sullivan

Kathryn T. Sullivan, 91, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, died Aug. 15, 2004, at the Life Care Center of South Shore in Scituate following a brief illness.

Ms. Sullivan was born in Cohasset, daughter of the late Michael J. and Mary (Connell) Sullivan. She attended Cohasset schools.

She was sister of the late Marion Sullivan.

A graveside service was held in St. Paul's Cemetery in Hingham.

Arrangements were by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Sunset at the Abbey concert is Aug. 28

The tradition continues. The Hingham Symphony Chamber Players invite you to join them for an end-of-summer concert held on the lawn at Glastonbury Abbey, on Saturday, Aug. 28, at 4:30 p.m.

This year's theme is Aegean & Classical, featuring piano virtuoso Konstantinos Papadakis, fresh from his performance at the Athens Olympics, he will play works by Gottchalk, Gershwin, Rachmaninoff and Strauss. Other members of the HSO Chamber Players will share their talent through solo and small ensemble pieces by Mozart, Purcell and others. The evening will end with a group performance of a brief work for chamber orchestra.

Admission is $15 adults, $10 seniors, $5 youth through age 18.

Relax on the lawn with friends and family. Bring a beach chair or blanket and a picnic. A selection of snacks and non-alcoholic beverages will be available for purchase as well. In case of rain, the concert will be moved indoors to the conference center on the grounds of the Abbey.

Admission is $15 adults, $10 seniors, $5 youth through age 18. Tickets are available at the gate, or in advance at Hingham Public Library, La Petite Maison in Hingham Square, at the Abbey bookstore, or call 781-740-5694 to order by phone. The sponsor for this concert is Serono, Inc. of Rockland.

Historic NE photos on exhibit

The Hull Lifesaving Museum and the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities is hosting "The Camera's Coast" a sampler of historic coastal New England images from the collections of Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities through Sept. 5. The pioneering photographers represented from SPNEA include Nathaniel Stebbins, Henry G. Peabody, Baldwin Coolidge, and Emma Coleman. Subjects depicted include square-riggers, coasting schooners, fishing vessels and fishing ports, small boats and large yachts, summer hotels and fishermen's shacks, fishermen, seaweed gatherers, and saltmarsh haymakers.

Curated by noted author and maritime historian William H. Bunting, "The Camera's Coast" illustrates life along the New England coast in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. These were years of great social and economic change. Many traditional maritime occupations, from long-shore fishing and shipbuilding to deep water voyaging were in decline. With mushrooming industrialism and growing numbers of people able to take vacations – and increasingly hot, crowded, and dirty cities from which to flee – coastal recreation boomed.

WAVE OF HEARING LOSS

Curiously enough, new research reveals that forty percent of surfers suffer from external auditory exotosis, or "surfer's ear." This condition, which is essentially a buildup of bone in the ear caused by repeated exposure to cold water, can be caused by any cold water activity. The closure of the ear canal associated with surfer's ear was six times more likely to be found among those who surfed in cold water. The problem develops because the ear is the only place in the body where skin is directly on top of bone. Without insulation, cold water stimulates bone growth, increasing the likelihood of ear infections and hearing loss. Surgery can correct severe cases; it takes four to six weeks for recovery.

Good hearing is not something to be taken for granted. Millions of Americans suffer from hearing loss, including approximately 1 out of every 4 senior citizens. If you suspect a hearing problem for yourself or a family member, give us a call at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 781-337-1144. We'll arrange a free, convenient, painless hearing test to determine if the problem might be best addressed medically or with a hearing instrument. We're located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Surfers who surfed in water with a temperature of 60 degrees F. or less were found to be at an even higher risk for surfer's ear.

Search for TM begins

15 résumés are already in

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Even with minimal advertising, a good number of résumés have already been sent in for the town manager position, putting the Town Manager Search Committee to work, sifting through applications. While the idea had been floated to hire a third party search committee to help expand the search, that idea has been put on hold for now, while the committee works with what it has, and what it expects will come.

The committee, which consists of library trustee Sheila Evans; Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee; School Committee member Rick Flynn; Sam Pease of the Capital Budget Committee; DPW employee Mary Snow; Treasurer/Collector Joe DeVito; citizens-at-large Melissa Browne and John

Familiar figures to host program

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

After spending the past six years on alternate Thursday nights at School Committee meetings – most people might want to take a break, stay home and relax.

But not Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo, who are planning "Our Town," an hour-long, cable-TV program that will tackle local issues and more.

The two former School Committee members, with the help of a small army of volunteers, are launching a talk show that will air biweekly from 8:30-9:30 p.m. starting Sept. 16 on cable channel 10.

Plans are to air the show – which will be taped the night before – on the second and fourth Thursday of the month. The School Committee meets on the first and third Thursday.

"Mark and I had built our lives around School Committee meetings," Martin said. "We were adrift after the School Committee had a

Newcomers put out welcome mat

But not limited to those new to town

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In Scituate and Cohasset, being a "newcomer" isn't a title used solely for those who have just moved to town. Regardless of years of residence, whether young or old, anyone from either town can become a member of the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club and take part in the fun of social activities it hosts.

Fall marks the beginning of the Newcomers' year of activities, which includes a wide variety of social events for residents of all ages. Since the 1970s, the

"It's awesome when you're new to town to have people show you the ropes."
— Laurie Schneider, Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club

Newcomers Club has been inviting residents of both towns to participate in various events to learn about the culture and history of their towns while developing friendships by sharing interests and hobbies. There are activities for everyone in the family, and the Newcomers' are always looking to share in the fun with new members.

Annual dues are $30 for the entire family, and social events are either free or request a minimal donation. For those who join now, membership will carry through until Aug. 31, 2005. However, publicity coordinator Lauren Curley said there is rolling registration, and residents can join at any point during the year.

Members receive monthly newsletters, a club directory, and eligibility for full participation in all club events. Every month the club sends out a newsletter outlining activities. This year, the Newcomers Club is planning on hosting parties for each season, beginning with the annual Fall

Change adds up for schools

First day is Wed., Sept. 8

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It's that time of year again for students to trade in their beach towels for textbooks as Wednesday Sept. 8 marks the first day of school. Along with getting used to waking up and heading off to the bus stop instead of Sandy Beach, students will go back to school with the buildings housing different grades, new staff members, and for some, different start times.

As a result of completed renovations at both Deer Hill and the middle-high school, the buildings are ready to accommodate more students, which has resulted in a reconfiguration of grades. The third grade has moved out of the Osgood School and into the Deer Hill School, bumping the sixth graders out of Deer Hill and over to the middle-high school.

Along with the reconfiguration, there has been a change in start times for Deer Hill and the middle-high school. Studies have shown a later start time has a positive effect on teenager's academic performance, which led the School Committee to vote in favor of starting the middle-high school students a little later. In turn, the Deer Hill schedule has changed to a slightly earlier start time.

The Osgood School will maintain the same time schedule it had last year. Students in grades one and two will begin school Wednesday Sept. 8 at 9:05 a.m. Bus students will arrive between 8:55 a.m. and 9:05 a.m. and the school asks that parents who drive their children drop them off no earlier than 8:50 a.m. Buses are expected to have their morning pickups between 8:20-8:55 a.m., but Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan said for the first week, it is always good advice to head to the bus stop a little early, as bus schedules may vary. The school day will end at 3:05 p.m., and afternoon bus drop-off is expected at between 3:05-3:40p.m.

Veterans committee seeks information

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee is looking to find Cohasset residents who served in the Armed Forces during the Persian Gulf War. The recently updated Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site has posted honor rolls for every war dating back to the Civil War, as well as hero profiles and information about Gold Star mothers. Currently, the committee has an honor roll page for the Persian Gulf War on its Web site, but no names to add to the list. In addition, the committee is always looking to update its lists for other wars, and residents are asked to send along the names of any veterans who have not been included to date.

Anyone with names of any Cohasset veterans is asked to pass them along to Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt via e-mail at gpratt@suburbancompanies.com. For more information, please visit the committee's Web site at cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Volunteer sought for Conservation Comm.

The Conservation Commission has an opening. Interested citizens should call the selectmen's office at 781-383-4105 or stop by the office at Town Hall. Applicants may also send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen, Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Town Manager is on vacation

Town Manager Michael Buckley is on vacation and will be returning to his post Wednesday Sept. 8. In his absence, Town Treasurer and Tax Collector Joseph DeVito will serve as acting Town Manager.

Spofford Selectman's phone line reminder

Just a reminder, to reach Selectman Rob Spofford for town business at home, please call the Selectman's phone line at (781) 383-8338.

Potential Cook Estate project sewer hookup could loom large this fall

May draw a crowd at STM

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cook Estate project is an interesting public-private hybrid with public money making it possible for the town to sell to a private developer who would ultimately build what the town wants.

The November Special Town Meeting is still a ways off. But an issue which is expected to take center stage has been the subject of debate for months.

No one should be surprised if access to town sewer creates sparks on the floor of the Sullivan gymnasium.

The Board of Selectmen could sponsor an article that would allow the Cook Estate property to become a part of the Cohasset Central Sewer District, opening the door for the site to be considered for a municipal sewer connection. The Cook Estate project, which selectmen heralded to fanfare one year ago, would provided badly needed housing for the town's senior citizens looking to downsize into more affordable digs.

But selectmen's sponsorship of the Cook Estate could cause some controversy in and of itself. The homes in the Little Harbor area have also been waiting in the wings for sewer connections and have been promised future capacity once the treatment plant is upgraded. Two other projects in town – Cedarmere, which would also provide senior housing, and Avalon, an apartment complex – would both benefit from sewer access. Those projects have been told to forget it.

It's a tricky situation that raises questions about where to draw the line about town sponsorship of a private development. The Cook Estate project is an interesting public-private hybrid with public money making it possible for the town to sell to a private developer who would ultimately build what the town wants.

To see how the town got to this point, it's necessary to turn the clock back a year when the proposed project seemed like the perfect solution to solve the town's senior housing needs. Before last fall's Special Town Meeting then town manager Mark Haddad said the town was proposing to work with the private sector to achieve its objective of keeping Cohasset seniors in town, and insure the combined 22-acre Cook Estate site and adjacent 8.7 acres of town-owned property [near Stop & Shop] would be developed in a manner that is "sensitive to the local community and beneficial to the town."

By combining the Cook and town parcels, selectmen believed they would be able to reduce the development impacts on the town, which might occur if the Cook Estate were developed separately, and still take advantage of the private sector creativity and expertise.

After two hours of discussion at Town Meeting, voters finally approved the allocation of $4.5 million to purchase the Cook Estate and agreed to seek $5.2 million in a potential sale of the combined Cook and town properties. Selectman Michael Sullivan told voters by combining the two parcels of land, the town's property, which does not have a means of access other than across the Cook property, would increase in value. In addition, the merging of the land would allow a greater percentage to remain undeveloped.

At that time any sewer controversy seemed far fetched. When asked by a voter, Drew Leff of GLC consulting, which had been working with the town from the beginning to bring the Cook project to fruition said, "There are no plans to hook up the Cook property to sewer at this time."

Preliminary soil tests on the Cook site indicated there was good reason to continue on with more sophisticated soil testing but in the interest of time, additional tests were not completed before the matter came before voters. It wasn't until April when hydrogeologic testing on the site, conducted by Coler and Colantonio, determined an on-site system would not be feasible.

Today, the Cook Estate development is chasing the same sewer dreams of other proposed housing projects in town, as it looks for ways to accommodate roughly 95 units of senior housing. Its sewer application was denied this April. The project has also not yet received approval from the Department of Environmental Protection for a groundwater discharge permit, which is required for systems discharging more than 10,000 gallons per day. The Cook Estate development will discharge an estimated 15,000 gallons per day once complete. Engineers have looked at other areas around town to install a leaching field with the idea of piping wastewater off the Cook site, but have not found any promising sites.

A sewer connection would remove the cloud over the project, which is hamstrung without a wastewater solution. If developers fail to obtain either a municipal sewer connection or find a suitable leaching field off site, the soils may only be able to handle single-family homes that could put an added burden on the schools in terms of finances and classroom space. With senior housing developments, schoolchildren are not a factor. But for each child living in a single-family home who attends public school, the town spends roughly $8,000. If a family has four children, the town will need to spend $24,000 for one household.

If, as expected, selectmen sponsor an article in November asking Town Meeting to include the property in the central district, it is bound to cause a stir in light of other projects and homes outside the Central District that want to connect as well.

In addition, the Sewer Commission wants the flexibility to decide which out-of-district projects or neighborhoods can connect, and may ask voters to make that possible. The commission plans to ask Town Meeting to adopt a Home Rule Petition which would amend the Cohasset Sewer Act to allow the commission to expand the sewer district to encompass areas that would not otherwise be allowed to tie-in, such as the Cook property. The bylaw is very similar to a Home Rule Petition adopted by Provincetown, and allows for "checker-boarding" of sewer districts in areas where the Sewer Commission deems it is necessary. The Home Rule Petition would also need to come before the Attorney General and the Legislature, and it could be Fiscal Year 2006 before it could be enacted.

If selectmen sponsor a Cook Estate sewer article, they could be opening a door that is difficult to close.

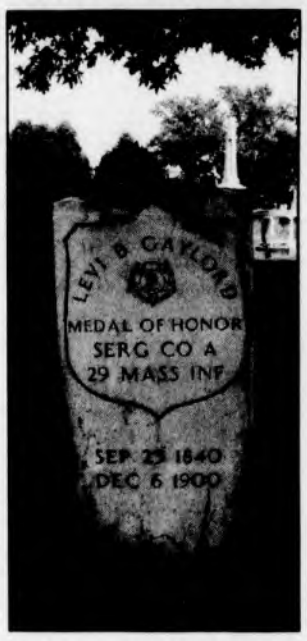
Town Moderator George Marlette said any citizen can ask the Board of Selectmen to insert an article in the Town Meeting Warrant. If the board says no, residents always have the option of collecting the required 10 resident signatures necessary to insert a citizen's petition on the Warrant.

But Marlette said other developers who might be looking to solve sewer problems could also ask the board to bring forward articles on their behalf for the fall Town Meeting. While it would be up to selectmen to make the final decision as to whether it wants to sponsor the article, Marlette said things could become complicated if the board tries to distinguish differences between the projects they will and will not sponsor.

Civil War soldier received top honor

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is no stranger to heroes. Many of its residents have answered the call of duty, serving in the various branches of the armed forces during wartime. To make sure their sacrifice is never forgotten, the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee has been working hard to commemorate Cohasset soldiers from many wars who have served the town and country well.



However, there is one Cohasset soldier who will be remembered not only for his service, but as Cohasset's only recipient of the nation's highest award for bravery.

Levi Gaylord was a sergeant in Company A of the 29th Massachusetts Infantry during the Civil War. On March 25, 1865, while on the road to Richmond, Va. Gaylord manned a gun under heavy fire during the Battle of Fort Stedman. According to civilwar.com, the battle was a last attempt by Gen. Robert E. Lee to break through Gen. Ulysses S. Grant's Petersburg defenses and threaten his supply depot at City Point. The Confederate attack was a pre-dawn assault, and was met by a killing crossfire.

"He held them off until other Union troops came up and counter attacked," said local historian David Wadsworth.

In total there were 3,850 casualties that day, and more than 1,900 Confederate soldiers were captured. The battle was declared a Union victory, and on June 22, 1896, Gaylord was presented with a medal of honor for valor in action. The Medal of Honor is the highest award a soldier can receive for valor in action against enemy forces, and because it is usually presented to the recipient by the President of the United States in the name of Congress, it is often called the Congressional Medal of Honor.

According to the Congressional Medal of Honor Society Web site, the first Medal of Honor was given March 25, 1863 to Private Jacob Parrott and five other soldiers. Since then there have been 3,459 Medals of Honor awarded. Today there are 130 living recipients of the Medal of Honor.

Levi's gravestone in Central Cemetery.

Gaylord passed away Dec. 6, 1900 at the age of 60. He is buried in the Gaylord family plot in Cohasset's Central Cemetery. Wadsworth said his tombstone is very special, as it is made of white marble with some gold leaf flecks.

The National Medal of Honor Society provided the tombstone a few years ago to commemorate Gaylord's life. "I remember when it was given, I gave a short talk at the ceremony," Wadsworth said.

For more information on Gaylord or any other Cohasset veterasn, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Lights, camera, action for new TV talk show

Derry Schwantner mans the control room for a rehearsal of "Our Town" starring Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, both former School Committee members.

goodbye party for us.

"So I suggested doing a cable-TV show and Mark thought it was a great idea. Instead of going to the high school [for meetings] – we'll be going to the studio."

The show won't be limited to the schools. "We hope to have it involve all issues which are of interest to the town," said DeGiacomo, who was also a long-time member of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Martin contacted Evelyn Burke, local access coordinator for Comcast, who was enthusiastic about the concept. But there were a couple of conditions: the show would need six volunteers and everyone involved needed to be certified.

So enter Martin's husband, Dan, and son, Danny; and fellow Cohasset residents Derry and Jim Schwantner and their sons, Derek and Alex, who will all handle cameras and equipment. The volunteers, including the on-air talent – Martin and DeGiacomo – went through an eight-week training program to become certified. Danny and Derek, who are youngest volunteers, attended cable camp offered by Comcast.

Burke said training included what's expected of volunteers, using the field and studio cameras, lighting, audio, recording and editing. Participants also sign an access agreement the covers studio guidelines and on-air behavior. The program is free to residents of the towns Comcast covers. The studio is off Rte. 53 in Norwell.

"I'm looking forward to the show and I hope they have fun with it," Burke said.

Plans are to have two guests per show that will also feature "roll-ins" which are segments filmed from the field. There may also be a segment about "what's new in the Cohasset Mariner" in which letters, articles or stories could be discussed, DeGiacomo explained. Before Town Meeting, proponents of various articles might be featured. "The possibilities are endless," Martin says.

DeGiacomo says the shows will be fun, interesting and entertaining. "It's all about providing more information.

"It won't be boring – we plan to made the show lively and entertaining with a little bit of an edge to it."

Both DeGiacomo and Martin said with their government experience, guests can expect to get the tough questions. On Sept. 16, featured guests will the state Rep. Garrett Bradley and Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

But the show won't be totally issue-focused. Martin said the "roll-ins" could feature an event, such as the Mr. Skipper Contest, held annually and at the high school and open that up to a whole new audience. [Mr. Skipper is an all-male fashion-talent contest that raises money for the prom].

The Schwanters have their own video production business, dubbed Studio Sea, so they are naturals for the behind-the-scenes production and direction of the program.

"It was natural for us to get involved and it's a lot of fun," Jim Schwantner said.

Derry Schwantner said Comcast deserves a lot of credit for making its state-of-the-art studio available to the public.

Kickoff, a Holiday Gathering, St. Patrick's Day Fest, and a summer barbecue. There are activities for children as well, including weekly playgroups, a Halloween party, holiday party, and a spring celebration.

Co-president Laurie Schneider said she initially joined the Newcomers' when she moved to Scituate six years ago. At that time she and her husband were both working full time and they hadn't had children yet. She said at that point, there never seemed to be enough time to participate in the activities, but when she had her first child and began slowing down with work, she began looking into playgroups. While she had been a member of the group for many years, it was only two or three years ago that she became actively involved.

"Lots of people get involved in the playgroups first," she said, adding it provides a way not only for the children to make friends, but the mothers as well. From there, many members begin branching out into other activities. By having members from two towns, it provides for more opportunity for children to play with other children their own age.

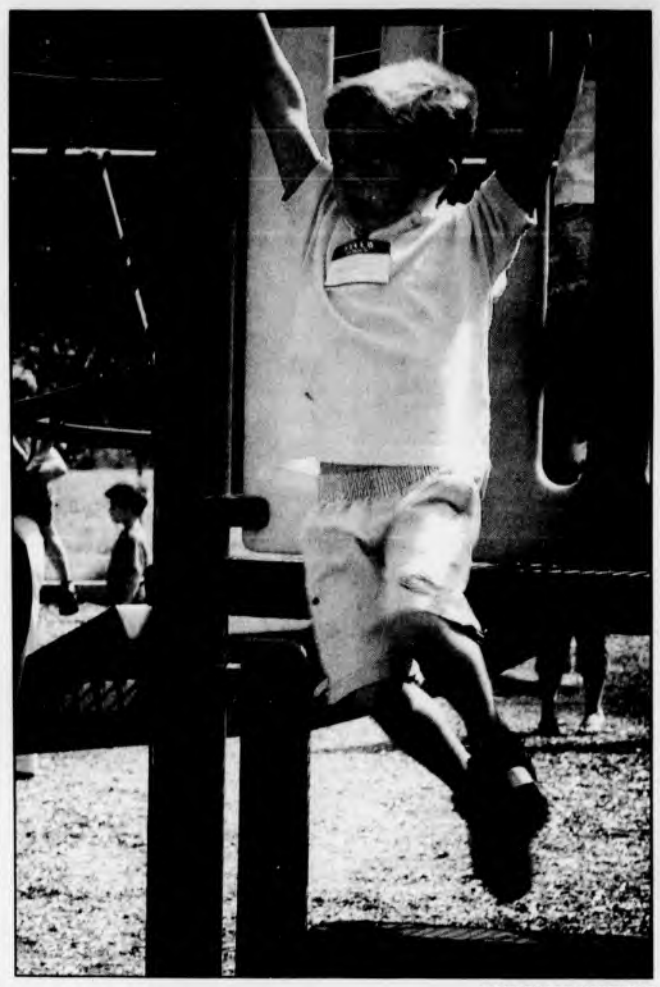
Playgroups meet weekly with members taking turns hosting at their homes. The groups are assigned by age and typically meet for two hours. Playgroups are only offered for members, and there is an additional $15 charge to cover theme parties and mailing expenses. Playgroups usually begin meeting by mid-October, depending on how quickly members enroll. Residents who wish to participate should turn membership forms in as soon as possible indicating playgroup preference. Participants will be contacted with their group specifics by the end of October, and there will be a playgroups welcome coffee on Oct. 8.

"It's awesome when you're new to town to have people show you the ropes," said Schneider, adding being able to have someone to can turn to who can tell you where the preschools are, where the best beaches are, and where to get your nails done is invaluable information when you're new to town.

But Schneider said many residents who participate in the Newcomers have very similar situations to hers and haven't joined as newcomers to town. "They don't get involved when they first move to town," but become involved later on when they have had a change in their lives. "In addition to welcoming residents, we really help people thorough transitions. If they've just stopped working, or their kids are just going off to school, and they're looking for more things to keep busy," the Newcomers' club can fulfill that need, she said.

There are many longstanding "interest groups" like the playgroups, hosted by the Newcomers Club, which members continue organizing year after year. The groups help facilitate new friendships between residents with similar interests.

Book group



The first Monday of every month the Newcomers Club hosts a book group, where participants have an "Oprah-style" roundtable discussion about a recommended book. Conversation is light and some members have been known to participate in the social part of the meeting without having read the book. The first book to be discussed will be, "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Nighttime," by Mark Haddon, at the first book group, Sept. 13.

The third Thursday of every month is Ladies' Night Out, when women of all ages can take a break from the daily grind, whatever that may be, and get out for some female fun. The location for the first ladies night out for this season has yet to be announced, but it will most likely be held at a spa on Sept. 23. Past girls' night outs have included jewelry making parties, an after hours get-together at a local restaurant, where they were taught how to make an appetizer then ate their creations while sipping wine, and sometimes its a casual night over one of the ladies' homes.

Every Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday the club hosts a walking group. Members decide where they would like to walk, and choose different locations from Wompatuck State Park to Whitney Woods, as well as different start times to best accommodate those who would like to come along.

There are also club-wide parties at various key times of the year, including the fall welcome party, holiday party, and St. Patrick's Day party, to name a few. There are parties for children as well, which are a great opportunity for the children to join in on the socializing and make some new friends as well. Children's parties are held near Halloween, during the winter holidays, and at Easter.

For more information, please visit the Newcomers' Web site at www.scnewcomers.com or contact one of the Newcomers' co-presidents Laurie Schneider at (781) 544-7311 or Paula Jewell at (781) 545-2191. For registration and playgroup information, please contact Jen Harris at (781) 544-3910. There are currently openings on the Newcomers' board and volunteers are wanted to fill a position on the hospitality committee as well as to help out with the interest groups.

Brown who both have business experience; and selectmen Fred Koed and Rob Spofford, held its first meeting Monday. The committee has been charged with producing between three and five potential candidates for the position to the Board of Selectmen, which will ultimately choose who the next town manager will be.

Spofford said he would try to get the committee on the agenda for the Sept. 14 Board of Selectmen meeting.

It is still very early in the process, but Spofford, who was voted chairman of the committee, said 15 résumés have been received already, and advertising will greatly increase over the next couple of weeks. The board has decided to post the position on Internet job sites as well, most likely sites comparable to monster.com and hotjobs.com. Time is of the essence, as the selectmen would like to see a new town manager in place for the Special Town Meeting slated for the second week of November.

"If we could get someone here in time for the Special Town Meeting, they could be there to hear the issues, although they might not necessarily participate," Spofford said. To help speed the process along, some members thought it might be beneficial to hire some additional help. Spofford said the town had received correspondence from a third party search firm, which is interested in helping the town fill the position, and the idea should at least be discussed.

"We're doing a passive campaign," said Pease, adding when the advertisements go out, the town waits to hear from prospective candidates, which may take some time. He said a search firm can actively go out and approach potential candidates who might be a good fit for the job, which is something people in town wouldn't have the time to do. He said there could be employees who are currently happy with their job, but might consider moving on if they heard about a good opportunity, and recruiters can use their contacts to get the word out. With a résumé deadline of Sept. 28, "A good search firm can speed things up," he said.

Spofford agreed that time is a factor in the search process. "The sooner the better. We have a lot of issues we're dealing with," he said. However, hiring a search firm could cost the town between $12,000 and $18,000.

McGee was quick to point out, "There is no budget for this," and many agreed that with the process still so new, there may be abundant candidates once the word gets out. Spofford said he had heard from Duxbury Town Manager Rocco Longo, that Cohasset was "going to get inundated," with applications once it was made known the town was actively looking for a new town manager. Mark Haddad, the former town manager who resigned in May, held the position for seven years and was paid $105,475 a year. Finance Director Michael Buckley has been serving as acting town manager since Haddad stepped down and is not seeking the town manager post on a permanent basis. At this stage, without much advertising, résumés are already beginning to flow in steadily, and spending money on a search firm might prove to be a waste, the committee said.

Flynn said when the schools were looking for a new superintendent, the School Committee had discussed hiring a consultant to help in their search. However, with the money it would cost, and given the desirability of Cohasset, the committee decided to try advertising only and see how the process unfolded and "We had plenty of good candidates," he said. Flynn said he would recommend the town do the same, and wait to see what happens once advertising really begins.

Brown said if the town is going to ask a potential town manager to be fiscally responsible, it should lead by example and not spend the money for a search firm if it doesn't have to. Everyone agreed, and if the committee feels it needs to hire outside help after some time passes, the issue can be revisited.

Now that résumés have begun coming in, the committee would like to begin narrowing down potential candidates. However, members of the committee said while they might think they have an idea of what the town needs, at the end of the day, the selectmen will be the new town manager's boss and their input is critical. "We don't want to deliver the wrong guy," said Flynn.

The committee discussed what it thought were some important qualities for a town manager to have, including budgetary experience, being able to manage contracts, and long-range planning skills, but without selectmen input to rate what the most important qualities will be, the committee could present wonderful candidates which might not be what the selectmen are looking for. "We need to find out what we're searching for," said Flynn.

Pease said it would be helpful if selectmen could come up with five things a town manager would have to carry out over the next two years in order to be considered successful in town as well as attributes the perfect candidate would possess, to enable the committee to rank candidates accordingly. By having a set of unwavering criteria, it will give both the town and potential candidates a better understanding for whether they'll be a good match for the town.

It was suggested either Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley or DeVito, who is acting as Town Manager until after Labor Day while Buckley is on vacation, contact Haddad to ask him what he feels a new town manager should do in order to be successful, and what qualities should the committee look to avoid. DeVito said someone would make the call.

Spofford said he would try to get the committee on the agenda for the Sept. 14 Board of Selectmen meeting, and he would ask that each member come to the meeting prepared with a list of attributes, ranked in order of importance, for potential candidates. With budget season on the horizon, "We really need to get this done as quickly as we can," he said.

ART FOR TEENS

The South Shore Art Center is offering several classes that will be of special interest to teenagers. The fall course lineup includes High School Studio—2D & 3D Projects. This course is designed for high school students considering pursuing an art career or including a portfolio with their school admissions packet. A variety of assignments will be completed in both two and three dimensional media, including pencil, colored pencil, charcoal, watercolor, pastel and ceramics. Assignments will be focused on observational drawing, portrait, and sculpture required for portfolios.

The course allows high school artists the opportunity to enhance and supplement artwork to be used for admission to art school or college. Teen Printmaking Workshop will explore printmaking applications. Students will learn methods and techniques. There will be individual guidance as well as a group demonstration and discussions. Emphasis will be on developing the student's own expressive style and building his/her portfolio. This workshop will meet on the weekend enabling busy high school students to participate. For information about these classes or other autumn offerings at the South Shore Art Center call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org

Italian feast has the flavor of old country

Sept. 5 event in Hingham

By Ove Pygh Wilche
CORRESPONDENT

PHOTOS/OVE PYGH WILCHE

Padre Vincenzo from the Sacred Heart Church in Boston will lead the procession again this year.

Again it is time for one of the biggest events in the area. This year, as always, the Italian Feast takes place on the Sunday before Labor Day (Sept. 5). As in previous years, the committee invites local residents to participate in the festivities and enjoy the day. The occasion is the celebration of La Madonna della Luce (Mary of Light) the patron saint of Palermiti, Italy. Most of the Italian immigrants who settled in Hingham are from this town. Since the late 1920s these immigrants have had an annual feast celebrating the Madonna. First it took place in South Hingham, but from 1957 the Feast was moved to its present location on Pine Street in North Hingham.

The celebration is, of course, religious, but it is also a feast, a party, and first a family event. The festivities begin with a procession that starts from the intersection of Hull Street (Route 228) and Pine Street at 10 a.m. Shortly after, there is an outdoor mass followed by a picnic lunch with each family bringing its own food. Various activities are available for the children during the afternoon. In the early evening the entertainment is for the whole family and late at night the adults have an opportunity to dance to the music of an Italian band.

"One may think it is a strictly Italian thing," says Domenic Sica, president of the Feast and continues, "However, although we are Italians we are also Hinghamites and proud of it. So, bring the family, come on over, share the day with your Italian-Hinghamite neighbors, and have a fun time."

One thing is for sure. The Italian Feast offers entertainment of all kinds and for all ages. Last year a children's ride was introduced and became so popular that it will be there again this year. The raffle in the late afternoon offers plenty of surprises. The prizes are all donated by local businesses and no one knows what is up for grabs until the raffle begins. However, one will find several "goodies" on the list and previous years winners have walked away with stereo equipment, TV sets, and cameras. So, there is all reason to buy a ticket and "gamble."

In addition, the proceeds are donated to the Italian Feast, which all by itself is a reason to buy tickets. Sergio Pungitore, Treasurer says, "Although many people donate time and materials, it takes money to arrange the Feast. We are also constantly making improvements to the grounds. So, we need all the support we can get."

Beer, wine, and soft drinks have been sold on the premises for many years. However, although families brought food, they often had only enough for the luncheon and nothing to eat for dinner. To satisfy the demand, food was for sale for the first time last year. This was such a success that again this year's attendants can buy Italian sausages grilled over an open fire and garnished with roasted peppers and onions. When accompanied by an Italian beer, this menu is a true Italian treat.

Otherwise, the program follows tradition. As in previous years, the outdoor mass will be conducted by Padre Vincenzo from the Sacred Heart Church in Boston. The Roma Band of South Boston will again provide music during the procession and the mass. Members of the committee will decorate the grounds with banners in Italian colors and the chapel will, again, show a beautiful display of flowers.

La Madonna

The central figure of the day is, of course, La Madonna della Luce (Mary of Light) depicted in a beautiful wooden statue. As the celebration in Hingham became a tradition, immigrants who were from Palermiti donated the funds needed for a statue. Skillful craftspeople in Florence, Italy did the carving and the statue was shipped to Hingham. Today, the arrival of the Madonna marks the beginning of the Feast. From the intersection of Hull Street (Route 228) and Pine Street the procession will go to the chapel on Oak Street. When the statue is placed by the chapel it is time for the mass and the Feast is on.

What should also be observed is that the feast is an excellent opportunity to get the flavor and touch of Italian culture and tradition. The mass is in Latin and throughout the day one should expect to hear the Italian language. In addition, the setting under the tall trees, the long tables where the families gather for lunch, and the food trays and wine jars served during the luncheon create a scene as seen in an Italian movie. However, this should not stop anyone from attending the Feast. Although many of the attendants are first generation immigrants, everybody is bilingual and Italians are famous for their hospitality. So much more the reason for sharing the day with our Italian neighbors.

All in all, any people who want to relax, have fun, get a taste of Italy, or just forget the world and all its trouble for a couple of hours should attend the Italian Feast. It is great fun and the perfect anti-stress therapy. So, mark Sept. 5 in the calendar and "Parliamo Italiano" — let us speak Italian for the day.

Couple opens upscale dog spa

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

A constant theme that flows through every aspect of John and Christina Gargano's life together is that of "puppy love". The Norwell couple owns and operates the elegant and upscale Barkleys Dog Spa that recently opened on Route 3A in Cohasset. Upon entering this canine oasis, visitors are surrounded by an assortment of stylish yet functional accessories and products for all breeds and sizes of "man's best friend" and their doting owners.

"It is our goal to have clients come here and know that we are trustworthy, ethical and will give every dog personal and individual attention."

— John Gargano, Barkleys Dog Spa

"This is a dream come true," states John while discussing his business. "Dogs have always been important in my life. I wanted to create a place where dogs and their families can come for quality products and service and have the animal's best interest in mind. It is our goal to have clients come here and know that we are trustworthy, ethical and will give every dog personal and individual attention."

Although around dogs throughout his life, for many years John found the animals were a passion and hobby for him. He was a trainer and operated a kennel, activities that confirmed his desire to work with dogs a career. He was particularly interested in helping dogs in need of rehabilitation. He studied to perfect his methods, but found he had the natural ability, patience and gentle manner to be effective and successful with the dogs. John was also an experienced auto mechanic, but an injury made it necessary for him to change his career focus. "It was hard, but it was also the best thing that could have happened to me," he reflected. "It led me to this", he said, referring to the new business and its finely appointed showroom.

"It's great to see him so happy," added his wife, Christina. "Now when he comes home at night, there is a light in his eye that shows he's really enjoying what he's doing."

Christina, originally from Pembroke, credited their mutual appreciation for dogs with the couple's introduction, subsequent romance and marriage. "I was searching for a companion for my dog," she shared. "I stopped at a kennel where John was working. I was looking for a puppy but instead, John offered to care for my dog while I worked. I am a nurse so my hours are long and varied. He was very accommodating and helped with the dog despite my schedule. This led to a friendship and then we dated and now, here we are!"

STAFF PHOTOS/BERT LANE

John and Christina Gargano are the owners of Barkleys Dog Spa off Rte. 3A.

There are lots of doggie treats on silver platters at Barkleys Dog Spa.

Christina played a major role in merchandising the store, which has an array of accessories, exclusive and unique items with well known and reputable names like Coach collectibles and Urban Hund. The assortment includes leashes and collars, dishes, bedding, toys and giftware. Something for every dog from Pekinese to St. Bernard and sheltie to German shepherd can be found. Decorative sparkling harnesses, finely made leather collars and colorful raingear are arranged on shelves with luxurious dog carriers, and practical travel accessories. One very popular item is the marine dog leash and collar, made specifically to withstand exposure to saltwater. "I learn from my customers," John explained. "Clearly, there are many dogs that spend time near the water and on boats with there owners in this area. Items that are not destroyed by exposure to the ocean are essential to many owners here, since we are located so close to the sea. Again, this is a specialty product that makes life more pleasant for both dog and man."

"Even rain gear is a functional item," he continued. "When dogs are out in the rain and get soaked, the first thing they do when they return to the house is to shake or roll on the floor and the moisture lands everywhere. This way they are protected and so are carpets and indoor furniture!"

In addition to the countless enticing products, many services are available for dogs, including consultations, grooming, and obedience training. John has studied with many of the world's leading authorities, including Matthew Margolis of PBS fame. "My goal in helping people train their dogs is real life obedience," John explained. "I don't strive to create a 'soldier' or a perfect show dog, but to teach the animal enough control to be able to walk appropriately, react obediently in panic situations and function as a member of a family so the experience is great for everyone."

Barkleys has space both out doors and in an adjacent indoor area where training takes place. "Anytime a new dog comes to me for training, I do an initial evaluation," John says. "Of course, any physical problems are referred to a veterinarian. Most behavioral problems once identified can be solved. Occasionally, with adopted animals we run into situations where animals have been abused and require a bit more rehabilitation, but with the proper help most dogs will be wonderful pets."

Grooming

Grooming services at Barkley's are tailored to each dog and performed by two groomers with many years of experience. The head groomer has been performing her work on pets and show dogs alike for more than thirty years. The Spa has a bathing unit with state of the art equipment, including an electronically operated table upon which the dogs step rather than be lifted, thus positioning them at the proper height for their treatment. A Hydrosurge Spa Bath allows dogs to have a solution mixed exclusively for their skin and coat type and applied as therapeutic massage by the groomers.

"Our products include everything from the basics to the most elite shampoos. We can tailor the solutions to each animal and the experience is a pleasant and calming one. We have the same philosophy with the styling we do," John explained. "Cuts and trims on the dogs are done after consultation with the owner. For example, we will not do a fancy poodle cut if the customer just wants a trim for the pet. The work of our groomers is truly art."

Clients who have visited Barkleys for grooming or spa treatment receive a follow up phone call from John. "We want to be sure our customers are pleased with the service and the dogs seem happy and comfortable," he said.

Barkley's also offers a high quality assortment of foods for dogs. "Our dog foods contain the same quality ingredients that would be found on our own dining tables," John said. "They are properly balanced and really contribute to the health and appearance of a dog." "Some are even mixed with Spring Water!" added Christina. An area of the boutique showcases a bakery counter, referred to as the "Gormet Bakery Treats". Customers may chose individual freshly baked delicacies for their pet as a special reward.

Furniture

As an ultimate "creature comfort" for a canine companion, the Boutique offers exceptionally well made dog furniture. The beds are finely constructed, hold their shape, and are washable. The fabrics and patterns can be chosen from swatches of material to blend with any home décor. "This is another 'extra' in which we have placed much thought about what we offer for pets," said John. Dogs are cherished members of a family and Barkleys is a place where they can be treated they way. To many dog owners, pets are like their children. People who have a dog know their important role in the daily family life.

Christina and John stress that this endeavor is not only a dream come true, but a genuine family effort. John's Dad frequently comes to the shop from his home in Quincy. He was a major participant in preparing the spa for opening, as he helped with painting and finishing touches to the interior. Christina's mother helps her with caring for the Gargano's two daughters; Sage, age 3 and Sophia, age 1-1/2. Both children enjoy visiting the store and are familiar with the many colorfully attractive items for sale. The Garganos are expecting a third child later this year. Two other very important family members are Griffin and Jetta, brother and sister Weimaraners who are the family pets.

Beds for dogs of all sizes are for sale at Barkleys.

"Having this business is lots of fun, but it is a huge commitment," said Christina. "It's all worth it because it is the fulfillment of the dream of a lifetime."

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news slows down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with September here, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasseters of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news about Greenbush.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, thanks to some recent spam we were up to 500 emails a day, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpeg attachments.

We still accept news by fax and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off here at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square at 73 South St., above the Cinnamon Bear.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send us flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Here's the scoop on how to get your news in the Mariner:

Email: mford@cnc.com

FAX: 781-741-2931

Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043

Sports news email: mspellman@cnc.com

Try to have your news to the Mariner by Monday morning for that week's issue. We accept obituaries and letters to the editor until noon, Tuesday.

We have forms available for wedding and engagement announcements with complete instructions at the Mariner office.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime.

Call or email Mary Ford, editor, at 781-741-2933 (mford@cnc.com); or staff reporter Samantha Brown, at 781-741-2935 (sambrown@cnc.com).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ecologically safe lawn care is critical

TO THE EDITOR:

The Water Resources Protection Committee (WRPC) is a citizens group advising the Water Department and Board of Selectmen on matters concerning the condition of the watershed and ultimately the quality of Cohasset drinking water. Recognizing that improper use of lawn chemicals and fertilizer directly impact the water quality of Lily Pond the WRPC is initiating a program to disseminate information on and encourage the use of ecological methods lawn care within the watershed of Lily Pond and town wellfields (an area occupied by approximately 50 percent of the town's residents).

A recent survey by the Water Dept. has determined that Lily Pond is seriously impacted by consistently high levels of nutrients from non-point sources within its watershed. High levels of nutrients promote excessive algae and plant growth in the pond reducing its capacity and seriously degrading the quality of its water. The result of which are reflected in the perceived taste and odors to the users along with subtle increases in dissolved organic byproducts which could lead to health related issues. The trend, if not reversed, will demand more extensive and expensive treatment at the water plant. Since these "non-point" sources are the primary contributors of these nutrients, one inexpensive answer is to encourage efficient and judicious use of lawn fertilizers and chemicals by homeowners in the watershed to minimize the introduction of these nutrients in runoff and groundwater.

The WRPC in concert with the Board of Health and the Water Department has begun to develop a program to alert Cohasset homeowners to the probable impact of their actions on the water we drink and to help them get the information to make informed decisions in how they maintain their lawns and planting to minimize nutrients and chemicals leaving their property.

As part of this program:

a) The WRPC will be providing notices in water bills, local business and newspapers along with links on the town and water department Web sites to increase the practical information available to the public.

b) The WRPC will be working with the Board of Health and the citizen groups working to stem the effects of nutrients and pollutants on Little Harbor and the Gulf. This will draw on a larger body of concerned citizens and leverage the effect of our message.

c) We will begin working with the DPW and the Board of Selectmen to develop a set of practical guidelines for management of the town's parks and grasslands.

d) We request homeowners who are currently practicing ecologically-aware lawn care to contact the WRPC (jkinch@hotmail.com) to tell us how you minimize the use of chemicals and fertilizers on your property.

We hope to become the local resource for management information and help promote practices that maintain and enhance the quality of water we drink. Going forward, the WRPC will be become a resource to Cohasset on practical methods of natural ecologically safe lawn care. We invite the public's comments and suggestions.

Drive-through in village opposed

TO THE EDITOR:

It is hard to imagine that our Board of Appeals can even remotely consider granting a permit for a Dunkin' Donuts drive-through in our town center. The traffic study which accompanies the petition concedes that a congested town center such as ours is not a typical place for a drive-through. The traffic study makes no concrete assessment of the traffic impact because the consultant says he is unable to quantify what it might be, though he conjectures that there will not be an increase in traffic into the village.

However, commonsense suggests that in order for a coffee-and-donuts drive-through operation to be successful, there will be a tripling or quadrupling (or even more) of the current number of motor vehicles which will enter the present gas station driveway. This essentially will convert the driveway entrance from Main St. into a de facto roadway across the sidewalk, with all of the accompanying hazards for pedestrians, joggers, bicyclists, and baby strollers, not to mention other motor vehicles.

Our town has debated for years how we can best preserve and enhance the quintessential New England charm of our village area, with one of the principal objectives of the imminent renovation project being pedestrian safety. A coffee-and-donuts drive-through in the heart of the village is completely contrary to everything our town has been seeking to accomplish in the past decade of debate and discussion about this project.

HEALTH NOTES

Come on down and get checked out

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Each year in September, the Board of Health sponsors a Health Screening Day; the name changes depending on the sense of the way we think people in town are beginning to feel about 'health in general'. We, in the Board of Health jokingly refer to this as an opportunity to help stamp out disease, but that's not what the Health Fair (the old name) is about. It's really about getting an increasingly large number of citizens to be comfortable with the prodding, poking, and other things doctors do.

It's no secret, most of us hate to see a doctor – for fear something might be wrong, or whatever. But, it's also true that mortality statistics are filled with cases of those who've waited too long. So, we try to make the Health Fair a community event for all! Age or condition or ability to pay are not considerations. This is a time to learn about the health care system in our town.

Some of it is gratuitously commercial, but what's new. Much — no, most of it is about helping people no matter what. As a Board of Health member, I'd like to see teens with acne; 50-year-olds with back pain; elders who need knee surgery, and a few with trouble breathing — meet those who tell about their exercise regimen; or swap diet info; or talk about their latest running or walking practices. It's also a chance to come down and sample healthy snacks from several local eating establishments served by volunteers during your time at the fair.

So mark your calendar for Health Screening Day from 10 a.m.-2 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 14 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave.

Free screenings and programs include:

Vision and hearing (sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club), magnet therapy, osteoporosis testing (provided by the Norwell VNA); nutrition and water purification; blood pressure (bring your Sphygmomanometer [blood pressure cuff] and have it calibrated); massage therapy; oral cancer screening; Reiki; skin analyzer; smoking cessation; chiropractic care; and holistic care and acupuncture.

Doddering or sprinting; come down and get a free healthy snack served by volunteers and provided by Stop and Shop, Starbucks Coffee, Atlantic Bagel, and Dunkin' Donuts. Meet others who think about their health, talk to people about it, and get some new ideas.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

Experts gather in Cohasset to ponder report on health of the Gulf River estuary

In order to promote its research into the health of the Gulf River estuary and to discuss possible solutions to non-point source pollution identified by student data for that region, the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) held a meeting on Aug. 25 at its Hagerty House laboratory-cum-conference facility with an impressive array of specialists.

"The meeting was a high level, informed discussion about very serious, complex issues that require joint action between the two towns of Scituate and Cohasset," reflected Eric Oddleifson, president of the Gulf Association. "CSCR students and faculty are playing a hugely important role here."

Representatives at the conference included municipal and state officials, including agents of the Cohasset and Scituate Boards of Health, a member of the state-sponsored coastline stewardship agency Coastal Zone Management, as well as engineers and consultants, including two under contract to assess Scituate's storm-water drainage and sewer systems. Also present were delegates representing the concerns of local citizens, such as the Gulf Association, the non-profit advocate for responsible protection and preservation of the fragile ecosystem that defines the Gulf River watershed. In addition, a regional coordinator of the Massachusetts Bays National Estuary Program, brought to the table valuable insights into the role that outreach and educational tools can play in addressing these complex issues. The catalyst for such a heady meeting, it bears repeating, was six weeks of monitoring data collected by CSCR students working on the second year of a Gulf River Study project.

"That our students produce data that can play a meaningful role in the professional lives of environmental engineers, town officials, and watershed stewardship groups is a mission come true," said meeting coordinator and CSCR president, Jack Buckley. "But more important, the meeting really made it clear to students that their work is being taken seriously. That's the best compliment the students can hope for."

Buckley framed the purpose of the meeting as the first step in producing a grant application for the funding of a Cohasset-Scituate collaborative project to remediate non-point source pollution in the Gulf River Estuary. After giving the attendees a chance to review an extensive compilation of the CSCR's collected data, there was some wrangling about the exact severity of the pollution. To overcome the multiple interpretations of the data Mr. Buckley sought clarification, asking, "Are [the attendees] agreed that there is in fact a problem [in the Gulf River]?" – to which all present assented thoroughly.

CZM representative Jason Burtner then explained to the group that a similar project was funded by CZM for a North Shore town. Given that the grant review period which limits official input to prospective applicants had not yet begun, Burtner chaired the meeting as the resident expert on both technical issues and project proposal guidelines. Further discussion ensued, with various parties addressing procedural grant application issues and substantive pollution problems that lie at the heart of the data. While Gulf Association founding member and current vice president, John Hartshorne, advocated "action that addresses the source of the problem," Burtner carefully outlined CZM's vision that ideal projects address not only assessment and corrective measures, but implementation of broader changes, including educational strategies and municipal-wide changes known as best management practices. "I think we can do both here," concluded Burtner.

The group clearly reached consensus that a collaborative grant application will be pursued to enhance work already in progress in both towns, to remediate the identified problem, and to improve the capacities of both towns to address other, or future non-point source pollution problems in the shared Gulf River estuary. Some of the tasks identified by the group included the following objectives. To continue water quality monitoring and to better determine if there is a connection between rainfall and pollution spikes, including sampling in storm drains and catch basins. To improve municipal records on septic systems, including investigations into illicit discharges To delineate precise drainage areas where "hot spots" occur, especially in relationship to surrounding land use. To launch public education initiatives about septic system care and pet waste disposal

Jennifer Sullivan, health agent for Scituate, was enthusiastic about the potential for accomplishing such simple tasks as updating town records. "I would love to have our septic database brought up to date. It just takes time that we don't have. It would be great to have students assisting us with these tasks."

In closing, Burtner pointed out that much of the student work and the proposed grant application are the necessary follow-up work to the Natural Resource Inventory of the Gulf River, a document produced in March 2003, and completed by the Urban Harbors Institute of UMass Boston. "The Inventory provides an overview of the work that needs to be done in the Gulf River. It is the macro guide to stewardship of the Gulf River estuary. Recommendations 5 and 6 serve as the foundation for this project before us, so we're actually right on target."

In the post-conference cookout, adult and student participants shared sentiments about the overall success of the meeting. Cohasset Board of Health chairman, a well-known champion of CSCR, went even further, however.

"The meeting represented a significant development. It represents collaboration among the municipalities of Cohasset and Scituate, and it represents the model of how students can play a very active and critical role in working with local and state officials in addressing pressing environmental issues," Steve Bobo said. "The entire project is a template for activity that should go on in all of our water bodies."

Ryan Davis is a student at the CSCR. He is an upcoming senior at Phillips Academy in Andover and lives in Hingham.

Famous for being famous

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I was browsing through an old entertainment magazine that someone left on the coffee table the other day when I came across the name of Paris Hilton and the thought occurred to me that there is a growing number of people who are famous just for being famous.

And she can also claim a distant — did someone say "very distant?" — relationship to President Ronald Reagan.

A few years ago, it was Rula Lenska, who was nominated for the Famous People's Hall of Fame by Diane White, who I still regard as the best columnist ever put on waivers by the Boston Globe. I don't think Diane knew what Rula was famous for either.

A few years before that it was Kato Kaelein, whose tenuous claim to fame was as a non-paying house guest of O. J. Simpson, who is famous for his Brentwood ex-wife-icide. Kato tried and failed to parlay his seven-minutes of fame into jobs as an actor or talk show host.

Later, Kato discovered how fleeting was fame when he tried to get into a Baltimore Orioles game on a celebrity discount and the ticket taker said, "Kato who?" Presumably he has gone back to his old job of boy toy, hopefully for someone who gets along better with his ex-wife.

But I digress . . .

Paris started climbing the ladder of fame as a teenager when a very adult video starring her and her then-boyfriend "in flagrante delecto,' as we used to say, suddenly appeared on the Internet.

I don't know anything about it personally, of course, but friends tell me that you can still tune in to Paris' video debut if you leave your name, age and swear that you'll watch it only for its redeeming social qualities.

Did I mention that Paris is a heiress of the wealthy Hilton hotel clan, which includes Nicky, who was married briefly to Elizabeth Taylor, and Conrad, who was married briefly to Zsa Zsa Gabor?

And she can also claim a distant — did someone say "very distant?" — relationship to President Ronald Reagan since I am told that one of her aunts on her mother's side was once married to the brother of Nancy Davis, who became Nancy Reagan.

Have you got that straight? I hope so because I'm not going over it again.

Right now, Paris can be seen, fully clothed, with her friend, Nicole Richie, every Wednesday night at 9 o'clock on the Fox Channel in "The Simple Life," what is described as one of those "reality" shows in which the two rich, pampered babes play at being one of us plebes.

I never watch it myself, of course, but my friends tell me that in a recent episode Paris and Nicole posed as maids in a nudist colony. How much simpler can life get than that?

If you haven't had enough Paris Hilton for one lifetime, you can duck down to Barnes and Noble on your lunch hour today (Sept. 1) and pick up a copy of "The Tinkerbell Hilton Diaries," the tell-all biography of her teacup Chihuahua.

And her own memoir, "Confessions of an Heiress: A Tongue-in-Chic Peek Behind the Pose," is due to hit the stands next Tuesday.

Such is fame when you're 23-years-old and famous for being famous.

Cultivating the radiant rudbeckias

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

Rudbeckia 'Irish Eyes' offers a unique lime-green central disk and a number of wonderful dwarf varieties including R. 'Toto are available for containers or the front of the border.

One of the greatest challenges for a perennial gardener is to create a border with color and beauty throughout the growing season. Most of us acquire the majority of our perennials during the spring and early summer often selecting those plants that are already showing colorful blossoms. By mid-August many gardens may become monochromatic as green as foliage predominates both sunny and shady borders. Plants that feature tinted foliages are particularly valuable during the latter half of the summer but there are many hardy, reliable perennials that provide extended bloom in the weeks to come.

On dreary, overcast days, the sunny, golden yellow blooms of black-eyed Susans (Rudbeckia spp.) seem to glow from across the garden. Throughout South Shore landscapes, few perennials are so universally cultivated as these popular carefree coneflowers. Yellow, gold, or orange petals surrounding brown, black, or green cone-shaped central disks characterize members of the Rudbeckia family. These North American natives perform their best given full sun, good soils, and consistent moisture.

Black-eyed Susans (R. fulgida) are hardy, free-flowering perennials that spread by rhizomes. The familiar 3 to 4 inch golden daisies, highlighted by black central disks, bloom for weeks from late summer well into the fall season. The selection, R. 'Goldsturm', which grows 2 to 3 feet tall, is particularly desirable, as it tends to be somewhat more restrained in growth with marvelous branching and handsome foliage. Coneflowers are perfect complements to ornamental grasses, sedums, asters, and chrysanthemums. Plants colonize readily and mass plantings offer bold, welcome color in the late summer landscape.

Brown-eyed Susans (R. triloba) and Gloriosa daisies (R. hirta) provide similar bursts of late summer color but tend to be less persistent from season to season than their hardy relatives. The leaves of these annual, biennial, or short-lived perennials appear soft and fuzzy and although some may return reliably for a few years, others may succumb to winter cold. I tend to allow the decorative seed heads to remain throughout the winter months for their ornamental value and to ensure the continuous appearance of these dramatic, showy daisies. In late spring, the plentiful offspring are transplanted throughout my borders where their giant blooms begin to appear in mid-July and provide a pleasant contrast to plantings of daylilies and mixed perennials.

Rudbeckia triloba is technically a biennial plant that exhibits a multitude of 1-1/2 inch golden daisies with brownish-purple centers that completely smother the bushy 3 to 5 foot plants. Seedlings generally appear the following season and bloom the second year. Gloriosa daisies display particularly large golden-yellow flower heads, often tinted or banded with shades of brown, orange, rust, mahogany or red. Every seedling is a surprise. The Gloriosa daisies are one of the few flowers that I actually cut from my garden for indoor bouquets. I favor the boldly banded offspring and often eliminate those that lack multicolored blossoms. Rudbeckia 'Irish Eyes' offers a unique lime-green central disk and a number of wonderful dwarf varieties including R. 'Toto are available for containers or the front of the border.

Less widely grown are the cutleaf coneflowers, Rudbeckia laciniata and Rudbeckia nitida. Popular since Victorian times, Rudbeckia laciniata 'Golden Glow' tends to be a rapidly spreading perennial with 3-inch fully double yellow blossoms on 6-foot stems arising from a basal cluster of shiny, divided deep green leaves. A newer cultivar, R. 'Goldquelle' is less exuberant and more compact bearing similar double yellow blooms on 3-foot plants. Rudbeckia nitida 'Herbstsonne' or 'Autumn Sun' is a personal favorite that furnishes a marvelous architectural accent to my front entry and blooms for weeks with a profusion of bright yellow daisies highlighted by green central cones. I prefer the slightly softer yellow color of the drooping petals and the 4 to 7 foot stems rarely need support. The attractive seedheads are allowed to remain all winter attracting chickadees, tufted titmice, and goldfinches.

Add several members of the Rudbeckia family to your garden for color throughout the late summer and well into the fall season.

Suzanne Mahler is an avid gardener, photographer and lecturer who has been developing the 1.5-acre property surrounding her home in Hanover for more than 25 years. Her weekly gardening column 'Green Thumbs Up' has appeared in the Mariner newspapers for nearly a decade. She is a member of two local garden clubs, past President of the New England Daylily Society, an overseer for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and is employed at two garden centers.

Planning Board meetings are back on track

August spelled quorum trouble

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Planning Board will be playing catch-up this week and next, as the inability to get a quorum for its past two meetings has resulted in the need for meetings two weeks in a row, which will both have packed agendas.

When its Aug. 25 meeting was cancelled, the board decided it would have to schedule another for the following week, rather than wait for the next meeting, in order to give every issue enough time to be thoroughly discussed.

Wednesday, Sept. 1, after the Mariner went to press, the board was slated to discuss a large house site plan review, DiNero's restaurant expansion, the Ox Pasture Lane subdivision, and the possibility of the South Main Street Tedeschi's moving from its side of the street across to the Olympic Citgo station. Wednesday, Sept. 8, the largest item the board will discuss are plans for the combined KoKo Island and Hair Affair site.

The Planning Board had planned to take on a large house site plan for a home slated to be built on Bow Street at its Aug. 25 meeting. However, without a quorum, the board could not make any decisions. That night, the board said all the paperwork was in order and it did not need any more information, and with a quorum, it would have likely approved the plan that night. The Planning Board expects it will be able to approve the plans the second time around.

This site plan review is the second review to come before the Planning Board since the bylaw was passed at the annual Town Meeting this spring. The large house review is triggered when the plans for a home exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet. Plans under the bylaw must take abutters into consideration, as well as the surrounding neighborhood.

DiNero's restaurant was also slated to come back before the board last night to present plans to redesign the site to better accommodate guests. Plans to renovate the restaurant include the expansion of the function room, a new parking configuration with more spaces, new landscaping, and aesthetic improvements to the building, including a new awning and new windows.

Wednesday, Sept. 8, the largest item the board will discuss are plans for the combined KoKo Island and Hair Affair site.

Finding a solution to problems faced by residents at Ox Pasture Lane was also on the Planning Board agenda. Residents have expressed concern that construction is not progressing as quickly as it should be and the homes they have been living in for more than six months have yet to be completed. They say the overall appearance of the project is poor, landscaping has not been completed, and the site is both an eyesore and a hazard for those who live there and for those who visit.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt said the property owners have come to an agreement with the builders, and the two are working together to solve the issues, but the board will discuss whether procedures and policies need to be revised to ensure situations like it do not happen in the future. "I think it will be a terrific development, but it's clear the developer will have to come into compliance," said Pratt.

There are seven total lots on the site, which became a subdivision in 2000, and Pratt said four lots have been released to date. The last action taken by the board on the property was in 2002, when the board worked with the fire department and developer to bring a bridge into compliance on the site. The fire department was worried the bridge wouldn't be able to accommodate for the town's ladder truck, which is the heaviest piece of fire apparatus. Pratt said the developer made all the necessary changes and the project seemed to be on track.

But somewhere along the way, the project stopped making the progress it should, and Pratt said the problems residents of Ox Pasture Lane are currently experiencing, "demonstrates we may need to strengthen one or more sections of our subdivision bylaws."

The board was also slated to make a recommendation to the Zoning Board of Appeals regarding George Roukounakis' Olympic Citgo Station, located at 55 South Main St. Tedeschi Food Shops, through its attorney Charles Humphreys, filed a petition for a special permit with the ZBA Aug. 16, which if approved would allow both Tedeschi's and the Citgo station to operate from Roukounakis' site. Plans also include a drive-through donut shop, possibly a Dunkin' Donuts, which would have a third owner. The Planning Board will make a recommendation to the ZBA, but the plans will also need to formally come before the board for a site plan review at some point in the future.

Sept. 8, the board is slated to meet with representatives from the Nauset Group, which is looking to renovate and conjoin KoKo Island and Hair Affair, keeping the former as a family-style restaurant and transforming the latter into a donut shop with a drive-up window. The project has filed for a special permit with the ZBA, and the Planning Board will also need to approve a site plan for the project. The planning board recommended the ZBA not approve the special permit which would make the drive-up window possible, as the board did not feel it had enough information at that time to recommend otherwise, but the discussion will be ongoing, and nothing is final as of yet.

After hearing the concerns of abutters who worry about the potential traffic, noise and air pollution a drive-up window could cause, developers began looking for ways to help mitigate the window's effects. Developers have been compiling information from Dunkin' Donuts headquarters regarding typical traffic flows at other locations, and will bring back their findings once complete. Pratt said in the event developers do not have all the information they would like, the item could be pushed back to another meeting.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives and senators' votes on three roll calls from recent sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$700,000 FOR YMCA ORGANIZATIONS (H 4850)

House 132-22, Senate 32-5, overrode Gov. Romney's $700,000 veto reduction (from $2 million to $1.3 million) in funding for matching grants to boys' and girls clubs, YMCA and YWCA organizations and non-profit community centers. The veto also eliminates a $500,000 earmark for capital projects to the Boston YMCA and $200,000 to the Lynn YMCA. Override supporters said these funds are important for the capital projects of these facilities that provide important programs for youths. They noted that many at-risk youths use these facilities. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the funding because these two programs were not recommended. (A "Yea" vote is for the $700,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $700,000).

$6.8 MILLION FOR OFFICE OF TRAVEL AND TOURISM (H 4850)

House 150-2, Senate 36-2, overrode Gov. Romney's $6,884,531 veto reduction (from $17,053,305 to $10,168,774) in funding for the operation and administration of the state's Office of Travel and Tourism. The veto also eliminates earmarking for many local projects in cities and towns across the state. Override supporters said the funding is important to a wide range of projects and organizations that are a key part of communities across the state. They noted that many of these projects and organizations attract tourists and include museums, chambers of commerce, theaters and visitor information centers. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the funding because these programs were not recommended. (A "Yea" vote is for the $6,884,531. A "Nay" vote is against the $6,884,531).

$2,656,500 FOR DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS (H 4850)

House 136-17, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's $2,658,500 veto reduction (from $429,624,325 to $426,965,825) in funding for the Department of Corrections. The veto also eliminates specific earmarking of the funds including $1,008,500 to assist communities that host prisons, $875,000 for emergency safety equipment grants and $200,000 for the Aid to Incarcerated Mothers organization. Override supporters said this funding is important to the state's corrections system and would help communities, prison safety and jailed mothers. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the funding because these programs were not recommended. (A "Yea" vote is for the $2,658,500 A "Nay" vote is against the $2,658,500).

CHS golfers eye return to postseason for first time since 2001

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

On paper anyway, it appears South Shore League golf will be a lot more competitive this fall.

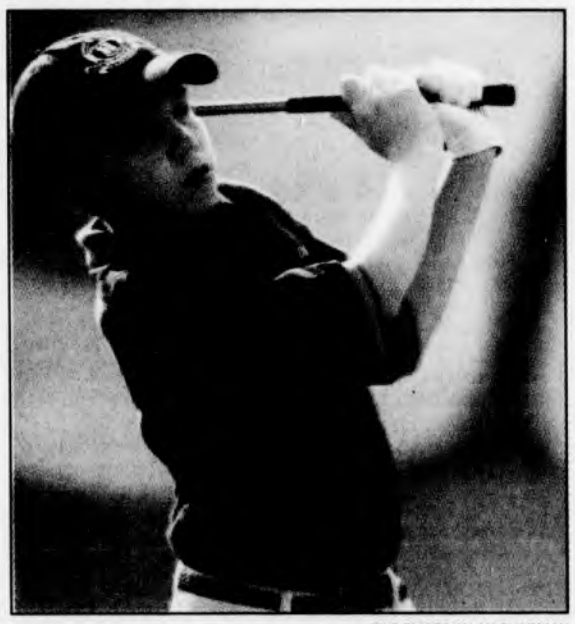
Numerous graduations at the top of the order for Harwich, Mashpee and Norwell—the three teams to finish ahead of Cohasset in the SSL standings last year— has Skippers veteran coach Torin Sweeney eyeing with growing confidence a return for his team to the state tourney for the first time since 2001 and possibly even a run at a league crown.

"I think the league is going to be more competitive than it has been in a number of years," said Sweeney, whose team opens its season this afternoon at Strawberry Valley in Abington versus SSL rival Abington (3:30p.m. start). "They've got a lot of new faces playing for the teams that have been the powers the last few years, and we return a pretty good mix of talent."

Sophomore Kevin Barber, who averaged a score of 40 per nine holes last season to burst on the SSL golf scene, is back in the number one spot for the Skippers and ready to face off against a new collection of top guns from the SSL.

"I feel pretty good having Kevin back there with a year's experience of playing in that number one spot under his belt," said Sweeney. "I think he's going to be one of the better players in the league this year and set the tone for us at the top of the lineup.

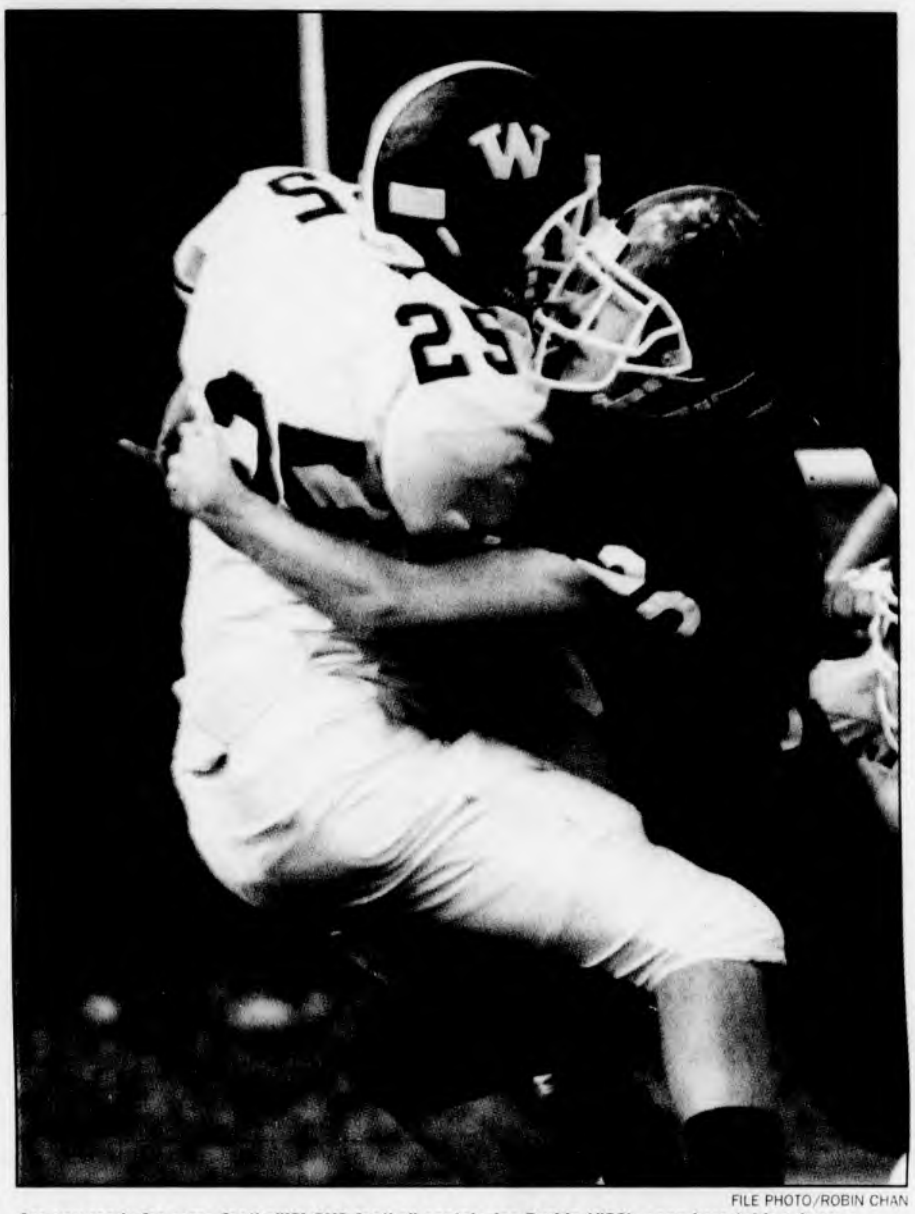
Senior captain Tim Pilcazak, a regular top four in the rotation since his sophomore year, appears to have the inside track on the number two spot to start the season.



"Tim has been hitting the ball well in practice, just like Kevin," reported Sweeney. "It looks like that's going to be a pretty solid one-two punch."

Things are still a bit up in the air behind these two, however.

The caps and gowns this spring claimed regular top four players Mike Devine and Mike Hajjar, last year's captain. And a move to New Jersey claimed senior Jack Carroll, another near fixture in last year's lineup.



"Losing Jack changes things around a little bit," conceded Sweeney. "He's a guy I probably could have plugged into that number three spot, and then had a very solid four, five, six behind him. Now, we're looking to have everyone take their game up a notch."

A certain character and identity has formed in the South Shore league over the past several seasons. Although each team and league match up presents a high level of competitiveness, since its restructuring in 2000, the South Shore League has become a three team sprint to the finish.

Abington, Norwell and Cohasset have entered each of the past three Novembers playing for the top spot in the league. Abington and Cohasset shared the honors back in 2001, with Cohasset going on to play in the Eastern Mass. MIAA Div. 5 playoffs. In 2002, Abington took late season victories over Cohasset and Norwell to clinch the league and eventually went on to finish as Super

Hey, I like to rip on overpaid, under-performing athletes as much as the next guy, but it seems to me folks are getting more than a bit carried away with their criticism of the bronze medal winning U.S. basketball team.

If nothing else, I give these 12 players and three coaches a good deal of credit for agreeing to go over there at all. A lot of the selection committee's top choices didn't answer the call, and there were good reasons for that…and security issues probably weren't even in the top five for a few of them.

First off, it was a no one situation for most of these guys. The only way the masses back home, largely ignorant of the rapid gains the game has made internationally over the last decade, would even be satisfied is if the U.S. team won every game by 30 plus points. Anything less stood to be a disappointment in way too many people's minds.

Of course, anyone who knew anything about the way the game has grown all over the globe in recent years and the difference between the international and NBA rules, knew this simply was not going to happen. But these guys gave up a healthy chunk of their off season to represent us anyway. Again, kudos to them.

Here are the facts:

- Basketball talent world wide is gaining on the U.S. by leaps and bounds. Round ball is now actually threatening to overtake soccer in terms of popularity in many countries. In terms of pure talent, it's unlikely the U.S. will ever be overtaken on this front, particularly given the unrivalled and plentiful financial inducements the sport has hanging out there in this country, but 80 percent of that chasm that was there a decade ago has been filled in and paved over.

- Every international team is coming up with game plans designed specifically to beat the U.S. Hey, Herb Brooks was able to pull it off and there are about a dozen international hoop teams out there right now a lot closer in talent to this U.S. basketball team than Herb's 1980 U.S. Olympic hockey team was to the top Russian team.

- The international game is vastly different. I'm sick of all the talking heads who are saying this is a cop out. How can anyone who watched even one quarter of the medal round games not rec-

JULIE ANN NEVERO

Oh the tears were flowing last week. There were some great things going on in the final week of Olympic competition and I couldn't get enough of it. I might be somewhat biased in making this statement, as I have always loved the Olympics, but I believe this particular Olympics were the best I've ever watched. One of the obvious reasons was the dominance of American athletes. As is the case in many sports, it's easier — and more fun — to watch your team when they are winning, and the US teams did plenty of that in Athens.

Some of the highlights for me were the stories from the pool, where American Michael Phelps won six gold and two bronze medals, not to mention the fact that he gave up his spot on the 4x100 Medley relay to give a teammate a chance to win gold. On the track, the US sweeps in the men's 400-meters and 200-meters were unfathomable and an American man (silver) and woman (bronze) medaled in the Marathon for the first time in what had seemed like an eternity.

How about the 2004 Games being the year of the American women's teams, as the US basketball, softball, beach volleyball, and soccer squads all won gold. On that note, here are some of my favorite events from last week:

End of an era

Okay, I couldn't have been the only one glued to my TV set last Thursday afternoon (or at least, I hope I wasn't) as the US women's soccer team played Brazil in the gold medal game in Athens. The excitement of having the American women in the final aside, the hype surrounding

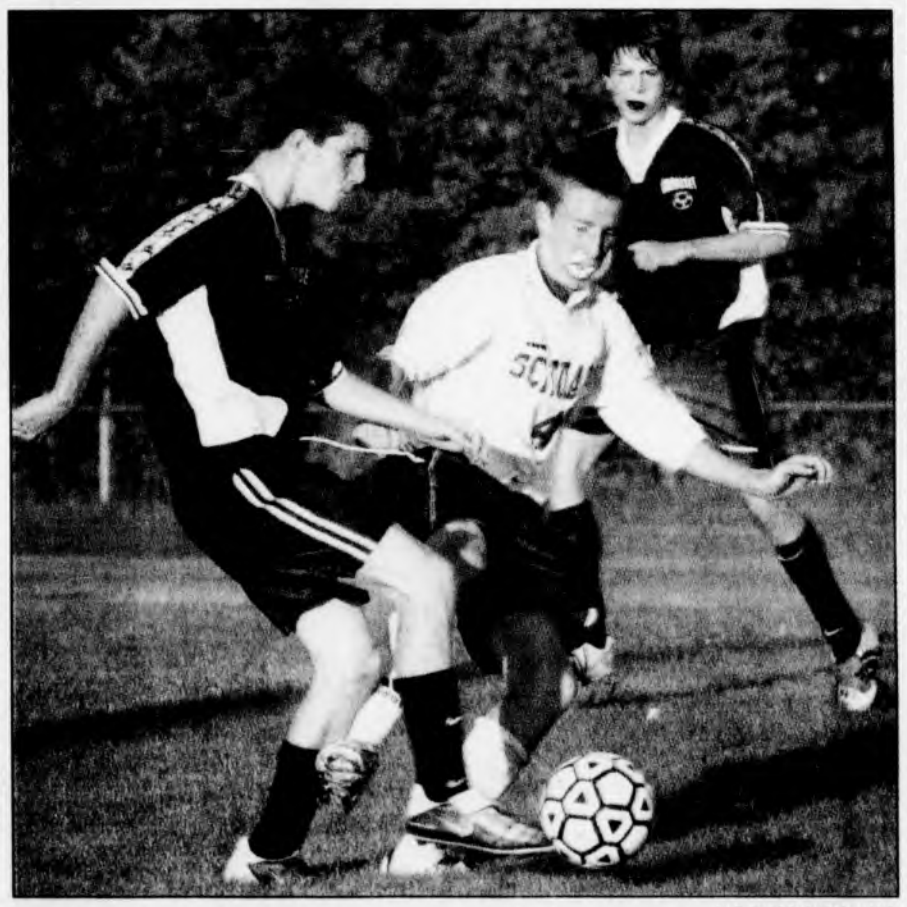
Graduation, transfer takes heavy toll on CHS boys soccer program

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM



Rob Leary stepped into a pretty sweet situation last year.

Taking over a Cohasset High boys soccer program that finished second in the South Shore League in 2002 and returned seven senior starters and nine seniors in all, much of the work was already done for the former Rockland High head coach.

The Skippers proceeded to go 14-4 in the regular season under their new head coach, blew out Avon in the opening round of the state tourney, 7-1, and then fell to eventual South Sectional champion Norwell in the quarterfinals, 2-0.

"It was a great year, I felt, especially considering I was Bowl Champions. Cohasset returned to capture the league title a year ago.

This season looks to be no different, but the gap may be closing come November. The South Shore League title race could begin to resemble the 100 meter gold medal race, with a tenth of a second, or a tie breaker deciding the eventual champion.

Cohasset

The defending champion Skippers have some serious question marks on offense. However, with eight of 11 starters returning to a defensive unit that was the stingiest last season among all Div. 5 teams in Eastern Mass, it's difficult to imagine them not being in the hunt for their third SSL crown in four years.

The defensive line returns seniors Kelvin Ferriera (the team sack leader) at defensive end, and Leo Clougherty and Matt Baroudi at the tackle positions. Seniors captains Matt Casey (second on the team with 71 tackles) and Ted Straughn will return for another season at linebacker. Unfortunately, team captain and leading tackler Tony Truglia (98 tackles)will be hard to replace at the outside linebacker position.

"He was our heart and soul on defense," noted seventh year CHS head coach Tony Rolfe.

Seniors Joe Durkin (the third tri-captain), D J Silvia, and Crandon Leahy return to the defensive backfield as a more experienced unit. The graduation of two-time Mariner All-Scholastic safety Chris Bilodeau, however, leaves some huge cleats to fill.

The offensive line, which paved the way for over 1,700 rushing yards last season, will have three returning members: junior left guard Nick Arment will start his third year, Casey returns at center and junior Dan McCarthy will more from tackle to tight end. There are several players vying to fill the void left by Mariner All-Scholastic guard Steven Davis, left tackle Dan Tarpey and tight end Sean Connolly. Freshman Jake Cuneo is one player Rolfe has identified as an early favorite to step into one of those starting roles.

"The offensive line is what's keeping me awake nights, right now," noted Rolfe with a humorless chuckle.

It seems unlikely Rolfe will find anyone who can provide everything Mariner All-Scholastic quarterback Mike Dooley did (1,050 yards of offense, rushing for 334 yards and eight touchdowns, and passing for 725 yards and six more TDs), but senior Crandon Leahy, a powerful 6-foot-2 natural athlete, will give it a shot.

A big loss was also felt at tailback with the graduation of DeWayne Morris. He rushed for 1,250 yards and nine TDs, last fall, emerging arguably as the top surprise of the 2003 season.

The lone returnee to the starting backfield is Straughn at fullback. Straughn is a bruising straight ahead runner and devastating blocker. Fellow captain Joe Durkin would appear to have the inside track to take over the lead running responsibilities, though Joey Kehoe, Brendan Michaud and Dave McKenna have also shown flashes.

With Bilodeau (28 receptions for 323 yards and 4 TDs) off to college, Silvia (14 receptions for 212 yards and 2 TDs) returns as the elder statesman of the receiving corp.

Norwell

The Clippers lost their bid at a Super Bowl berth in a heartbreaking 7-0 loss to Cohasset last Nov. 14, the final SSL game of the season.

2003 seniors Andrew Farinick, Frank Granara, John Mohan, Terence Bohan, Andrew Dawson and Dan Dooley were all central figures in the compilation of this .667 winning percentage (20-10-1) over the last three seasons for the Norwell High football team, three seasons that ended with the Clippers just one win short of making it to the Super Bowl playoffs. Farinick, Granara and Mohan made up the Clippers starting offensive backfield the last two years, the former two as the primary ball carriers, Mohan at quarterback. All three have seen plenty of two-way action the last three years, with all three being named league all-stars the last two years. Dawson and Dooley were stalwarts in the trenches the last few seasons, and Bohan has been a fixture at wide out and in the defensive backfield. The latter two players joined the aforementioned three on the SSL all-star team last fall. These six players comprised only half of one of NHS's top graduating classes in many years.

Not surprisingly, a few close observers of the South Shore League football scene are now predicting a step or two backwards for the Clippers gridiron crew in the fall of '04—a circumstance that brings a smile to Jim Sullivan's face.

"It's just fine if people say we're going to be decimated by graduation," noted the Clippers veteran head coach. "We've had some pretty good players in the wings waiting to get their chance, and now they will. It took some pretty good talent to keep them in the wings."

Optimism is spawned by Norwell coaching staff's long held notion that it is better to build from the inside out. Returning three of five starters to the offensive line next year in seniors Adam Noguiera and Max Barao and junior Christian Comeau, Sullivan believes this will be an area of true strength next year.

The coach expressed confidence in the abilities of juniors Pat Kelly, Jeff Burek and Mike Matarazzo — all of whom are well over 6-feet tall and 200 pounds and saw time at tackle on occasion this season—to challenge for the other spots.

Comeau and Noguiera were also starters on the defensive line, as was senior captain Brian Ware. Athletically gifted junior Billy Arria was a starter at linebacker alongside Farinick and Granara, and senior captain Greg Thornton manned a cornerback spot opposite Bohan.

Barao, Kelly, Burek and Matarazzo will likely figure in the mix up front defensively. Expected to compete for jobs at linebacker and defensive back are seniors Tom Regan, Myles Clancy and Mike Dwyer and juniors Scott Chappell, Jake Corcoran and Josh Scott, a starter last year until suffering an injury.

As far as the offensive skill positions go, Thornton would appear the favorite to take over as the lead runner. The quick and athletic junior has been used as a "change of pace" back the last few years behind the bruising Farinick and Granara, and even has a 100 yards rushing game on his resume. The hard-nosed Ware has bene tabbed to move from wingback to fullback. Josh Scott is another player who'll likely get some regular touches out of the backfield after flashing some nifty moves last fall in a reserve role.

Clancy, Chappell and sophomore Ryan Kane are battling it out for the number one quarterback job. The athletic Clancy, also a standout at NHS in hockey and lacrosse, performed well in mop-up duty for Mohan last season, while the younger Chappell (the brother of two-time South Shore League all-star lineman John Chappell, class of '03) has performed the signal calling duties quite effectively at the JV level the last two seasons.

"All of those guys have shown some real positive aspects to their game," appraised Sullivan earlier this week. "Right now, we're trying to polish the things they don't do as well. We've got a few scrimmages coming up this week, and hopefully one of them will step into the spotlight."

The two that don't win the job could step into another "skill position" role, such as wingback or split end, roles Regan and Corcoran are currently competing for.

The team captains are Brian Ware, Greg Thornton, Adam Nogueira, Myles Clancy and Mike Dwyer.

Abington

2004 could prove to be a very significant year for the Abington Green Wave football program and its head coach, Jim Kelliher. Last year's graduated senior class ended its four year run with a 23-6 overall record, a stretch unmatched by any Green Wave contingent over the past two decades.

This season marks the next generation for the Green Waves and raises one big question: will their recent success carry over to the new core of it's football team? Every successful program has to transfer and reload its talent from time to time and Kelliher feels confident about his football team's chances.

"With our first week out, I think we are better than I expected," said Coach K. "The staff is very pleased with what we have seen up to this point."

Abington will rely on its strength and experience up front to start the season. Anchored by co-captains Dan Hoffman and Jeremy Iaccobucci, the Green Wave returns one of the most experienced group of lineman in the league. Senior tackle Tom Delaney and senior guard Josh Poratti join their captains in the trenches. Sophomore center John McClain is expected to start and will receive tremendous support on each side.

"Our group of linemen are a very hard working unit," continued Kelliher. "They will be a solid group for us, but unfortunately, like most teams, we don't have much depth there.

"We have a lot of sophomores as back-ups and they are going to have to be ready to play. We moved Jon Conway from fullback to tight end and that makes us a better team as well"

Another strength for Abington is its defensive secondary. This group will be one of most athletic and fastest units in the area. Senior Devon Davis, junior Sean Whitman and sophomore Jim Wells will cover a lot of ground and fill many open spaces in a hurry.

"As always, we are going to have to limit our mistakes, control the football and improve our depth," said K. "This league is so close right now with Norwell and Cohasset being the pre-season favorites.

"It is a level league and, if one team slips, another one will be ready to step up. I feel good about our starters, but we need to work and groom our backups.

Abington's sophomore class finished its freshman campaign with a 6-1 record and will help make up the 38 man Green Wave roster.

"Each game is going to be tough," continued Kelliher. "Hull has as talented a team as anyone else in the league. Their problems may arise if they start losing players to injury. Carver has a lot of excitement and energy in their program right now. They have a big challenge ahead of them, but their attitude will overcome a lot of their past setbacks.

"Mashpee will be the sleeper team this year. If you are not paying attention, they will sneak up on you this year. They are a lot like Carver in that they have a high positive attitude, but they may lack a little more talent."

Fitting end to stellar Summer Games

the contest was heightened by the fact that it was to be final run of international competition for the players known as the Fab Five. And it couldn't have ended in better fashion.

Unknown to the masses before their World Cup victory in 1991, Mia Hamm, Julie Foudy, Joy Fawcett, Brandi Chastain, and Kristine Lilly had become household names after that historic win, which spawned the now-defunct WUSA (Women's United Soccer Association). Before the 2004 Olympics began, Hamm, Foudy, and Fawcett announced that these Games would indeed be their last and would also mark the end of their 17-year run on the US National team. (Chastain and Lilly may still compete).

These Games would clearly mark the end of an era and the Fab Five (and their fans) all wanted it to end the same way: With a gold medal in hand. After taking an early 1-0 lead on a first-half goal from Lindsay Tarpley, one of a host of young players to which the torch will be passed, Brazil evened it up midway through the second half.

For the second-straight time in as many games, the US women faced overtime. Three days earlier in the semifinals, they defeated Germany, 2-1, in OT. Overtime rules were changed this year as the "Golden Goal" or "Sudden Death" style of play in which a goal scored ends the game was eliminated. Teams were now required to play a minimum of 30 minutes (two 15 minute periods) before going to a shootout.

Still deadlocked after the first OT, the Americans set up for a corner kick midway through the second. From the left of the goal, Lilly launched a beautiful ball to the far right post and found newcomer Abby Wambach. She connected with a header that blew by the Brazilian goaltender for the go-ahead goal. Leading 2-1, with eight minutes to play, the US held on for the win. It was a storybook end to the game as the team's past (Lilly) connected with its future (Wambach) to notch the victory. Sappy, I know, but it made for a highly dramatic and emotional moment.

As you could probably imagine — if you've read any of these columns over the last few weeks — I had tears streaming after this one. It was one of the best stories to come out of the Games. With their age apparent, it was clear the Fab Five were probably no longer the most skilled or talented players on the field, but their hearts were in this one and that made them unbeatable. Those hearts have helped inspire hundreds of young girls across the country. They've certainly left their mark on the field and their presence will be missed.

While their careers may be over, but members of the Fab Five are still aiding the effort to get the WUSA back on track for a 2005 season. I only hope their efforts don't go unnoticed.

Gardner says goodbye

The Fab Five weren't the only one's saying goodbye to their careers at the Olympics. In what was another highly anticipated farewell, American Greco-Roman wrestler Rulon Gardner made an emotional exit last week after winning his bronze medal heavyweight bout.

Gardner — who made history in Sydney after beating the "unbeatable" Russian Aleksandr Karelin for the gold — did all he could to stay composed as he sat down, took off his shoes, and placed them in the center of the mat, signifying his retirement in time-honored tradition. After raising to wave to the crowd, Gardner couldn't hold back the tears as he walked off the mat for the final time.

These were just two more great stories in what was an Olympics dominated by the Americans, who led all countries with 103 medals, 35 of which were gold. We saw careers end and new ones begin. We saw success and heartache, upsets and letdowns. These Games had it all and they were a blast to watch. I hope I didn't bore you these last few weeks with my take on the Olympics, but I just couldn't resist.

Only four more years to the 2008 Summer Games in Beijing! I can't wait!

On course for success

Fortunately, there are a number of experienced players battling it out for those last four spots.

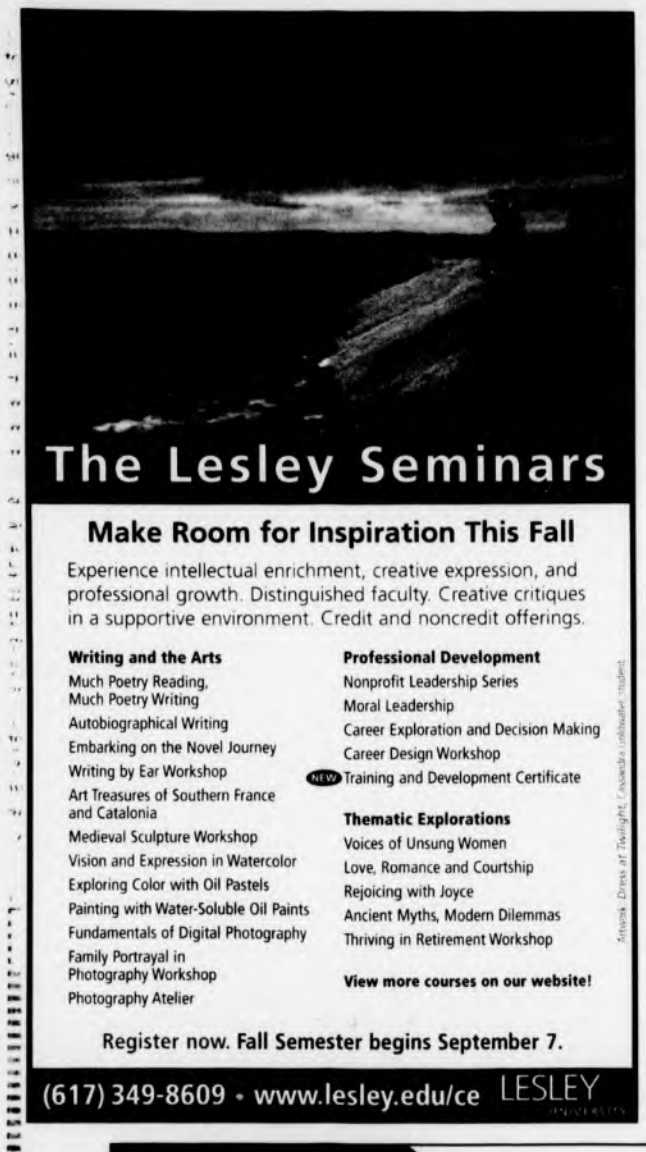
Seniors Colin Magruder and Chris Simms were regulars in the five and six spots last year, and Sweeney expressed confidence in the potential of both players to step it up this season.

Two other seniors likely to contribute are Ricky Lordan and Brian Bolger, both of whom saw a decent amount of playing time last year.

Junior Mark Bouchard is also looking to make a move up the ladder, as witnessed by an excellent round in the low 40s last week.

"We've got those guys, a few more seniors and quite a few other younger kids who might be able to help," said Sweeney, who had a total of 35 golf hopefuls turn out. "We've really only been able to get out a few times, though, so it's too early to tell in a few cases exactly what I've got, especially with some of those younger players."

The Skippers will have a week off after today's match, and Sweeney plans to use that time to continue his golfer evaluations. On the balance, though, he likes what he's seen to this point.



"I think we have a good shot of getting back to the tourney and a.500 record," said Sweeney, whose team came up just one win short of that goal last year. "We have some good senior leadership and a nice mix of talent. I like our chances."

bringing in a new system," said Leary last fall. "I'm real proud of what we accomplished, and the kids should be too."

Now the real work begins.

Among the nine players the Skippers lost to the caps and gowns were two-time South Shore League all-stars Chris Clark, Conor Buick and Craig Laugelle, and first time SSL all-stars Dave Santiago and Jesse Brewer. Brewer, the team's keeper, also earned All-Eastern Mass acknowledgement, and Buick, the team's sweeper, just missed the honor. Clark, the team's leading scorer the last two seasons, was a 2002 All-Eastern Mass selection.

Also graduating were two-year starters J.T Oronte, a valuable presence in the midfield, and John Andrade, who scored several key goals last season, along with Andrew Wise and Andrew Busk.

And joining the mass exodus was talented center midfielder Matt O'Connell. He'll begin his junior year at private school.

"Basically, we lost 10 of 11 starters, and we've got a bunch of players who played some at varsity and some at JV," said Leary. "As a result, we're going to be forced to move things around a bit. We've got some kids playing positions right now they really haven't played too much in the past.

Leary does not mean this to sound like a concession or an excuse for failure, however.

"I still think we're going to be a very competitive team," stated the second year Skippers coach. "The players I've moved around have adjusted very quickly and done very well. There have been a lot of pleasant surprises and the kids have been working hard.

"We'll be able to tell a little more after the scrimmages this week, but I like what I see so far."

The Skippers scrimmaged a quality Cardinal Spellman team yesterday and will take part in a mini-jamboree with Rockland and Quincy this afternoon at Rockland's Esten School (4 p.m. start).

The season starts for real on Tuesday, as the boys travel to Hanover High for a non-league tilt (4 p.m. start). Play in the South Shore League gets underway on Friday, Sept. 10, with a trip to Mashpee (4:30 p.m. start).

The makeup of the 2004 team appears as if it will be quite similar to that of the 2002 squad, in that much of the premier talent is in the junior class.

The Skippers feature a number of juniors who stepped into key roles last fall with the varsity squad, among them forwards Aidan Buick (Conor's little brother) and Ben Libby, and defenders Nils Sceery, Trevor Brady and Sam McDonald.

Buick and Libby shared playing time opposite Clark for most of the season at striker. Buick has been the star of camp so far, according to Leary, and the slick and clever Libby has opened eyes as well. Coach Leary would like to keep Buick up front as the designated sniper, but noted he may swing him back to halfback some to help control the middle of the field.

"Aidan really looks like he's ready to step up his game this year," said Leary. "He's really looked exceptional in practices and in our scrimmage the other day."

Libby—who has some of the best foot skills in the South Shore League—will remain at attack and act as the principal playmaker.

"Ben will be our target guy up front," said Leary. "He has such good ball control skills and sees the field as well as anyone."

MacDonald and Brady started their sophomore campaigns coming off the bench, but both worked their way into the starting lineup before long, MacDonald at stopper and Brady at fullback.

Brady has been moved to center-midfield for this season, though, essentially replacing O'Connell as the quarterback of the offense.

"Trevor told me he's only played center-mid one or two times in his life, but he's really taken to it," said Leary. "He's moving the ball very well and doing everything I could ask at this point."

Also adjusting on the fly will be McDonald and Sceery. McDonald moves from stopper to sweeper, filling the huge shoes of Conor Buick— meaning he must adjust his game to not going after every ball, as he is now the final line of defense. Sceery moves from fullback to take over for McDonald at sweeper.

"And they've both done a nice job so far too," noted Leary. "Sam and Nils are adjusting well."

Another junior who looks to play a much bigger role with the Skippers this fall is John Grimm. After a promising freshman year at forward for the JV team, Grimm broke his femur early on last season. Leary was happy to report that this talented offensive player now appears to be just about all the way back.

The junior likely to see the largest upgrade in his role, though, is Prescott Busk, the heir apparent to Brewer between the pipes. Of course, sophomore Ryan Kacinski might have something to say about that, as he's come into camp, according to Leary, "in sensational shape."

This is not to suggest, however, that the senior contingent is anything to sneeze at.

Seniors Sam Steele, Kevin Dinsmore and Jonathan Littauer will serve as tri-captains. The former pair saw a good deal of varsity time last season and obviously will see even more this season. Littauer, who missed all of last season with a leg injury, will also be a regular contributor.

"All three have looked very good so far," said Leary. "Dinsmore has really impressed me at wing midfield. He's probably my toughest player."

Another senior who figures prominently in the mix is Toby Norman, a versatile defender.

The Skippers have 40 players out overall, which includes a handful of freshmen who've really captured Leary's fancy in the early going. It will be up to new junior varsity coach Dave Costa, a former Norwich University player, to bring these players along.

ognize what a huge factor this is. The way Lithuania and Argentina dismantled the U.S. defense was, to be perfectly honest, a thing of beauty. From both an aesthetic and hoop purist point of view, these games were so much more enjoyable to watch than any game I can remember from the NBA playoffs a few months back. Wouldn't it be great if the NBA could get back to this type of true team game rather than the one-on-one bunk that league is trying to pass off these days as the world's best basketball?

- And what about team chemistry and cohesion? The core players on just about all of the top international teams in the Olympics have been playing together for years. The U.S. players were together for weeks.

- As for the theory being floated that these U.S. players simply didn't care enough…that's an outrageous and grossly unjust charge. I watched these games. These guys played hard. They just didn't play very well.

Progress was made, both by the coaches and the players. The bronze medal retribution victory over Lithuania was testament to that.

C'mon folks, leave the players alone. If you insist on firing arrows, aim them at the players who backed out of the commitment—Shaq, Tracy McGrady, et al—or, better yet, the people who put this team together.

A perfect segue for my suggestion (almost as if I planned it): take the top six available players from both the Eastern and Western Conference champions. Bam, you've got a team. Selection committee, go home; your services are no longer required. Obviously, this would take care or the problems related to chemistry and cohesion.

Someone suggested that perhaps the Pistons should have gone, but that doesn't work for me. What happens if just one player can't go? Who takes that spot? If two or three can't go, we're right back in the same mess.

Besides, depth might be a problem. Players eight through 12 on say the Lithuanian roster are probably considerably more talented than the Pistons eighth man…whoever that might be.

But taking the best from the two best NBA teams seems logical, doesn't it? There could be some mixing and matching of personnel, but can you imagine what a great weapon en masse substitution could be?

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Soccer Club registration underway

Registration for the upcoming soccer season is now underway with registration forms available at the Town Hall. All players must be registered prior to participating in practices or games.

As in prior years, the Fall season will include practice and play for players age 4 through 11 (6th grade). However, as a result of the elimination of Middle School team sports, the Club will also sponsor practice and competitive team play for 7th and 8th grade players as well this year.

In-town programs for players age 4 (PreK) to 9 (4th grade) will begin on September 18th and continue through November 13th excluding Columbus Day weekend. Travel program training for the U12 (5th and 6th grade) and U14 (7th and 8th grade) age groups will begin on September 11th with practice and games in the Cranberry League continuing through early November.

A coaching clinic for all new or interested coaches has been schedule for Saturday, September 11th, with a coaches meeting to start the season scheduled for Wednesday, September 15th.

Signups for 21 Lacrosse

21 Lacrosse, a new lacrosse league based out of the Hingham Sports Center, is looking to run a few summer clinics. See the Website (www.21lacrosse.com) for details.

All fall leagues are currently filling up for 21 lacrosse. If you are interested, you can fill out the application on-line (available after August 1), contact Bagby rbagby@21lacrosse.com or call 781-264-6030.

21 lacrosse will also be sponsoring an all-star team. They will be called the "Black Jacks" There will be an open tryout August 10-12, in eitehr Hingham or Marshfield. Details can be found on line or by contacting Bagby.

Changes add up as schools get ready to start next Wednesday to school for the first time, kindergarten orientation will be held at the Osgood School Wednesday Sept. 8 and Thursday Sept. 9. Students and parents will be invited to take a tour of the school and meet their son or daughter's new teacher and classmates. Kindergarten students will have their first full day of school Friday, Sept. 10. Kindergarten hours will be 9:05 to11:50 a.m. for the morning session, and 12:20 to 3:05 p.m. for the afternoon session.

For students buying lunch, hot and cold meals are available for $2.25. The first day of school, the cafeteria will be serving macaroni and cheese with a dinner roll or a turkey sandwich with green beans and sliced apples. Each meal offers a choice of milk — whole, low fat white, or chocolate — or fruit juice. Milk and juice may be purchased by children bringing their lunch for 50 cents. A prepaid meals ticket program is also available.

Sheehan said with the third grade students moving up to Deer Hill, Osgood will be losing roughly 120 students, but the school will now have the opportunity to include the students from the South Shore Educational Collaborative preschool, which operates out of the school, in more activities. "We try to include them in our program," as much as possible, said Sheehan, and with the change, the schools will be able to work together even more inclusively. "We think with our preschool there will be roughly 375 total students."

For the first few days, Sheehan said all elementary students will be greeted by their teachers when entering the building in the morning, and the teachers will escort the class to the classroom. "The whole staff is there to support them," said Sheehan, adding if a child needs additional support getting to their classroom after the first week, the staff will be happy to help.

Sheehan said the Osgood staff strives to make sure all students and parents are familiar with the building and the teachers before the first day. While the kindergarten students have orientation and play dates with their new teachers during the summer, at the end of the school year students who already attend Osgood are invited to participate in "move up day," which allows students to take a look at their classroom for the following year, whether at Osgood or Deer Hill, and meet their prospective teachers. Although some students had not been assigned a teacher at the end of the last school year, as they had not yet been hired, those students will be invited to come to the school with their parents prior to the first day to make that first introduction.

The students and families that are new to town will also have an orientation, where they will be given a tour of both the school and the town, and meet their teacher. "The more transitional activities you can have," the more students and their parents will feel comfortable on that first day, Sheehan said.

Newsletters are sent home with students each Friday to keep the parents informed of the activities taking place at Osgood. In addition, if parents ever have any questions or concerns, Sheehan said they are always welcome to call the office, especially during the start of the school year. "We really do have an open door policy in our office," she said.

Deer Hill

This year, the Deer Hill student body will be comprised of students in grades three through five, rather than four through six. Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley said in light of the change, he will have the opportunity to meet not one, but two new classes of students as both the third and fourth graders will be moving up. "I'm very excited about this year," said Gauley, adding he really looking forward to what the new students and new school year will bring.

Enrollment at Deer Hill will be virtually the same this year, as the school will still house three grades of students. Gauley explained last year's second and third grade classes were among the smaller classes in the district, and while final enrollment figures have not yet been tallied, it looks as if the number of students attending may actually decrease by between five and 10.

The school day will begin a little earlier this year at Deer Hill, and students will be allowed inside the building at 8:10. Students who ride the bus will remain on the bus until 8:10, and parents who drive their children are asked to keep their children in the car until 8:10 as well, when a staff member will give the OK signal for the students to enter the building. The school day will end at 2:10 p.m.

Students riding the bus can expect to see their bus drivers in the neighborhood between 7:45 and 8:10, although bus schedules may vary during the first week. In addition, Gauley said there will most likely be bus monitors on the Deer Hill buses at least for the first couple of weeks, particularly during the afternoon routes, to make sure the children are getting on and off the bus safely. Gauley said he will be meeting with parent volunteers this week, and any additional parents who are interested in donating their time can contact him at the school.

For students buying lunch, hot and cold meals are available for $2.50. The Deer Hill cafeteria will be serving the same meal as Osgood, macaroni and cheese with a dinner roll or a turkey sandwich with green beans and sliced apples. Each meal offers a choice of milk — whole, low fat white, or chocolate — or fruit juice. Milk and juice may be purchased by children bringing their lunch for 50 cents. A prepaid meals ticket program is also available.

The third grade has moved out of the Osgood School and into the Deer Hill School, bumping the sixth graders out of Deer Hill and over to the middle-high school.

There are new staff members at Deer Hill this year that Gauley said he can't wait to work with. There are two new fifth grade teachers, Carey Bowser and Shannon MacIntosh. There are also two new third grade teachers as well as Christine Sherman and Meghan Coleman have joined the Deer Hill staff. Hearing the name alone, students might think they have another new fifth grade teacher in Karin Johnston, but will recognize her as last year's Miss Taylor who was married over the summer.

In addition, there will be some new staff members who have yet to be announced, but will be in place by the first day of school. Deer Hill will have a new health teacher as well as a new librarian to fill the spot left by longtime librarian Marjorie Murphy who retired at the end of last school year. "We can't replace her," he said of Murphy, who was also voted as last year's citizen of the year, but the school is doing their best to find someone who will be just as good a match for the school and its students.

Gauley said this year the school will have its instructional aides back again, which will take some of the pressure off of finding volunteers to help out during lunch and recess. However, much the same as he did last year, Gauley will be carrying around a whistle in his suit jacket pocket, ready at a moment's notice to help out.

CMHS

Although middle-high school students will have a new principal and new assistant principal at the helm on the first day of school, their faces will be familiar. Former Assistant Principal Jack DeLorenzo has already stepped into his new role as principal and former Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill has stepped up to fill DeLorenzo's shoes as assistant principal.

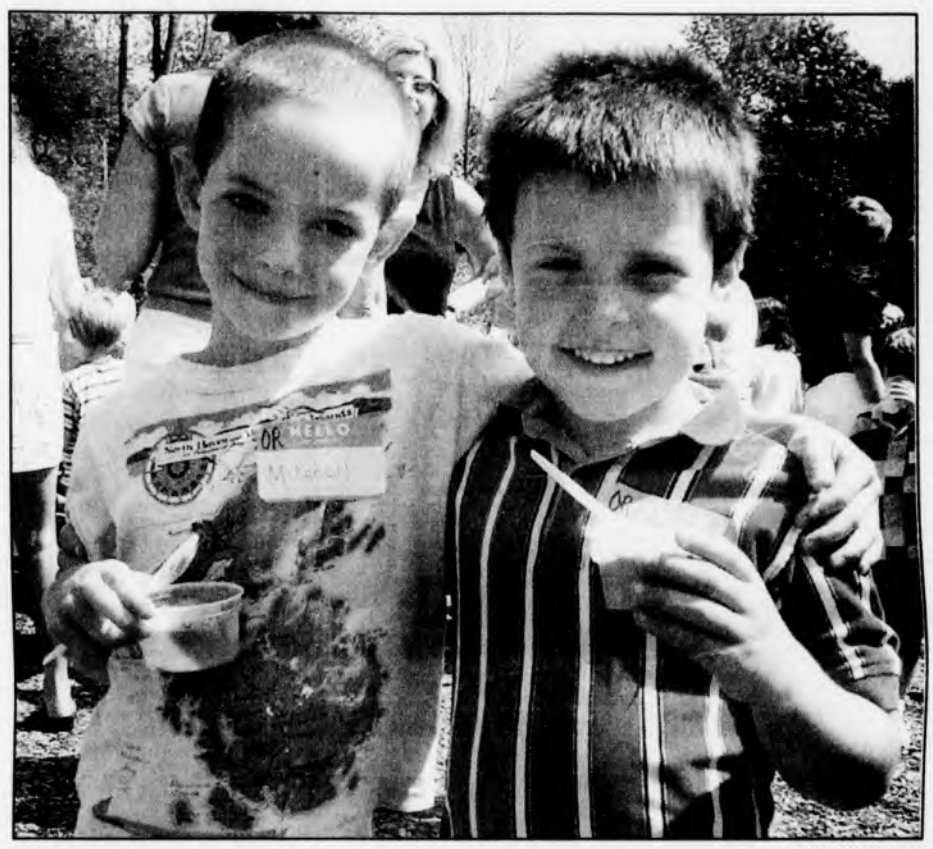
"I'm very excited to be working with the students and staff in a new capacity," said DeLorenzo, adding he has had a wonderful summer working with the staff and he is really looking forward to the new school year.

Already DeLorenzo has updated the school's Web site, which will be updated on a regular basis from now on. Newsletters, athletic information such as rainouts and sports schedules, and other information parents and students might need will be added on a regular basis. The site also has a staff directory with phone numbers and e-mails, as well as district information. Parents and students are urged to check the Web site on a regular basis for updates.

For middle-high school students in grades six through 12, classes will begin Wednesday, Sept. 8. However, returning students in grades eight through 12 will have a two-hour delay while students in grades six and seven as well as students new to the district participate in an orientation program. Buses on day one will begin making their morning pickups between 7:20 and 7:45 a.m., as school will start at 7:50 a.m. For students in grades eight through 12, buses will begin runs at 9:20, and the school day will begin at 9:50.

On Sept. 9, all students will begin school at 7:50 a.m., which is slightly later than middle-high school students would have started last year. The school day will end at 2:36 p.m.

Parents dropping students off at school are asked to leave students only in the front of the school. Only buses will be allowed to drop off in the rear of the building.



The middle-high school cafeteria offers students more choices than at the elementary level, and lunch costs $2.50. Food Services Director Bob Levy said while the actual menu has not been set for the first day, there will be a "wide variety" of food to choose from. The middle-high school cafeteria is set up much like a college dining hall, with various food stations, including a grill, a deli with made to order sandwiches, the "pizzasta" section which offers both pizza and pasta, a takeout counter and entree counter, which serves a meal similar to a main course dinner. There will be water, fruit juice, and milk available to drink and dessert including ice pops and frozen yogurt.

DeLorenzo said with the addition of the sixth-grade students, middle school enrollment for grades six through eight is up to 374 total students. With high school enrollment up to 424, the total student body count for the middle-high school has been raised to 798. DeLorenzo said of the increased enrollment, roughly 17 are students who are new to the school this year.

Along with the sixth-grade teachers who will move up to the middle school with their students, there will be many new staff members at the middle-high school this fall as well. There will be new high school math, social studies and French/Spanish teachers, as well as middle school French and English teachers coming on board. There will be a new eighth grade science teacher, new instructional aides and a new school psychologist.

While DeLorenzo said he has been best known for reminding students as they leave school for the weekend to "Make good choices," he said this year, he has a new slogan. While he will still be reciting his Friday afternoon mantra, his goal for the year is that each and every student as well as the staff will "Have fun."

Tolman MDA telethon party heads into 28th year in Hingham

Sets goal at $17,000

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Jay Tolman and his "telethon team" are putting the finishing touches on preparations for the annual Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) Telethon Party in Hingham this weekend.

Support is stronger than ever as the event enters its 28th year. Twenty-four hours of fun is in store for all who participate.

This year's fund raiser begins Sunday, Sept. 5, at 7 p.m. and wraps up Monday, Sept. 6, at 7 p.m. at Hingham Community Center, 70 South St. There's never a dull moment from beginning to end.

Tolman, a former Hingham resident, organizes the event with the help of many dedicated volunteers. He is expecting a good turnout.

Gervaise Calos of Hull has been involved with the Hingham event since she was a teenager. Tolman and her father are friends. Now her own children are involved. "So many people are touched by muscular dystrophy. The telethon party is a great time, great people, and a very worthwhile cause – helping to find a cure."

Thousands of Hingham residents and other supporters have participated in the effort over the years, some from out of state. Many return year after year. New friendships are formed and old ones rekindled.

"It's like a great reunion," Tolman said. "Everyone's life events surround this once-a-year fund raiser."

The party is also a family affair, involving Tolman, his wife, Jodi, and their three children, Jack, Charlie, and Chloe, who travel from their New Jersey home every year to take part in the Labor Day weekend gala fund raiser, which coincides with the national Jerry Lewis MDA telethon.

"Tying into the national event gives us the inspiration to keep going so we won't continue seeing kids and families suffering with this kind of pain," Tolman said.

Tolman's father, John, 83, a Florida resident, is already in Hingham visiting family and helping out with the telethon by posting flyers, sending out invitations, and seeking raffle donations. Many other families also take part.

Support for the event is widespread. "We really went crazy last year," Tolman said with a laugh. "We hoped to raise $16,000 but ended up with $16,728 in donations." This year's goal is $17,000.

This year's event promises a good time for adults and children alike. The award-winning Smith-Houlihan Irish Step Dancers, a young, talented group in full costume who were a big hit last year, will kick off the event at 7 p.m. Sunday. "They are great fun," Tolman said, "with everyone clapping and stomping to the joyous music of Ireland."

Next is a "super dance party," featuring the sounds of D.J. Paul Ciccone. There will be a cash bar, hot hors d'oeuvres, raffle, and prizes.

The party continues through the evening with a large-screen television for viewing the local and national Jerry Lewis Telethon. Old Jerry Lewis movies will also be shown. Some stay up all night and "Watch the Stars Come Out."

The event picks up speed Monday, Labor Day, with lots of fun for the entire family – a giant cookout, pony rides, Cinnamon Bear appearance, clowns, face painting, raffles, balloons, T-shirts, awards, and more. Majic, a South Shore band, will perform live from 1 to 3 p.m..

"Join the fun and excitement, drop a donation in the fish bowl, and have a great time while helping to end muscular dystrophy. Your caring can mean the cure!" Tolman said. The telethon party is a combination of a good time, education about the challenges muscular dystrophy poses, and motivating people to support the cause. "This helps people understand what it's like to live with a neuro-muscular disease," Tolman said.

Even though no phone calls asking for contributions are made as part of the Hingham event, well over $300,000 has been donated over the past 27 years.

"It's an unbelievable effort," Tolman said. "Thanks to everyone's generous support over the years, MDA is entering a new era of hope." MDA-funded scientists have made great strides toward treatment or cures for neuromuscular disorders over the years.

A longtime MDA supporter, Tolman first started hosting the event in 1977, when he felt compelled to hold a telethon-related event in his hometown of Hingham. That tradition has continued ever since. "I had brown hair when I started," he said with

Tolman MDA telethon party is this weekend

The 28th annual Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) 24-hour Telethon Party is coming up Labor Day weekend, Sept. 5 and 6, at Hingham Community Center.

The event begins with a dance, cash bar, hors d'oeuvres, prizes, games, and music by D.J. Paul Ciccone from 7 p.m. Sunday until midnight.

The party continues until 8 a.m. Monday with "Stay Up and Watch the Stars Come Out."

Wake-up call is from 9 to 11 a.m., when a continental breakfast is served.

A Labor Day cookout is planned from 1 to 6 p.m., featuring the music of Majic from 1 to 3 p.m., clowns, pony rides, balloons, face painting, T-shirts, raffles, food, and fun.

The event wraps up with a telethon finale from 6 to 7 p.m.

For further information, call the MDA hotline at (781) 749-9786 beginning Sun., Sept. 5.

The MDA is a voluntary health organization dedicated to eradicating more than 40 forms of the disease. The Jerry Lewis Telethon will air locally.

Celebrating the lives of those we lost

Mattie Stepanek, 13, who recently succumbed to muscular dystrophy, began writing short stories and poetry when he was three. Some of his works explore the reality of living with a form of muscular dystrophy and the grief associated with the loss of three siblings to muscle disease. Mattie was a national ambassador for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

All proceeds from the Labor Day Tolman MDA telethon party in Hingham will be donated to the MDA in memory of former Hingham resident Richard Berberian, Mattie, and John Fasci, Jr., formerly of Weymouth. (See related sidebar.)

"People across the nation continue to pay tribute and celebrate Mattie's remarkable life and spirit," said event organizer Jay Tolman, formerly of Hingham.

Some of Mattie's works explore his "uncensored reality" of living with muscular dystrophy, but most of his expressions "proclaim the innocent hope, profound wisdom, and delightful humor of childhood," Tolman said.

Former President Jimmy Carter delivered the eulogy for Mattie, with whom he'd enjoyed a friendship since the two met and bonded over their passion for peacemaking.

"Carter said he's traveled to 122 foreign countries and met kings and queens, but Mattie was the 'most extraordinary' person he ever met," Tolman said.

Mattie wrote the poem "I Could . . . If They Would":

If they find a cure when I'm alive . . .
I could live each day without pain and machines, and I could celebrate the biggest thank you of life ever.
If they would find a cure when I'm buried into Heaven,
I could still celebrate with my brothers and sister there, and
I could still be happy knowing that I was part of the effort.

Donations are collected throughout the Hingham event in various ways — by children and adults on street corners and by tossing a contribution into a large fishbowl at the community center during the party.

All proceeds from the Hingham event will be donated to the MDA in memory of former Hingham resident Richard Berberian Jr., son of Richard and Joan Berberian; former Weymouth resident John Fasci, Jr., son of John and Mary Fasci; and MDA national ambassador Mattie Stepanek, who all succumbed to the disease. The spirit and courage of those young men and their families have been a source of inspiration to many.

Those who can't attend the weekend's festivities may still show their support by sending tax-deductible donations to "MDA Telethon," c/o Nancy White, 190 North St., Hingham, MA 02043.

Asian grilled chicken gives poultry dish a new twist

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE
CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Here we are toward the end of summer and we are faced, yet again, with the prospect of grilling chicken. By this point, most of us have tried a spice rub, a marinade, a sweet barbecue sauce, grill-roasting and perhaps even brining but we still want something fresh, bold, and new. Enter an Asian-style grilled chicken which combines many of the techniques above but in a new way.

The basic approach is to mimic a recipe commonly served as Thai street food. Small pieces of highly seasoned grilled chicken are served with a dipping sauce. We decided to build our recipe around any chicken parts to make it as useful as possible. However, breast meat does have to be brined whereas the dark meat (thighs and legs) don't. So if you like white meat, be sure to brine the breasts before starting the recipe. (The brining is finished in as little as 30 minutes — see recipe below.) You should also cut the breasts in half so that they cook at the same rate as the other, smaller pieces of meat. Leaving on the skin worked out well — it became crisp and flavorful with the rub and grilling. Three pounds of bone-in chicken will yield enough for four to six people.

Traditional components for the rub include garlic, peppercorns, and coriander root. Coriander root isn't exactly standard fare at any of our local markets, so instead we used a combination of grated ginger and chopped cilantro for a very similar effect. We also added ground black pepper, ground coriander, and lime juice. Note that if you are using brined breasts, they do not need to be salted before adding the rub. With thighs and legs, the parts ought to be salted first.

As for the dipping sauce, we started with a combination of sugar and white wine vinegar and then added chopped garlic and red pepper flakes. Other possible additions included chopped cilantro, cucumber, lime juice, and/or fish sauce. The winners, after a few taste tests, included cilantro and cucumber (optional) but we passed on the lime juice and fish sauce as unnecessary.

To make the dish, rub the chicken parts with the paste and grill over a two-level fire. (Start over high heat and then move to the lower heat to finish.) The dipping sauce is best if prepared an hour or so head of time to allow the flavors to meld.

ASIAN-STYLE GRILLED CHICKEN

To prevent the breast meat from drying out it should be brined before being grilled. The thighs and legs have much more fat and do not require the extra step. Since not all chicken pieces are the same size, the cooking times may vary slightly for larger or smaller pieces.

For the Dipping Sauce:
1/3 cup white vinegar
1/3 cup sugar
1 medium clove garlic, pressed or minced
1/2 to 1 teaspoon red pepper flakes
2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
Pinch salt
3/4 cup diced cucumber (optional)

For the Chicken and Brine:
1/2 cup table salt
1/4 cup sugar
3 pounds bone-in chicken pieces such as thighs, legs, or breasts split and then each breast half cut into two pieces.

For the Rub:
1/4 cup pressed or minced garlic from about 10 to 12 cloves
2 tablespoons freshly grated ginger from 2-inch piece
1-1/2 teaspoons freshly ground black pepper
2 teaspoons ground coriander
1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro
1-1/2 tablespoons fresh lime juice from one lime

1. For the dipping sauce: Combine all of the ingredients in a small bowl until sugar dissolves. Let stand for 1-2 hours to allow flavors to meld.

2. For the chicken and brine: Dissolve the salt and sugar in 2 quarts cold water in a large bowl. Submerge the breast pieces only and refrigerate for 30 minutes to 1 hour. Rinse all chicken pieces under cool running water and pat dry with paper towels. Sprinkle thighs and legs with salt, but not breast pieces. Ignite 6 quarts of charcoal briquettes (not hardwood) and arrange coals in a single layer on one side of the grill and a double layer on the other side to create a two-level fire.

3. Combine all rub ingredients in a small bowl until well mixed. Thoroughly rub an even layer of mixture on all sides of the chicken pieces.

When the fire is ready, rub cooking grates with oil-soaked paper towel wad using tongs. Place the chicken on the hot side of the grill and cook without moving until well browned, about two minutes. Turn and cook until browned on second side, about 1 1/2 minutes longer. Transfer to the cooler side of the grill and cook until firm, plump and the internal temperature reaches 165 degrees, about 12 to 14 minutes longer. Alternatively you may prick them with a paring knife to test for doneness. When done the juices will run clear and the meat will no longer be pink. Serve immediately with the dipping sauce passed on the side.

Serves 4 to 6.

The ease of ornamental grasses

GREEN THUMBS UP
SUZANNE MAHLER

Despite my reluctance years ago to incorporate ornamental grasses into my own garden, perhaps due to my initial encounter with the rampantly spreading ribbon grass (Phalaris), in recent years I have been totally won over by their ease of culture, pleasantly surprised by their diversity and restrained growth and captivated by those that offer the added benefit of winter interest. As with most perennial plants, there are aggressive, overly-exuberant varieties, but most cultivated grasses are much less likely to seed or spread than their wild counterparts. Instead, the majority of popular varieties form lovely clumps that gradually increase in size from year to year and rarely require attention.

The term, "ornamental grass" is currently applied to a wide range of plants including true grasses, sedges and rushes, most of which share similar characteristics in that they demonstrate linear leaves and do not produce brightly colored floral displays. There are grasses to suit nearly every cultural condition including sun or shade, wet or dry. There are a few that are evergreen and still others that offer pleasing winter interest. Add to this adaptability a wonderful diversity of foliage colors, including varying shades of green, yellow, blue, burgundy and variegated varieties, and forms ranging from low prostrate clumpers to 12-foot tall arching specimens, and the stage is set for a spectacular array of low maintenance plants to provide an appealing contrast to adjacent perennials or shrubs.

Tall upright clumps can be used as dramatic, architectural forms, focal points or accents, or as a hedge or backdrop in the perennial border. Their graceful lines and curves soften hardscapes (walks, foundations and fences) or connect plantings. Clumps are particularly lovely when backlit by the sun causing them to shimmer and glow. Add droplets of early morning dew and the effect is all the more enchanting. Shorter, mounding forms help to unify and blend contrasting colors while providing marvelous textural variation to the broad leaves of a wide range of perennial plants and shrubs. Small compact growers, including a number of evergreen varieties, are ideal as edging plants in foundation plantings or borders.

In addition to offering a diversity of forms, colors, and textures to garden designs, many respond to the gentlest breezes adding motion and sound to their visual appeal. Taylor's Guide to Ornamental Grasses comments that "grasses bow and dance in the breeze, each singing a characteristic song. Tall, wide-bladed grasses sigh deeply in wind, while those with finer leaves sing a softer, higher note. As foliage dries and stiffens in dormancy, it emits a harsher, sharper rattle". During the late summer and early autumn, many of these architectural dignitaries produce delicate flower heads that sway and rustle in the wind which serves to further enhance their statuesque beauty.

As the growing season comes to an end, many decorative grasses continue to provide considerable interest to the fall and winter landscape. Green, blue, burgundy and tinted leaves gradually become tawny golds or warm beiges fading to tan and platinum during the winter months.

While the flower and seed heads of a great majority of ornamental grasses could hardly be described as spectacular, many are extremely appealing. Feathery, fluffy plumes, delicate, airy sprays and spikes, or pleasing inflorescences that resemble fuzzy caterpillars add beauty during the latter half of the growing season and often into the winter months.

The majority of ornamental grasses are essentially free of pests and diseases. Average soils suit a wide range of varieties and although most tend to prefer sun or bright light, there are a number of choice grasses for shady locales. These low maintenance plants offer contrast in form, color, texture and height making them valuable additions to any landscape plan.

Buttonwood hosts author Brian Jacques

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Rte. 3A in Cohasset, will host New York Times best-selling author Brian Jacques on Thursday, Sept. 16, from 4-5:30 p.m. at Cohasset store. Mr. Jacques will be making eight stops on his New England tour and Buttonwood is honored to be one of those chosen.

Mr. Jacques is the author of the award winning epic series "Redwall". He will be discussing his latest book, "Rakkety Tam" (Philomel, $23.99), which introduces two wonderful new adversaries, the brave and strong Rakkety Tam MacBurl and the evil and sinister Gulo the Savage. Gulo, together with his horde of white-furred vermin, arrives on the borders of Redwall Forest on a quest to kill his brother and retrieve the powerful Walking Stone, the all-important symbol of power. The rescue of Redwall Abbey lies in the hands (or paws!) of two impressive squirrels, Rakkety Tam MacBurl and his mate Wild Doogy Plumm and assisted by the Hares from the Long Patrol.

Mr. Jacques will give a brief presentation followed by a book signing. To ensure that everyone has an opportunity to meet with Mr. Jacques, it is necessary to restrict signing to two books per person and there will not be any personalization. This is a free event and the public is welcome.

Party host charged

Police are summonsing a party host to court on charges she provided alcohol to minors at a South Main Street home two weeks ago.

Allyson Augusta, 25, of Foxborough is facing charges of furnishing alcohol to minors and keeping a disorderly and noisy house in the wee hours of Friday morning, Aug. 20. Augusta is not a resident but was left in charge of the house at 178 S. Main St., police said.

At roughly 1:30 a.m. that morning a Cohasset police officer inadvertently discovered an under-age party while investigating a car that was parked in an odd way up against the bushes.

"The way is was located, he thought the car might have crashed," Chief James Hussey said. Hussey said while checking out the car, the officer heard noises and walked around the bushes and saw people run into the house.

"He went into the house and spoke to the woman in charge and saw people who were under 21 and obvious evidence of alcohol being consumed on the premises."

Hussey said there were five or six minors in the house; none of them appeared to be intoxicated although it appeared they had been drinking. He said the minors – who were high school or young college age — were transported to the station where their parents picked them up. Hussey said the officer used his discretion in not arresting the teenagers.

Hussey explained the officer was not familiar with the teenagers and had not had any dealings with them in the past. "He determined there was no need to make arrests and to contact their parents," Hussey said. "If we see them (the teens) under similar circumstances in the future then a different course of action may need to be taken."

But police are seeking charges against Augusta. "Adults allowing minors to consume alcohol sends the wrong message," Hussey said. "We have to hold them responsible."

Unauthorized use of boat

Police are charging, Noel Grinnell, 24, of 388 Beechwood St.; Christina M. Alley, 21, of Steamboat Springs, Colo.; Carl C. Dean, 23, of 75 Meadow Lane; and Brian A. Donovan, 24, of 422 King St. with using a boat without authority following an Aug. 22 incident.

Police Chief James Hussey said at about 1:45 a.m., Aug. 22, the harbormaster called for assistance after seeing a group of young people riding around in a boat in the harbor. But when an officer went down to investigate, the group had exited the boat in the vicinity of Margin Court and Stockbridge Road and gotten into a car.

With the description of a gray wagon provided by the harbormaster, the officer stopped the vehicle on Elm Street. No one was arrested at that point because it couldn't immediately be determined if the group had used the boat appropriately or not. At that time, two of the young adults were taken into protective custody. Hussey said they showed signs of having consumed alcohol and were unsteady of their feet. "The officer did not feel comfortable leaving them and wanted to make sure they were safe," he said.

The next day police determined from the boat owner that the four did not have permission to use the boat – an 11-foot Boston Whaler — and have sought complaints in court on the charge of using a boat without authority.

Hussey said the group abandoned the boat on shore and at least one of them was wet when the officer stopped the vehicle.

Citgo Station vandalism

George Roukounakis, owner of the Olympic Citgo station in the village, said vandals trashed the area behind his service station sometime late Friday night for early Saturday morning. He reported the incident to police Saturday morning. The vandals threw the orange plastic barrels around, broke a Farmer's Market sign, broke cement blocks and smashed a bicycle. "It was a war zone," Roukounakis said. "There was stuff all over the place."

When Roukounakis arrived Sunday morning – the mess was cleaned up. He doesn't know who was responsible. "I'm happy that someone cared about what they did wrong and tried to fix it up," he said.

Police Chief James Hussey said it's not clear if those responsible for the vandalism cleaned it up or if an neighboring business did. He said to help stop vandalism downtown, police will be getting out of their cruisers more often and having a bigger presence in the village.

Roukounakis said over the past two weeks, vandals have also broken two windows in the garage doors of his service station.

The 'pride' of Weymouth

Harrington returns home on national tour of "The Lion King"

With close 300 individual costume pieces used in the spectacular stage production of Disney's "The Lion King," now at Boston's lavishly restored Opera House, assistant wardrobe supervisor Scott Harrington is usually pretty busy backstage. Every so often, however, the Weymouth native checks out the action on-stage.

"There are days when even this can feel like it is just another job," Harrington explained recently by telephone. "Then you sit in the audience and you see the magic happen all over again and the wonderful effect it has on people of all ages. This show is just not ordinary in any sense of the word."

Based on the 1994 Disney animated feature of the same name, "The Lion King" is the story of a lion cub raised to take his father's place. Before he has a chance, however, to become king of the jungle, his destiny is put on hold by the evil machinations of a dastardly uncle. After a period in exile, the young lion returns to resume his rightful place in the circle of life.

Harrington, a 1986 Weymouth South graduate, first joined the Tony Award-winning show on Broadway where it has been playing to solidly sold out audiences for the past seven years. Since early 2002, Harrington has been with the show's national tour.

"We're a very tight team on the road. It takes all of us to get the show up and running every day," he said. "There are 49 cast members, and two sets of child actors who rotate performances, 21 musicians and a dedicated puppeteering team. There are 110 of us in this company. We also employ a lot of local people in each city. It is choreographed chaos backstage, because there are just so many people involved. My team has to make sure that all costumes are maintained and prepared every day, because we have only one complete set of costumes."

Although he now calls Fort Lauderdale home, and New York the base for his career, Harrington is grateful for the tour's current stop.

"Boston is our longest sit-down of the tour. I'm hoping to see as many of my old friends as possible while we're here. I'm probably also going to spend a fair amount of my free time shopping on Newbury Street and maybe a Monday or two on the Cape. I'm very excited, too, that we will be here for Thanksgiving and Christmas. It's very hard to spend the holidays on the road."

With his parents, Elaine and Walter Harrington, still living in South Weymouth, the Messiah College graduate won't have to wait until November for a nice dinner.

"My mom started to grocery shop for my favorite foods even before we got here. I'll be very happy to have at least a few home-cooked meals over the next few months."

("The Lion King" will be at The Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston, through Dec. 26. For tickets and information, visit the box office, or call 617/931-2787.)

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

SMALL MIRACLE

The completely-in-the-canal (CIC) hearing instrument is all but invisible to onlookers. Fitting neatly inside the ear canal as the name suggests, the CIC hearing instrument most closely resembles natural hearing. This is because the microphone of the CIC instrument sits in the ear canal, simulating natural sound reception. Also, with its placement of the receiver (speaker) so close to the eardrum, the instrument gives sound a natural boost in loudness. While its cosmetic and functional appeal is widespread, the size of the CIC instrument limits its power to make it unsuitable for those with severe to profound hearing losses. And, because CIC instruments are custom fit, they are rarely recommended for children, whose ears are still growing.

Is vanity affecting your hearing? You're not alone. Millions of Americans let vanity needlessly interfere with their decision to wear a hearing instrument. Come visit us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER and discover how today's hearing instruments are virtually disappearing. See the tiny, almost invisible hearing instruments that are now available at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and have a free, painless hearing test to determine the state of your hearing. We can be reached at 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Completely-in-the-canal instruments can have conventional, programmable analog or digital technology housed within its tiny casing.

Meet Rosie

She has a twinkle in her eye, a smile on her lips and autism.

Rosie's family understands that for Rosie, and the more than one million Americans like her who ar living with autism spectrum disorder, research offers hope. That's why they joined forces with 7,000 other people in Boston last year, to raise money for the National Alliance for Autism Research (NAAR), the first organization in the country dedicated to funding and accelerating biomedical research to unlock the mysteries of autism spectrum disorders. To date, NAAR has committed $20.9 million to directly fund autism research — more than any other non-governmental organization in the U.S. Most of the money raised for NAAR comes from the Walk F.A.R. (Family & Friends for Autism Research) for NAAR Walkathons.

Deer Hill gets red carpet treatment

Special addition for opening day

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Dressed in their new back-to-school clothes, hair freshly cut and new school supplies in tow, Deer Hill students were given the "red carpet treatment" Wednesday as they headed off to their new classrooms for the first time.

With cameras flashing the students smiled as they walked single file on a red carpet akin to Hollywood movie stars, to begin a new year of learning and fun.

As custodian Jones prepared to roll out the carpet, a very excited Gauley said to a student, "Woo-hoo!"

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley has been working on obtaining a red carpet for the past few weeks in order to make the first day of school a memorable one. He didn't think he would be able to find a narrow, long red carpet, but his search finally came to an end and the plan was set. The carpet would be rolled out at the front of the school by Head Custodian Tom Jones, to greet students as they stepped off the bus at 8:10. However, Mother Nature stepped in, and the carpet had to be moved inside.

Students in grades three through five were sent to the auditorium to meet up with their new teachers and classmates. Once all buses had

ZBA looks over Tedeschi's plans

Dunkin' Donuts drive-through is part of project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Zoning Board of Appeals took its first look at proposed plans for a new combined Tedeschi's Food Shop, Dunkin' Donuts and gas station to be located at the current South Main Street Olympic Citgo gas station Tuesday.

There had been some discussion about whether the Planning Board should be reviewing the site plan before it reached the Zoning Board, but ZBA members saw no harm Tuesday in a preliminary discussion.

To transform the site, Tedeschi's Food Shops needs to obtain a special permit for a change of use from the ZBA, to allow for a drive-up window. In addition, the Planning Board will need to conduct a site plan review. Tedeschi's attorney Charles Humphreys said in the past, the Planning Board has used the fact that a project does not have a special permit to deny site plans. "Our site plan bylaw is really a building permit bylaw," Humphreys said. He added that if there is no chance Tedeschi's will be given a special permit a lot of money and time would be wasted in designing the site plan. However, if the special permit is granted, at that time it makes sense to move ahead to

Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With the state primary just around the corner, Tuesday, Sept. 14, will be the perfect dress rehearsal to get Cohasset residents in the mood to cast their big vote Nov. 2.

With relatively little competition in Norfolk County, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said she doesn't expect many voters to make their way over to Town Hall on Tuesday. "I think the turnout will be fairly low," she said.

Voting will be at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Votes will be cast by precinct, and for those who do not know their precinct, they will be posted on the door of the Town Clerk's office. Cohasset has two precincts.

The Norfolk County Commissioner's race has four Democratic candidates vying for the position including incumbent John Gillis of Quincy, Francis O'Brien of Dedham, Stephen Harold of Quincy, and Susan Rogers of Canton.

There are two Democratic candidates for Councilor in the fourth district as incumbent Christopher Iannela Jr. of Boston is running against Stephen Flynn of Hull. The winner in the primary will be up against Republican Donald Hussey of Hingham this fall.

Democrat William O'Donnell of Norwood will be looking to continue to fill the position of Register of Deeds and will be up against fellow Democrat

Two 'big houses' under new bylaw

No neighborhood opposition raised

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Is the brouhaha over 3 Jerusalem Lane becoming a distant memory? From the lack of recent opposition to big houses, it could be the case.

Since voters approved the Large House Site Plan Review bylaw at April's Town Meeting, plans for two big homes have come before the Planning Board for review, and both have been approved without public opposition.

The bylaw was passed to help insure abutters are notified if a "large house" is going to be built in their neighborhood and that the Planning Board holds a public hearing to air concerns on both sides. The bylaw is also intended as a way to preserve the character of the town by preventing "mansionization."

On Sept. 1, the Planning Board approved large house site plans for Cohasset residents Helen and Ethan Arnold. The Arnolds want to raze the house at 20 Bow St., and rebuild a new larger home on the roughly 27,000 square foot lot. The Bow Street home is currently owned by Kathryn and William Morgan. The Arnolds would like to build a two-story, wood frame, shingle style house, which would total roughly 4,300 square feet of living space. With the garage, the total square footage would be roughly 4,800.

Because the house will exceed "the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet," as the bylaw reads, the large house review was triggered. While the homeowners say they may choose to modify plans for the house before it is built, the overall design would remain the same but the dimensions could decrease, making the house

Rosie's family understands that for Rosie, and the more than one million Americans like her who ar living with autism spectrum disorder, research offers hope. That's why they joined forces with 7,000 other people in Boston last year, to raise money for the National Alliance for Autism Research (NAAR), the first organization in the country dedicated to funding and accelerating biomedical research to unlock the mysteries of autism spectrum disorders. To date, NAAR has committed $20.9 million to directly fund autism research — more than any other non-governmental organization in the U.S. Most of the money raised for NAAR comes from the Walk F.A.R. Deer Hill gets red carpet treatment

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Dressed in their new back-to-school clothes, hair freshly cut and new school supplies in tow, Deer Hill students were given the "red carpet treatment" Wednesday as they headed off to their new classrooms for the first time.

With cameras flashing the students smiled as they walked single file on a red carpet akin to Hollywood movie stars, to begin a new year of learning and fun.

As custodian Jones prepared to roll out the carpet, a very excited Gauley said to a student, "Woo-hoo!"

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley has been working on obtaining a red carpet for the past few weeks in order to make the first day of school a memorable one. He didn't think he would be able to find a narrow, long red carpet, but his search finally came to an end and the plan was set. The carpet would be rolled out at the front of the school by Head Custodian Tom Jones, to greet students as they stepped off the bus at 8:10. However, Mother Nature stepped in, and the carpet had to be moved inside.

Students in grades three through five were sent to the auditorium to meet up with their new teachers and classmates. Once all buses had

ZBA looks over Tedeschi's plans

Dunkin' Donuts drive-through is part of project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Zoning Board of Appeals took its first look at proposed plans for a new combined Tedeschi's Food Shop, Dunkin' Donuts and gas station to be located at the current South Main Street Olympic Citgo gas station Tuesday.

There had been some discussion about whether the Planning Board should be reviewing the site plan before it reached the Zoning Board, but ZBA members saw no harm Tuesday in a preliminary discussion.

To transform the site, Tedeschi's Food Shops needs to obtain a special permit for a change of use from the ZBA, to allow for a drive-up window. In addition, the Planning Board will need to conduct a site plan review. Tedeschi's attorney Charles Humphreys said in the past, the Planning Board has used the fact that a project does not have a special permit to deny site plans. "Our site plan bylaw is really a building permit bylaw," Humphreys said. He added that if there is no chance Tedeschi's will be given a special permit a lot of money and time would be wasted in designing the site plan. However, if the special permit is granted, at that time it makes sense to move ahead to

Samantha Browr
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With the state primary just around the corner, Tuesday, Sept. 14, will be the perfect dress rehearsal to get Cohasset residents in the mood to cast their big vote Nov. 2.

With relatively little competition in Norfolk County, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said she doesn't expect many voters to make their way over to Town Hall on Tuesday. "I think the turnout will be fairly low," she said.

Voting will be at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Votes will be cast by precinct, and for those who do not know their precinct, they will be posted on the door of the Town Clerk's office. Cohasset has two precincts.

The Norfolk County Commissioner's race has four Democratic candidates vying for the position including incumbent John Gillis of Quincy, Francis O'Brien of Dedham, Stephen Harold of Quincy, and Susan Rogers of Canton.

There are two Democratic candidates for Councilor in the fourth district as incumbent Christopher Iannela Jr. of Boston is running against Stephen Flynn of Hull. The winner in the primary will be up against Republican Donald Hussey of Hingham this fall.

Democrat William O'Donnell of Norwood will be looking to continue to fill the position of Register of Deeds and will be up against fellow Democrat

Two 'big houses' under new bylaw

No neighborhood opposition raised

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Is the brouhaha over 3 Jerusalem Lane becoming a distant memory? From the lack of recent opposition to big houses, it could be the case.

Since voters approved the Large House Site Plan Review bylaw at April's Town Meeting, plans for two big homes have come before the Planning Board for review, and both have been approved without public opposition.

The bylaw was passed to help insure abutters are notified if a "large house" is going to be built in their neighborhood and that the Planning Board holds a public hearing to air concerns on both sides. The bylaw is also intended as a way to preserve the character of the town by preventing "mansionization."

On Sept. 1, the Planning Board approved large house site plans for Cohasset residents Helen and Ethan Arnold. The Arnolds want to raze the house at 20 Bow St., and rebuild a new larger home on the roughly 27,000 square foot lot. The Bow Street home is currently owned by Kathryn and William Morgan. The Arnolds would like to build a two-story, wood frame, shingle style house, which would total roughly 4,300 square feet of living space. With the garage, the total square footage would be roughly 4,800.

Because the house will exceed "the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet," as the bylaw reads, the large house review was triggered. While the homeowners say they may choose to modify plans for the house before it is built, the overall design would remain the same but the dimensions could decrease, making the house

MBTA takes soil samples

Greenbush Community Coordinator Tom Carroll said the MBTA will be taking soil samples in various locations throughout Cohasset Wednesday, Sept. 8 (yesterday) and Thursday Sept. 9. The soil samples are confirmatory samples for disposal and is not the beginning stage of construction. Carroll said a small bobcat with a drill will be taking the samples, and residents should not be alarmed if it comes close to wetlands. Work will not be done in the wetlands, but with the kind of soil samples the MBTA is taking, they are allowed into the buffer zones. Soil samples may take up to 45 minutes.

'Our Town' to debut

'Our Town" featuring talk-show hosts Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo will debut at 8:30 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 16 on cable-TV channel 10. Special guests are Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan and state Rep. Garrett Bradley.

Rich Ofsthun, the show's roving reporter, will provide footage from the RTF where he is interviewing citizens about what they'd like to see on the new TV show.

The show will be repeated at 8:30 p.m., Sept. 23. The show can be reached by email at:

ourtown@theclickstudio.com.

Soil samples will be conducted in the following areas: East Street at Hingham and North Main; Rocky Lane; Sohier Street; two areas between Sohier Street and Smith Place; Smith Lane and Pleasant Street; Pleasant Street to Spring Street; Sestito Lane to Castle Road, and Beechwood and Lincoln Lane.

For more information on the Greenbush project, please visit the MBTA's Web site at www.mbta.com, or the Cashman Balfour Beatty Greenbush site at www.cbbgreenbush.com. For questions or concerns regarding construction activities or to see plans, please call the Greenbush hotline at (781) 682-6350.

KoKo Island to be discussed

The Zoning Board of Appeals was slated to discuss proposed changes to the current KoKo Island and Hair Affair sites Tuesday, but continued the hearing until October to allow the Planning Board more time to make a recommendation. The matter is slated to come before the Planning Board again Wednesday Sept. 22 at 7 p.m.

Planning Board meeting agenda

The next Planning Board meeting will be held Wednesday, Sept. 15. The board intends to deliver a decision on the proposed DiNero's site plan. The board will also discuss problems with the subdivision on Ox Pasture Lane as well as some administrative business. KoKo Island, which was slated for the agenda has been postponed until Sept. 22.

On Sept. 22, a proposed subdivision for the "Nader" property off Beechwood Street will be discussed. The Planning Board rejected a set of preliminary plans at its meeting Sept. 1, stating they were incomplete.

Volunteer sought for Conservation Comm.

The Conservation Commission has an opening. Interested citizens should call the selectmen's office at 781-383-4105 or stop by the office at Town Hall. Applicants may also send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen, Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025

Hull Seaside Rescue hosts adoption day

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue invites you to its first Adoption Day on Sunday, Sept. 12 at 50 L. Street, Hull, from 1-3 p.m.

Adoption donations are $50 per adult and $150 per kitten (fees for adults include spay/neuter and all vaccinations, and for kittens include spay/neuter and first set of shots). If you are interested, adoption applications will be available. After approval, you will be given a day and time to return and pick up your new pet.

If you are a real giver and want to do more, HSAR is also looking for volunteers for a variety of shelter duties and for a twice-a-month trip to Boston to pick up donated food and supplies for the animals.

See what Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is all about and meet the people who volunteer. For further information, visit www.hsar.org or call 1-877-378-1195.

'All the Best' nature has to offer at new village shop

By Samantha Brown

David Bigley's health food store is going into the former ABB Optical building.

David Bigley has been known to wish his friends "all the best." For the past 20 years, it has been his "catch phrase," closing out letters, e-mails, and phone conversations.

When it came time to decide on a name for his new health food store, he said there was no other option, "Because that's really what I'm going to be carrying here," he said.

Bigley has a vision to bring a natural health food store to Cohasset, and it is about to come to fruition. With the loss of the former Village health food store, Nothin' But Natural, Bigley said he saw the opportunity to fill the void that was left. Although Whole Foods will be moving in the Derby Street Shops in Hingham, he believes he will be able to set himself apart from the larger chain store, and provide what it can't to Cohasset residents.

"I think I can be the local source," for natural products he said, because he will be able to better respond to customer requests. "It's easier to impact inventory here," and Bigley is looking for residents to do just that.

In the former ABB Optical site, located on Pleasant Street across from the Pleasant Street Parfait, the transformation from large, open warehouse to a cluster of unique shops under one roof is taking place. Bare floors covered with sawdust will be cleaned and filled with standing shelves stocked with whole grains and natural food items, bare walls will house refrigerators and freezers stocked with organic milk, soy, and dairy products, and organic produce harvested by local growers will overflow from baskets.

Bigley's shop, located at the rear of the building, will still need some work before its doors can open, but the finishing touches should be in place within the week, and Bigley hopes to open his doors Sept. 15.

"I'm anxious to hear what people want and I'm anxious to provide what people want," Bigley said.

Bigley plans to stock his shelves with both nutritional and sports supplements as well as protein drinks and bars. He also hopes to provide a selection of fair-trade items. For an item to be considered a fair trade, the people who produce the item are paid a good portion of the price the consumer pays. Bigley said coffee and chocolate are both widely available as fair trade items, and he plans to have both in his store.

All the Best will also have natural health and beauty products. Bigley is currently looking for companies which sell good quality products which have not been tested on animals. In addition, Bigley said he will be selling essential oils , which are typically used for aromatherapy.

Being a business owner is something new to Bigley, but he says he is up for the challenge. "Everything I've ever done I've had to do it for the first time no matter what," he said. "I'm really excited about it. It's a whole new adventure for me."

Along with the excitement of beginning a new business venture comes the convenience of having a short commute as Bigley and his wife Alix White, live around the corner on James Lane. "It is literally a two-minute commute," he said.

In addition to Bigley's shop, the building, which will be renamed "James Brook Crossing," will also house the Platinum Spike, a toy shop currently located on South Main Street; Cohasset Greenery, a florist currently located above Cohasset Hardware on South Main Street; and the Windsor Tea Shop, which has moved from its North Scituate location along with Emporium Naturals, which sells handmade soaps. Emporium Naturals may be run as part of an artisans co-op which will allow between 12 to 15 people to use a space in the building, without having the responsibility of one person having to run their own shop.

Construction is winding down, and while Bigley will open his doors in mid-September, it will be October before the entire site is ready and open for business. However, those who are slated to begin operating think the cluster of businesses will bring a much needed vibrancy to the far end of the Village. The building is tucked away behind the South Shore Arts Center and it isn't as visible from the street. It hasn't always generated many shoppers, but Bigley said the new businesses are going to help change all that. "There will be some reason for everyone to come, whether it's for the best cup of tea in town or the best natural foods," he said.

Bigley said residents are welcome to stop by and take a look at the store, or make requests for items, even before he formally opens his doors. He said he is at the store at some point every day and can be contacted there at (781) 383-3005. If he doesn't answer, please leave a message. For residents interested in the co-op which will operate in the future, please contact Julia Peterson at (781) 383-3434.

Two men trapped in elevator accident

Two elevator repair men are lucky to be alive after the elevator they were working on at the Cohasset Knoll Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Facility off Route 3A unexpectedly released and fell down the shaft, trapping the two in only 18 inches of space.

The call came in to the Cohasset Fire Department at 11:31 a.m. Tuesday, and Fire Captain Mark Trask said it was reported as two men stuck in an elevator. "We get people stuck in elevator calls all the time," he said, adding it is usually a fairly routine procedure with no injuries.

However, in this case, Trask said it was much more severe.

Trask said the two men, employees of South Shore Elevator Company, based out of Hingham, were completing "Major repairs on the elevator. It was going to be out of service for about two weeks." The men were taking steps to prepare to remove the main piston, when it suddenly released and came crashing down.

The men were taking steps to prepare to remove the main piston, when it suddenly released and came crashing down.

The men were trapped for roughly an hour, and the Hull Fire Department was called in to assist. "Hull has a large number of low-rise buildings with elevator service, and they have a great deal more inclusive experience with elevators," Trask said.

Trask said rescuers were able to communicate with the trapped men the entire time. Because they could speak, and were elevator repairmen, they were able to help decipher where would be the best place to cut through the elevator to get them out. Rescuers cut through a panel of the elevator with a Sawzall, and the man who was less injured was able to stand up in the space between the elevator and the wall and was lifted out, and the other who was more severely injured needed to be strapped down and lifted out.

Trask said from what he has heard from paramedics, the men suffered from head, shoulder and arm lacerations. The more injured of the two was air lifted to Boston, while the second was taken by ambulance to South Shore Hospital. Trask said he has not received any update on the condition of the two men, or what occurred.

"Nobody really knows what happened," said Trask, adding with accidents such as this, the fire department notifies the State Department of Public Safety to investigate. A representative from the Department of Public Safety was on the scene 15 minutes after the ambulance left, and Trask said he will likely interview the men who were trapped to get a better understanding of the situation. Because the men were working on the elevator, only they know what had been removed or replaced, and they will be able to paint a fuller picture for investigators.

Trask said from the pictures he saw which were taken under the carriage, the amount of space the men had under the elevator, would be "like crawling under a chair. They were very fortunate."

ELECTION DAY
September 14th

Dear Norfolk County Voters:

For twenty years, I have been in the real estate business in both Norfolk and Suffolk Counties. As a property owner, manager, investor and consultant, I know the real estate business. I know what it is like to wait more than a year to get paper work back from the Registry of Deeds. I know what it is like to have to travel many miles back and forth to Dedham during busy workday hours. Most importantly, I know what it is to work a full day for a full day's pay. I know what accountability to the workplace is.

If elected, I promise to maintain ACCURACY, ACCOUNTABILITY, ACCESSIBILITY and SERVICE to the residents of Norfolk County. I will increase the staff so as to provide timely RETURN OF DOCUMENTS. I will begin the process of investigating SATELLITE OFFICES at both ends of Norfolk County. I will finish the modernization of the Registry of Deeds started by the previously ELECTED Register of Deeds, Paul D. Harold. I will maintain a PROFESSIONAL workplace atmosphere at the Registry of Deeds so that all taxpayers of Norfolk County can be assured that their hard earned monies used to pay the salary of the Register of Deeds and the work schedule of the Register of Deeds is accounted for.

Sincerely,

Tony

make the decisions on the particulars of the site such as lighting and a color palette, which the site plan covers.

However, ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick said he doesn't believe the applicant should wait to file for a site plan review until after his board is done, and that the Planning Board needs to be in a position to make a recommendation before the board is done with its review. "There's a chicken and egg thing happening here," Chittick said. After some discussion, the board allowed the applicant's development team to make its presentation.

John Cavanaro of John Cavanaro Consulting is the engineer for the project, and he presented an overview of what future plans could be for the site. He said George Roukounakis, owner of Olympic Citgo, has been working with the owners of Tedeschi's to raze the current building and create a new facility housing both the gas station and convenience store as well as a Dunkin' Donuts.

The new building would be pushed back roughly 100 feet, allowing for six new parking spaces as well as an additional handicapped accessible space in front of the building. There would be three gas pumps, which could serve two customers at a time, in front as well.

To the right of the building would be the queue for the drive-through. The drive-up lane would curve around from the right to the back, where the actual window would be located. There would be a second lane for exiting traffic which bypasses the drive-through lane, and cars will be able to exit either into the town parking lot or onto James Lane from the rear of the building. There will also be three employee parking spaces behind the building.

The new building would be pushed back roughly 100 feet, allowing for six new parking spaces as well as an additional handicapped accessible space in front of the building.

There will also be two curb cuts in the front of the building, allowing traffic to exit and enter from South Main Street. "We tried to have as much diffusion and circulation of traffic as possible," Cavanaro said.

The current building owned by Roukounakis is 15,000 square feet, and would be reconstructed at 35,000 square feet. "This building could be bigger, but Tedeschi's was more concerned with the way it flowed and the way it looked," said Humphreys. The Dunkin' Donuts shop will have a counter inside the building as well, and will essentially be its own operation inside the Tedeschi's shop.

Chittick said for him, it was hard to imagine a drive-through window emptying onto James Lane, especially with the traffic the Red Lion generates. He said in the past Fire Captain Mark Trask has come before the board with concerns that the emergency vehicles had trouble fitting up the road, "and now you're proposing to immeasurably increase traffic?" Chittick went on to say he can't imagine the situation working unless the town made the street one-way only, which the development team said it would be happy to consider.

The development team said it did not anticipate a sharp increase in traffic, as it would be drawing from the same customer base, and wouldn't attract many who do not usually frequent the village. Although there will be some tables inside the Dunkin' Donuts, they do not anticipate customers will stay long. At most, people who work in or near the village may walk over to have a casual meeting and may choose to sit, but their stay will be brief, developers said.

The ZBA continued the hearing until October, and will at that point hear more of the details of the plans. Until then, developers have been advised to file a site plan for the Planning Board's review.

The first set of large house plans to come before the board were submitted by George McGoldrick, 93 Black Rock Road, in May. McGoldrick's plans proposed building a new 4,100 square foot family home on Jerusalem Road. McGoldrick had bought the property at 378 Jerusalem Road, which includes an old Victorian home and its lot, as well as a second buildable lot. McGoldrick had renovated the Victorian home and planned to sell it to a couple from Natick, and move with his family to the home he intends to build on the second lot.

McGoldrick said he looked at the bylaw and tried to conform to its standards as much as possible, taking his neighbors into consideration. The only abutter to attend the meeting was Growth and Development Committee member Mark DeGiacomo, who had helped draft the bylaw and was coincidentally an abutter. DeGiacomo attended the meeting to see how the process would unfold the first time around.

Abutters to the Arnolds' project did not attend the Planning Board's public hearing or previous Conservation Commission and Zoning Board hearings, which is a good indication the bylaw is doing what it was meant to do, officials say.

"When you advertise a public hearing, people usually only come when they're upset," said Planning Board Chairman Al Moore at the Arnolds' hearing.

The board said plans were complete, and without any objection from abutters, Ok'ed the plans, subject to approval by the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Moore cautioned because the house will have just below 20 percent lot coverage when complete, future expansion could be impeded under the town's zoning bylaws. "Make a note, if you or some future owner wants to put a little porch on, you may not be able to do that," he said.

Demolishing an existing home at 3 Jerusalem Lane and replacing it with a structure three times its size caused an uproar in town that lasted months. The town's new bylaw is intended to address "large house" proposals before construction gets underway.

The large house site plan review was modeled after a bylaw adopted by the town of Weston. It will ensure any construction of residential buildings which exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area, up to 6,000 square feet, will be subject to Planning Board review. If a home is under the size requirements, the bylaw will have no effect on any building plans.

Although the Planning Board can approve the site plans for large homes, it is ultimately up to Building Inspector Robert Egan whether to issue a building permit.

Fencing on center stage at DiNero's hearing

Abutters concerned over aesthetics and safety

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

DiNero's restaurant will be able to move forward with its expansion, provided its owners comply with some very specific conditions. The Planning Board took abutters' concerns into consideration and will still need to OK changes implemented on the plans such as — adding a solid fence between abutting properties, minimizing light spillover onto abutting property, and proof of the safety of stonewalls on site — before giving final approval.

While John Fairchild, 800 Jerusalem Road, is worried about the potential for light spillover, his main concern is regarding proposed plantings on his property and whether they would provide enough of a buffer. He said he had asked for a solid fence from the beginning, but that a chain link fence had already been installed, and he was not aware the board could potentially condition the site plan on making that change. He also said while he had agreed on plantings with representatives from DiNero's, because they will need room to grow, they will be far apart at the outset, and he worries about the "curb appeal" of his property.

DiNero's said having anything but a chain link fence installed on the site will require much maintenance, and because of the high winds, a solid fence would be much more likely to blow over in a fierce wind.

"A stockade fence is a sail," said Frank Amonte of Kelly Engineering, the firm DiNero's hired to help with the expansion. He added wind pressure on a stockade will knock it down, where chain link allows the wind to pass through. Amonte said crawling vines will be planted along the fence which will eventually provide a much more solid buffer, and in the end, the chain link fence will require the least amount of maintenance. Amonte suggested holding off on any decision-making about the fence until after the vegetation takes hold, and if abutters are still unhappy, the issue could be revisited.

Jim Reichardt, 3 Grace Drive, also expressed concern over the chain link fence. His backyard abuts the DiNero's property, and he said a solid fence would greatly improve aesthetics and "make his backyard more enjoyable." He said he has a 4-year-old at home who could potentially climb a chain link fence and therefore, from a safety standpoint, an alternate fence would be his preference.

But Amonte said roughly 175 feet of fencing has already been installed on Fairchild's property as well as another 80 feet on Reichardt's property. DiNero's has had to spend roughly $19,000 on fencing so far, he said.

"Quite frankly, the board didn't ask you to put a fence up there."
— Al Moore, Planning Board

However, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said, "Quite frankly, the board didn't ask you to put a fence up there."

David Sorgman, manager of design for Bay Planning Company Inc., which has designed the DiNero's expansion, said the chain link fence was actually a replacement fence for another which was removed when roughly 40 feet of ledge was excavated from the DiNero's site. DiNero's attorney Gregory Sullivan said the new fence was installed for safety reasons after the construction was complete.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt said while he wasn't trying to be harsh, "don't spend a lot of money until you have all your permits in hand." Pratt explained the board has an interest in screening the commercial district from the residential district, and DiNero's would have to install a solid fence as a condition for the site plan's approval. Pratt recognized DiNero's has been in a constant state of upgrade for some time, which is good for the area, but the abutters' concerns need to be addressed. "That's what makes this so tough," he said.

In addition, the board said it would like to see a written affidavit regarding the safety of the rock wall surrounding the property. Member Stuart Ivimey said he would also like to see issues regarding drainage and sprinklers dealt with as well as possibly moving one ramp at the front of the building to another location, as it encroaches on town property.

DiNero's said it currently has a license to operate the ramp, and while they understand it can be taken away at any given time, the ramp itself cannot be moved because it needs a certain amount of feet in order to be state compliant, and unless both entrances are on the same side of the building, that cannot happen. Even if the ramp is taken out, DiNero's representatives say the building itself encroaches on town property, and the stairs would have to remain no matter what. DiNero's said it would make more sense to have the ramp stay, rather than keep the entrance but make it inaccessible.

DiNero's will come back before the board with revised plans Sept. 15. Although the public hearing process is closed, which means the time for public comment has passed, the meeting is open to the public.

Signs could be changing for Jonathan Livingston Square

Jonathan Livingston Square currently has only one sign which doesn't have enough space to accommodate for all its tenants. Between the two buildings, 20 businesses are operating, but only five or six are being advertised on the street. In light of that, Tom Cummings, a trustee of the Jonathan Livingston Realty Trust, which owns Jonathan Livingston Square, came before the ZBA Tuesday to inquire about changing the signage in the square to be able to accommodate all the tenants.

Owners of Barkley's Dog Spa, located in the shopping center, is just one of many businesses which have been trying to gain more visibility and has put out temporary signage for their business. Located in a building which doesn't have much visibility from the street, the owners put out their own sign and were told by Building Inspector Robert Egan they would have to bring it back in due to sign bylaws. Egan said because of the long and involved zoning history of the shopping center, it would make sense to bring the matter before the ZBA, to see if a solution could be found.

Owners of Barkley's Dog Spa, located in the shopping center, is just one of many businesses which have been trying to gain more visibility and has put out temporary signage for their business.

That is when Cummings decided to inquire about changing the sign or possibly include two signs, one for each building, in the Square. The two buildings, although considered separate lots, had been treated as one lot to allow for cross-easements to aid with parking, although they were never formally merged as one lot. Because they were considered one lot, only one permanent sign has been allowed. Cummings told the board the two lots were never merged because they were non-conforming and merging them, "would make the whole situation impossible," he said.

Because the lots are separate, Cummings said it would make sense for two signs to be allowed. The ZBA had made a recommendation years ago that the lots would be considered as one for zoning purposes only, and ZBA member Charlie Higginson said if the board made that determination in the past, it could also change it now, and allow one sign on each lot. "If we said go left back then, we can say go right," he said.

The board said it would bring the matter back again in October, and until then, Barkley's would be able to keep its temporary sign out. The board suggested Cummings return with plans for a smaller sign which has room for all the tenants. Depending on the ZBA's decision, the Square may be allowed to come back in the future with plans for two signs for the property, one for each building. "My intention is, after we get this squared away, to do that," said Cummings, adding he will have David Hassan design the sign.

They're enthusiastic, friendly and know how to work for a cause. That combination has translated into the Papa Gino's in Cohasset Plaza winning top honors in a recent coupon drive with the proceeds benefiting Easter Seals and the Genesis Fund.

"Every team member got behind it – we knew it was a good cause and we let our customers know."

— Wilkens Jeanty, general manager

The local pizza house raised $2,200 by offering customers coupons worth $35 in savings for a $1 donation.

"We asked everyone who came in if they'd like to participate," said Wilkens Jeanty, general manager at the Cohasset restaurant. "Every team member got behind it – we knew it was a good cause and we let our customers know."

The Cohasset donations helped Papa Gino's and D'Angelo Sandwich Shops across New England raise a total of $312,529 for the charities' annual fundraising campaign conducted in May.

Customers who donated $1 received 12 coupons redeemable for menu items at Papa Gino's and D'Angelo restaurants through August.

Over the past 27 years, the D'Angelo/Papa Gino's coupon campaign has raised more than $3 million for the non-profit organizations. Easter Seals provides services for children and adults with disabilities to expand their independence and the Genesis Fund raises money for specialized care for children with birth defects, mental retardation and genetic diseases.

Jeanty says his staff deserves a pat on the back. "They're the best crew and I'd like to thank the Cohasset Papa Gino's team for a job well done," he said.

Tom Galligan, president and CEO of Papa Gino's, Inc., the parent company of both chains, said customers have supported the campaign with increasing generosity every year.

"D'Angelo and Papa Gino employees and guests are dedicated to helping children and adults with disabilities live full, productive lives as active members of their communities," said Galligan, who is also chairman of Easter Seals.

First Parish welcomes new minister

The doors of the Meeting House on Cohasset Common open to welcome a new minister on Sunday, Sept. 12. Last May, First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset called the Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull to become the 19th minister in the 284 years of this historic congregation.

Dr. Carlsson-Bull, or Jan, arrived on the South Shore this August, with her husband, Dr. Daniel Bull (Dan). For the past seven years, Jan served as assistant minister at the Unitarian Church of All Souls on Manhattan's Upper East Side commuting by train and subway from their home in Montclair, N.J.

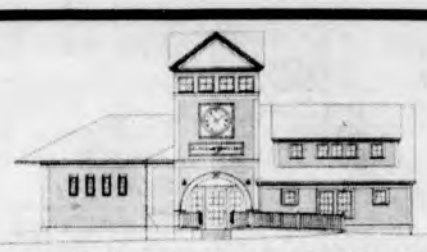
Jan and her husband, Dan, have three adult daughters all living in the New York City area. A swimming enthusiast, Jan quips that Sandy Beach and Minot Beach are an altogether different dip than New York Harbor, or even the Jersey Shore. Jan brings almost 20 years of non-profit and corporate experience to her ministry. She holds a Ph.D. in developmental psychology from Yeshiva University and a master's of divinity degree from New York's Union Theological Seminary.

Jan's former church, "All Souls", is a congregation known for its social outreach and social justice advocacy as well as its stellar music program and compelling preaching. Does Jan hope to transform First Parish into an equally compelling beacon for justice in the arena of faith communities?

"That is up to the congregation," says Jan. "First and foremost, I hope to get to know folks, to discover the deeper layers of this congregation with its own track record of justice within the community."

"First and foremost, I hope to get to know folks, to discover the deeper layers of this congregation with its own track record of justice within the community."
— Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull

The Rev. Joseph Osgood, who served First Parish during the tumultuous years of the Civil War, was a well-known abolitionist and public school reformer. The late Rev. Elizabeth Tarbox, who served First Parish in the late 1990s, was a published essayist, whose work resonated with a keen awareness of social injustices.



First Parish Unitarian Universalist of Cohasset welcomes Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, shown here, to the pulpit on Sept. 12. Rev. Dr. Carlsson-Bull has been called as the 19th minister of this historic parish on Cohasset Common.

Denominationally, Jan is active as a founding member of the Unitarian Universalist Trauma Response Ministry, established after the events of Sept. 11, 2001. During this time, Jan served as a chaplain both at Ground Zero and at New York City's Family Assistance Center, an extension of her ministry at All Souls. Recently three of her Trauma Response colleagues ventured to the hurricane ridden east coast of Florida, where they offered assistance in processing the disaster and conducted trauma training for other clergy. Jan also serves on the Commission on Social Witness of the Unitarian Universalist Association, is former president of the Metro/New York District's Unitarian Universalist Ministers Association, and was for many years an active member of the Metro/New York District's Anti-Racism Committee.

Cohasset's First Parish is housed in one of the oldest continuously used churches in the country. Erected in 1741, the congregation itself was founded in 1721. The membership became "Unitarian" (affirming the oneness of God) in 1824. In 1961 Unitarians merged with the Universalists (affirming universal salvation). As the Rev. William Sinkford, President of the UUA (Unitarian Universalist Association) notes, Unitarian Universalism is about "one God, no one left behind." This liberal religious faith community is non-creedal, while promoting principles that include the inherent worth and dignity of every person and the interdependent web of all existence.

In harmony with Jan's hope to build a foundation of knowledge and trust, her opening sermon on Sept. 12 is apt—"Good Morning!" On this same date, First Parish will register children for its highly touted Religious Education program and its nationally reputed OWL (Our Whole Lives) program for youth. With her colleagues from First Parish and a membership that she finds gracious and welcoming, Jan hopes to greet individuals and families who are looking for a parish home where they are accepted for who they are and where everyone matters. She will undoubtedly say more in her September 19 sermon on "Community".

Sunday services at First Parish Unitarian Universalist begin at 10:30 a.m., with childcare available and coffee hour directly following the service. All are welcome. To find out more about the services and programs of First Parish Unitarian Universalist, Rev. Dr. Carlsson-Bull invites you to visit the parish Web site, www.firstparishcohasset.org, or, in her words, to "Take my 'Good Morning' to heart and drop by."

Cohasset's Capt. Brian Salerno awarded the Legion of Merit

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

CAPT. SALERNO HONORED

Secretary of Homeland Security Thomas Ridge recently presented the Legion of Merit Award to Capt. Brian M. Salerno, United States Coast Guard, at the occasion of the Change of Command in Boston.

Secretary Ridge, in his presentation, highlighted Capt. Salerno's achievement in the development of a security plan for Boston Harbor after the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks and more recently, the plans for the Democratic National Convention. Ridge said the plan was so efficient that it would be utilized at the Republican National Convention in New York City.

This prestigious award is presented for an extremely difficult duty performed in an unprecedented and clearly exceptional manner.

Capt. Salerno served as the Commanding Officer of the Port of Boston for the past three years and has now been reassigned to Washington, D.C. as the Field Director of the U.S. Coast Guard. Capt. Salerno is the son of proud parents Nicholas and Gertrude Salerno of Ledge Way.

SEPT. 11 CEREMONY

The Town of Cohasset, police and fire departments invite everyone to a memorial service at 8:30 a.m., Saturday, Sept. 11 at the flagpole on the common. The service is in remembrance of the victims of the 9-11 terrorist attacks. Bells will toll for 18 minutes from 8:45 to 9:03 a.m. A moment of silence will follow. Local clergy will attend; there will be no public speeches.

STILL NIFTY AT FIFTY

Happy 50th birthday goes out to Bobby Protrulis from his family and friends. Bobby is celebrating this special day today, Sept. 9.

REGISTER FOR GIRL SCOUTS

Town-wide Girl Scout registration will take place on Tuesday, Sept. 14, from 5-8 p.m. at the Deer Hill cafeteria. Troops are now forming – new scouts are welcome. Troop leaders are also needed for several grades; share the fun of scouting and learning with girls in town. Please join us to learn more about scouting, including volunteer opportunities. If you cannot make registration night registration forms are available at the Town Hall outside the Recreation Department.

NEW OR USED TOYS

Cohasset Girl Scout Troop #4784 will be collecting new or "gently used" toys and books for Cradles to Crayons, a non-profit organization which collects donations for children living in poverty in the Greater Boston Area. The Girl Scouts will be collecting any donations you might want to make in the parking lot of Saint Anthony's Church from 8:30 a.m.-1 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 19. This is the last stage for members of Troop #4784 of service in achieving their Bronze Award, the highest award possible for Junior Girl Scouts. Please help to make this a success! If you have any questions, please call Jennie Curley, 383-0695 or Megan Richardson, 383-0998.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY NIGHT

On Saturday evening, Sept. 18, the South Shore Art Center will honor friends whose dedication over the years has created one of the premier arts facilities in the area. Art Center past presidents, directors, artists through the years, staff, students, volunteers and friends who have contributed to the past 50 years will join in the celebration. More than 150 art supporters are expected to participate and toast the SSAC as it enters its next 50 years!. The event will be held at Lionsgate at 306 South Main St. Cocktails will be served at 6:30 p.m. with dinner being served at 7:30 P.M. Dancing and dessert will be at 9 p.m. with the music of "Groove Authority." The cost is $125 per person and tickets can be had by calling 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

PLAYGROUND CELEBRATION

Bring the kids to the opening celebration for the Our World playground from 3-5 p.m. Sept. 16 at the playground, 100 Sohier St. Hopefully, the kids have been playing on the new facility behind the library and the Our World Museum for a few weeks already, but having some lemonade and balloons will make it all official!

The Salerno family with Secretary Thomas Ridge at the Aug. 12 Change of Command Ceremony. Capt. Salerno is to the immediate left of Sec. Ridge.

NEW ARRIVAL

Michael, Kristyn and sister Lauren Stevens of Scituate welcome Kathryn Blair Stevens, who was born on July 21, 2004 at the South Shore Hospital. Grandparents include Richard and Gail Stevens of Cohasset and Eileen and the late Edward Blair Lemieux of Hingham.

YARD SALE

The South Shore Community Center will hold its annual yard sale (rain or shine) on Sept. 11, from 9 a.m. to noon at the SSCC located at 3 Main St. Cohasset. The SSCC is seeking donations (no clothing), which are tax deductible, for the yard sale with all proceeds going to support the Center. Donors can drop off items at the SSCC on Step. 9 & 10 between 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day. For questions, contact the SSCC at 781-383-0088.

AT HAMILTON

Caroline Steele, daughter of Marjorie and Matthew Steele of Black Horse Lane, has begun her studies at Hamilton College. Caroline, a Milton Academy graduate, was selected from a pool of more than 4,400 applicants for the college. She joins a class of 476.

That is it for this week. Please send in all info no later than Mondays by 5 p.m.

Girl Scout Virginia Spofford is in line for Silver Award

Girl Scout Virginia Spofford, 15, is set to receive her Silver Award.

Is athlete who loves the arts

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Many students look to April vacation as a time to sleep in late, lounge around, and take advantage of the last full week of vacation until summer. But for 15-year-old Virginia Spofford, that one-week hiatus literally set the stage for her to receive a Girl Scout Silver Award, the second highest honor for a Girl Scout.

From 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. throughout four days during vacation, Virginia held a dance and theater workshop for younger scouts in the Hingham Scout House. Virginia, with help from fellow Girl Scout Aisling Guinee who has been working on her own Silver Award project, led the younger girls in theater and dance exercises, then allowed them to write their own scripts and choreograph dances in groups to go along with the story. At the end of the week, friends and family were invited to attend a one-of-a-kind performance, held on the Scout House stage.

Virginia, who has been a Girl Scout since she was in first grade and is one of seven in Troop 4778, said she has participated in various dance and theater productions in the past, including school plays and productions put on by the Children's Drama Workshop through the Cohasset Recreation Department. In addition, Virginia participated in a three-week performing arts camp hosted by the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham, and she thought hosting a similar camp on a smaller scale would be a perfect way to earn her award.

An avid softball player, Virginia is a varsity pitcher, which takes up much of her time. Along with field hockey and her love of skiing in the winter, "I'm too busy with school and sports," to be able to fully participate in dance or theater, she said. However, even though she spends much of her time participating in sports, she has never lost interest in the arts, which is why she wanted to be able to use her talents once more, and share what she has learned with others.

During the workshop Virginia and Aisling broke the 12 participants into groups, and guided the girls as they wrote their own scripts to act out. The girls ranged in age from third to sixth grade. One script told the story of a troupe of monkeys who used magic bananas to rescue another monkey that had been kidnapped, and another involved an enchanted house which put the girls under its spell. Virginia chose the music to be included in the dance scenes in the production.

To be able to use the Hingham Scout House during school vacation, Virginia had to coordinate her project with the Patriots Trail Council for approval as a valid project as well as find responsible adults willing to supervise.

There was much preparation necessary on Virginia's part in order to bring her workshop to fruition. To be able to use the Hingham Scout House during school vacation, Virginia had to coordinate her project with the Patriots Trail Council for approval as a valid project as well as find responsible adults willing to supervise. The Patriots Trail Council is among the 10 largest councils in the nation, and has members in 65 cities and towns in the Boston area. Because scouts of varying ages would be participating, Virginia researched the badge books at each level to make sure the girls who participated would receive credit toward earning badges at their individual levels.

Virginia received help from adults as well, including Paula Pozniak and Virginia's aunt Nancy Homa who were able to administer first aid if necessary. Homa, who traveled all the way from Maine to help with the workshop, is the sister of Virginia's father, Selectman Rob Spofford. In addition, Virginia's mother Susan was also on hand to provide general supervision. However, even with adults around, Susan said both Virginia and Aisling ran the workshop completely on their own.

Virginia said the best part about running the workshop was the variety of girls she was able to meet. With three younger sisters, who are all Girl Scouts as well, she knows many of the girls in their grades, but not as many in the "in-between" grades. Virginia's two 9-year-old sisters, Meredith and Robin, were on hand during the workshop, and her other sister Jennifer, 12 , is currently working earning her Bronze Award.

The Silver Award is given to a Girl Scout after an application for the project is submitted and approved to the Council, and 30 hours of preparation is complete. Before the project can be approved by the Council, the girl must also complete several other leadership and career exploration activities, three interest projects, and a cadet challenge.

Virginia will formally receive her Silver Award on Sept. 17 during a ceremony held in the Cohasset High School Auditorium. Three other girls are slated to receive their Silver Awards as well, including Kate Callahan, Colleen Richardson and Aisling Guinee. The next step for Virginia will be to decide on a project to earn her Gold Award, which is the highest honor a Girl Scout can receive. "I think it will be softball related," she said.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

The noblest of professions

Yesterday was the first day of school.

Our Cohasset teachers entered the classroom again to spin their magic.

What did they think about on the first day of school?

Did they realize the miracles they are about to perform this year, whether helping a Harvard-bound physics wizard unlock the mystery of a mind-boggling equation or nudging a struggling first-grader trying to keep up with his classmates like the last skater in the ice show line.

In either case, and all that is in between, teachers have chosen the noblest of professions.

A teacher is so much more than what a test can gauge.

A teacher is a counselor, a nurse, a healer of broken hearts.

A teacher is a police officer watching out for our children's safety.

A teacher is a locksmith unlocking a wonderful world of knowledge.

A teacher is a guide in the adventure of learning.

A teacher is a straight man, a comedian, an actor, a storyteller, a puppeteer.

A teacher is a carpenter with a bulletin board, a bookbinder with Scotch tape, a sanitation worker with the waste basket.

A teacher is a banker keeping track of lunch money, ice cream money and milk money.

A teacher is a salesman. The product is knowledge.

A teacher is a hair stylist when a pony tail falls down, a dentist when a tooth falls out, a fix-it man when the pencil sharpener falls apart.

A teacher is a waitress at snack time, a referee at recess time, a doorkeeper at dismissal time.

A teacher is a press agent, a proofreader, a peace-maker, a playmate.

A teacher is a detective searching for clues, a lawyer settling disputes, a judge making decisions.

A teacher is a coach, a caretaker, a cheerleader.

A teacher is a psychiatrist fostering self esteem, an optometrist helping children see clearly, a neurologist soothing frayed nervous systems.

A teacher is a wizard squeezing small shoes into smaller boots.

A teacher is an X-ray technician reading minds, a publisher at the Xerox machine, a partner with parents in the adventure of education.

A teacher is a miracle worker taking straight and curved lines and making them into letters, taking letters and making them into words, and taking works and making them into ideas.

A teacher must guide a guide through cyberspace making sure that students are not trapped by the computer mouse or lost in the Internet's web.

A teacher is the first one to take the tiny hand of the frightened kindergartner and the last one to shake the proud hand of the high school graduate.

God-bless our teachers in this new school year.

POLITICAL NOTES

Democratic brunch Sept. 26

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is co-sponsoring a Democratic brunch and political rally with guest speaker Congressman Edward Markey, Co-Chair of the Mass. Kerry for President Committee. The brunch will take place at 11 a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 26, at the Bridgewaye Inn in Humarock.

Tickets are $12.50 per person. With the State Primary next week (Sept. 14), and the general election just weeks away (Nov. 2) there's plenty to do for any Cohasset resident interested in getting involved to help Democrats this fall.

For information about the brunch or any Democratic activities for Cohasset, contact Agnes McCann, Chair of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee at 781-383-0222, or Pat Laugelle, Cohasset's Representative with the South Shore Democratic Caucus, at 781-383-1737.

Refreshing the garden

TO THE EDITOR:

The Perennial Friendship Garden at the South Shore Community center is a focal point in downtown Cohasset. People in the community have regularly commented on its beauty. Many of our seniors stop and enjoy the loveliness of the garden.

Our request is simple: we are in need of refreshing the garden. We will be cutting back, replanting and moving certain plants. The community has always helped the Center, and we are hoping you will consider helping us again.

We are looking for new plants to add to the garden: astilbe, lupine, lady's mantle, hollyhock, delphinium, phlox (white and pink), sedum, rudbecchia (black-eyed Susan), sage, shasta daisy, foxglove, and bleeding heart would all make lovely additions to the perennials we already have. Any donations would be gratefully accepted and placed in the garden.

Any donations can be dropped off at the Community Center, 3 N. Main St. in the village, or we can arrange for a pickup by calling 781-383-0088. We would love to get the garden ready for next spring by doing this work now and in the early fall.

HEALTH NOTES

Eastern Equine Encephalitis alert

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) has confirmed Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) in a Holbrook resident, who died last week. EEE infection was established in the Holbrook teen through tests performed at the State Laboratory Institute on Sept. 1. He was initially admitted to the hospital Aug. 23. This is the second fatality this year from EEE. The first case, reported Aug. 12, was a male Brockton resident in his 60s who later died from the infection.

EEE is a rare human disease, with fewer than 50 cases having been reported in Massachusetts since 1940. Similar to West Nile virus (WNV), the virus that causes EEE is transmitted to humans by bites from infected mosquitoes. Symptoms of EEE infection in humans include a sudden onset of high fever, stiff neck, headache, mental confusion and lack of energy. These symptoms appear two to 10 days after infection. Inflammation and swelling of the brain, called encephalitis, is the most dangerous complication. Encephalitis can worsen quickly and patients may go into a coma within a week. The risk of transmission of EEE virus is greatest in August and September and continues until mosquito activity ends after the first hard frost.

MDPH encourages anyone who develops symptoms of EEE infection, such as sudden onset of high fever, stiff neck, headache, mental confusion and lack of energy, to seek medical attention as soon as possible.

Symptoms of EEE infection in humans include a sudden onset of high fever, stiff neck, headache, mental confusion and lack of energy.

MDPH also reported last Thursday, a horse from Dedham (Norfolk County) tested positive for the virus that causes EEE. The horse, which was not previously vaccinated for the disease, was euthanized on Aug. 27 and tested positive for EEE Sept. 1. In 2003, five horses tested positive for the virus that causes EEE.

MDPH has identified 18 mosquito specimens as positive for the EEE virus to date in 2004. The specimens were collected between July 28 to Aug. 25 from Bristol and Plymouth Counties from the towns of Easton, Norton, Raynham, Middleboro, Halifax, New Bedford and Kingston.

MPDH has strongly recommended that all individuals, particularly those living in counties where EEE virus has been identified, (Cohasset is in one) follow the steps below to prevent mosquito bites and reduce mosquito populations around their homes and communities.

- Remove any standing water near your home to reduce mosquito-breeding habitats. Standing water can be found in a variety of places surrounding homes. Check rain gutters and drains. Empty unused flowerpots and wading pools. Change water in birdbaths frequently.
- Wear clothing that provides more coverage of your skin (such as long sleeved shirts and pants) if you remain outdoors while mosquitoes are biting.
- Use mosquito repellents containing DEET and follow the directions on the label. Never use DEET on infants and do not apply repellents to the face or hands of children. Avoid using repellents with DEET concentrations above 10-15 percent for children and with concentrations above 30-35 percent for adults. Use mosquito netting to cover carriages and playpens.
- Check window and door screens to assure they are in good repair.

Mosquito control in Massachusetts is conducted through Mosquito Control Districts, with 159 member communities. The State Reclamation and Mosquito Control Board oversees all districts. Information about Cohasset can be obtained at: http://www.mass.gov/agr/mosquito/districts.htm. or by calling 617 983-6800.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

If you are interested in additional information about residency at Sunrise ask for Mary Jane Trettis, Director of Community Relations or Denise Baxter, Executive Director. Both will meet with you, offer tours or have you for lunch.

Local Republicans back Bush at Hingham convention event

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"Four more years" is a resounding theme of President George W. Bush's reelection campaign. That slogan was one of several displayed at a recent high-spirited Republican gathering in Hingham on the night of Bush's acceptance speech.

An enthusiastic crowd of South Shore Republicans — and "even a few [curious] Democrats," noted Hingham Republican Town Committee (HRTC) member and State Committeeman John Cafferty — gathered at South Shore Country Club to watch live coverage of President George Bush's talk on a big-screen TV.

The party was open to everyone in Senate district GOP 8, which includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, Weymouth, Marshfield, Duxbury, and Norwell.

The party was open to everyone in Senate district GOP 8, which includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, Weymouth, Marshfield, Duxbury, and Norwell. "Kathy Joyce came up with the idea, and the Town Committee put it together," said Connie Coleman, who helped Joyce and Christine Cadegan, all Hingham residents, organize the event. "We did a media blitz and invited everybody. We got 30 or 40 telephone calls."

Cadegan enjoyed showing off her two cute red, white, and blue Beanie Baby elephants.

The enthusiasm of local Republicans watching RNC events unfold from the club's 19th Hole Restaurant and Lounge — decorated with red, white, and blue balloons — matched that of the flag-waving crowd gathered on the Republican National Convention (RNC) floor in New York City.

Coleman's niece, Lysha, 13, also enjoyed Thursday's Hingham get-together. "I wanted to be a part of everything," she said. The two attended the Democratic National Convention in Boston in July and met up with Coleman's cousin, Sen. Peter Courtney, who was there with the Oregon delegation.

Plymouth County District Attorney Timothy Cruz placed a call to Hingham from the convention, offering some details and reporting that he was having a "great time."

A few baseball fans stole a glance or two in the direction of the Boston Red Sox/AnaheimAngels game that was playing out on a much smaller screen. But almost everyone's attention was drawn to the RNC happenings.

Signs bearing slogans like "This is a Red Sox-Bush nation," "Patriots and Bush reign again," "Let freedom reign," and "Massachusetts needs George Bush" added spice to the event.

All eight towns had signs supporting Bush. Joyce, Cadegan, and Coleman made them last Wednesday night while watching Gov. Mitt Romney and Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey speak at the convention — with the help of Joyce's young daughter, Shannon. "She colored in the letters on the '4 more years' sign after going to the Red Sox game with her dad," said Joyce with a laugh.

HRTC member James Claypoole was decked out in a 10-gallon hat and signature cowboy boots with sharply pointed toes. "Do your toes stop before that point?" one gentleman asked playfully.

"No, I had them trimmed to fit," rejoined Claypoole.

HRTC Chair Ann Collins, who is filling in for Hingham resident Donald Hussey while he makes a run for the Governor's Council, told him he looked "very dashing," which brought a big grin to his face.

"I'm thrilled to see so many people here," Collins said. "This is what it's all about. We have to back the person we think will do what we want done, the one we think will get us back on track."

Claypoole said events such as the one at the Country Club "inspire enthusiasm and motivate people who support the President to go out and work for his reelection at the grass-roots level. It's so easy to just leave it to the other guy," he said.

Hussey is running for the governor's council because the eight-member board is currently comprised entirely of Democrats. "Some diversity would be nice. It would be healthy for the process," he said. "I believe the citizens of Massachusetts are ready to elect a few Republicans. I think the Democratic party has gone a little too far to the left."

He continued, "The divisions in the parties have become so extreme. Whatever happened to the term, 'United we stand'? We need to look beyond partisan politics and stand behind one another and show the world – both our enemies and friends – that we have clear objectives and a united resolve, especially with regard to terrorism. It's important to feel safe in our homes, neighborhoods, and communities. It's the first priority."

Mike Jones, who is unopposed in the Republican primary and will run against Congressman William Delahunt in November, noted that 54 percent of the voters in the 10th District are registered as unenrolled.

"That's important because 73 percent of the district is either unenrolled or registered Republican," he said. "We're reaching out with a mainstream moderate message – lower taxes for families, strong national defense, and getting our fair share of federal dollars in Massachusetts, which is 46th in the nation for highway and national security spending. We need to widen Route 3 and make sure our communities get the homeland security they need to keep us safe."

Jones, who has knocked on many South Shore doors already, came from Plymouth to attend the Hingham event. "I wanted to be with fellow Republicans after a long day on the campaign trail and to thank them for their hard work," he said.

Hussey reported that his son, Gregory, is currently stationed in South Korea at Camp Casey with the 2nd Infantry. "I get an e-mail from him every once in awhile," he said. Gregory will return Oct. 12 for R&R (rest and relaxation). "We'll have a big rally on behalf of the Bush reelection effort when he comes home," Hussey said. "George Bush in my view is the right man at the right time in American history simply because he believes in the security of the United States, uniting its people, defending our country, and supporting our troops."

When Bush began his speech at 10 p.m., the crowd grew quiet as he spoke about how tragedy "arrived on a quiet morning," referring to the events of Sept. 11. He also spoke about "current acts of valor that would make the men of Normandy proud," praising American troops for "making America safer. Because of you the world is more just and will be more peaceful," he said.

Calling the United States the "greatest force for good in the world," Bush said, "We will build a safe world and a more hopeful America." He added, "Nothing will hold us back," which was a recurring theme in his speech. "The greatest duty of the President is to protect the American people, or we will drift into tragedy. This will not happen on my watch. . . . We're striking terrorists abroad so we do not have to face them at home. . . . . We will extend the frontiers of freedom. . . ."

On the homefront, Bush said he will head a bipartisan effort to reform and simplify the federal tax code and help workers find higher and better-paying jobs. He also promised to increase funding for community college. "The government must take the side of working families," he said.

As the event wound down, Cafferty thanked fellow Republicans — who came from a number of South Shore communities — for their participation. "I think we're on a roll," he said. "If we work hard, we'll do it [re-elect Bush]."

The 2004 RNC was held for the first time in New York City at Madison Square Garden from Aug. 30 to Sept. 2. Some say this year's delegation was the most diverse in the party's history.

Time for another crushing defeat?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Well, here we go again!

Here it is, the second week in September and the Boston Red Sox, our Olde Towne Team, has pulled to within two and a half games of the despised New York Yankees and are in a position to deliver the crushing blow, not to the Yanks but to their own Boston fans.

Today's headlines read: "Pennant Fever Grips Hub!" Tomorrow's are already in type: "Wait 'Til Next Year!"

Just think of it. Our Sox haven't won a World Series since 1918. That's 86 years, according to the first mathematical formula that is taught to Boston youngsters when they reach the kindergarten age of four. Some can even figure it out by counting on their figures at the age of two.

Just think of it. Woodrow Wilson was president. A man named Calvin Coolidge was lieutenant governor of the Commonwealth.

Just think of it. Baseball was the only professional game in town the last time the Sox won the series. The Celtics, the Bruins and the Patriots weren't even an idea then. In fact, the NFL and the NBA didn't exist and the NHL had just played its first season with three Canadian teams.

Just think of it. Woodrow Wilson was president. A man named Calvin Coolidge was lieutenant governor of the Commonwealth. Women were not allowed to vote. John F. Fitzgerald, the great grandfather of Arnold Schwarzenegger's wife, was elected, then un-elected to Congress.

It's gotten so bad that divers are scouring the mud at the bottom of a pond in Sudbury to find a piano that was tossed in some 80 years ago by George Herman "Babe" Ruth, who someone once fantasized was the man who was responsible for it all in the first place.

"The Curse of the Bambino" was invented so that Sox fans wouldn't have to think that their team just wasn't good enough to win it all these years. And what the discovery of a piano that may or may not be in a pond in Sudbury has to do with breaking "the curse" is beyond me.

The Sox have been there before and, in the final test, just didn't have it.

Like 1946, in the eighth inning of the seventh game against the St. Louis Cardinals when shortstop Johnny Pesky held the ball for the fraction of a second that allowed Enos Slaughter to score from first base with the winning run, on what essentially a single.

Or, 1986, when first baseman Bill Buckner permitted Mookey Wilson's soft grounder to skip between his legs to give the New York Mets a 6-5 victory after the Red Sox had twice been within one strike of their first World Series since 1918.

Or, 1978, when Bucky Dent, a Yankee who couldn't hit his way out of the paper bag, as we used to say, hit a three run homer over the left field wall in a playoff for all the marbles after the two teams tied for the American League pennant in the regular season.

Or, could it be like 1918, when Carl Mays beat the Chicago Cubs, 2-1, for the Red Sox and Babe Ruth played left field.

Now if they can only find that piano!

Buzz is presidential on Romney spotlight at RNC

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

With Gov. Romney's sojourn to the Republican National Convention in New York last week, one could detect the arrival of a new normal in Massachusetts politics: the state of perennial presidential possibility.

After one cycle in abeyance, the state's status as engine for new presidential material couldn't have been on more open display. Even as he attacked the brightest current Massachusetts star, John Kerry, Gov. Mitt Romney attracted and sought to exploit the magic spotlight of attention and speculation that lifts faces from the crowd and makes them leaders of the pack. The general election not even underway, the ambitions of the current Massachusetts superstar began to segue into those of the next contender.

After Romney's week at the Republican National Convention, it would be a major Massachusetts political story if he changed course and forewent a bid for a place on the national ticket in the next election or two. The governor's press office has begun volunteering the news of expressions of interest in Romney from the national media.

Not only did Romney draw a triple-A politician's dream spot in the batting order – a 9:45 p.m. speech last Wednesday, just before the keynote speaker and vice president — he accepted his first Iowa invitation. Romney will deliver the address next month at the Iowa Republican Party's Ronald Reagan dinner.

With these forays, Romney signals himself as the latest contender from Massachusetts to focus the attention of the political community around his ambitions. The attention is non-partisan; that is, whether the aspirant is a Dukakis or a Tsongas or a Weld or a Kerry, the pursuit of something higher gives a candidate's enemies as much to talk about as his friends.

The governor's press office has begun volunteering the news of expressions of interest in Romney from the national media.

So it is with Romney. He actually is attempting to transmorgify John Kerry's success: exploiting the opportunity to criticize the senator as a way to nurture the possibility that he, Romney, will someday be where Kerry is today. That's just what Romney did in his Wednesday night address.

This kind of activity doesn't limit itself to the national level. While Romney lambasted Kerry at the presidential level, aspirants for the Corner Office jostled to dole out the same kind of opportunistic fault-finding in Boston. Both US Rep. Michael Capuano and Attorney General Thomas Reilly held events to say the governor is spending too much time away from the state and focusing too much energy on pursuits that don't better the lives of his constituents. The state party held similar events to call Romney "hypocritical" because he has spent so much time out of state lately, some of it to upbraid Kerry for neglecting roll calls and other senatorial duties

From a middle ground, the view is familiar: since both sides were engaging in behavior they decried in the other, both sides were in the wrong, and the right. It was a very political week.

The jockeying and rhetoric and arrests and intrigue in New York contrasted with a State House that was dog-day quiet for the most part.

• Revenues still running ahead of benchmarks — The state's strong fiscal performance didn't end with the fiscal year. The Department of Revenue announced that revenues in August came in $16 million above the benchmark level set by the state — $103 million above Aug. of 2003. Revenues for the fiscal year so far are $88 million above the projections on which the budget is based. Officials said they don't yet know what the effect on revenues will be of the Sales Tax Holiday held Aug. 14. Receipts for that day will be reported with September collections.

• Treasurer, Bank of America chief confer on merger — State Treasurer Timothy Cahill emerged from a meeting with Bank of America president Kenneth Lewis saying that he believes Lewis will keep the bank's commitments to act in good faith and be good corporate citizens. After BoA unexpectedly dismissed many dozens of employees who didn't know they were going to be laid off, Cahill threatened to end the state's $120 million involvement with BoA. But Cahill said last week he's reassured.

• Residents in seven communities get warning about water — Residents of Tewksbury Westford, Boxboro, Millbury and Hadley, and some schools in Williamstown and Westport, have been warned to be wary of their drinking water after the state found unsafe levels of perchlorate. The chemicals is used in paints and as a propellant.

• Second fatal EEE case takes life of Holbrook resident — Symptoms of the disease include sudden onset of high fever, stiff neck, headache, mental confusion and lack of energy. The key to EEE control, said the Dept. of Public Health, is avoidance of mosquitoes. The threat is highest in Southeastern Mass.

• Galvin signs new voter law — Secretary of State William Galvin signed a new law that will take effect in time for the Sept. 14 primaries here and require any voter who registered by mail to show a valid identification before casting his or her ballot. Those unable to produce a proper ID will be allowed to cast a provisional ballot that can be cast later when their eligibility to vote is proven.

LIBRARY CORNER

Night at the movies

On Thursday evening, Sept. 23, at 7 p.m. the library's first independent film evening will take place showing the film, "Long Life, Happiness and Prosperity." This film focuses on the story of Kin, a young divorced mother raising her 12-year-old daughter, Mindy. When Mindy sets her sights on finding her mother a new boyfriend by using ancient Chinese magic, the results are unexpected, hysterically funny and heart warming. Not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission. Free admission and refreshments.

The Modern Scholar

Take a college course in your car. Listen to a series of informational lectures on CD, taught by professors. Ideal for the commuter, each course consists of 14 half-hour lectures. What subjects interest you? The library has a collection of courses from political science to music.

New series for kids

Come check out the new non-fiction series at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. There are many new books to support homework and projects along with new non-fiction for young children to help them with first experiences. Some of the new series for young children you may find useful are: Heinemann's "Read and Learn," Raintree's "My First Visit." These series feature photographs and basic text to help parents and children preview new situations. For school-age students there are two new series focusing on the human body and how it works.

The library has 179 new volumes of "Nature's Children." Each book highlights a different animal. The table of contents is set up to help students find the information necessary to complete their school projects. To meet the needs of all students, the library has recently purchased the series "From Sea to Shining Sea." This series will add to the choices of materials needed to complete "State Reports."

Wireless access

The library now offers wireless internet access for patrons with laptop computers.

Artist exhibit

Landscape paintings of Lisa Marder will be on display at the library from Sept. 10 until the end of October. There will be an opening reception for the exhibit on Sunday, Sept. 19, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Yard sale for community center

The South Shore Community Center will hold its annual yard sale (rain or shine) on Sept. 11, from 9 a.m. to noon at the SSCC located at 3 Main St. Cohasset. The SSCC is seeking donations (no clothing), which are tax deductible, for the yard sale with all proceeds going to support the Center. Donors can drop off items at the SSCC Sept. 9 &10, between 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day. For questions, contact the SSCC at 781-383-0088.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

If you have any questions about this week's report, e-mail us at beaconhill@aol.com or call us at (617)720-1562.THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives and senators' votes on three roll calls from recent sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$1.6 MILLION FOR TRIAL COURT SECURITY (H 4850)

House 137-19, Senate 36-2, overrode Gov. Romney's $1.6 million veto reduction (from $49.9 million to $48.3 million) in funding for the security program for the state's trial courts. Override supporters said this funding is important in order to hire court officers to enhance security, keep the trial courts safe and protect the staff and the public. In his veto message, the governor said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary to fund the program. (A "Yea" vote is for the $1.6 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $1.6 million)

$6.87 MILLION FOR EDUCATION RESERVE (H 4850)

House 156-0, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $6.87 million in funding for a reserve account for education aid for cities and towns. This so-called "pothole account" provides funds to communities that meet certain criteria including cities and towns with extraordinary enrollment growth, extraordinary increases in their minimum required local contribution to education, median income below the state average and decreases in federal aid. Override supporters said the $6.87 million funds grants for communities that are experiencing financial hardships. They argued that these grants are an important safety net for cities and towns across the state and play an important part in helping these communities that are struggling with their education budgets. In his veto message, Romney said he vetoed the funding because it is not consistent with his original fiscal 2005 budget recommendation. (A "Yea" vote is for the $6.87 million).

$5 MILLION FOR PRESCRIPTION ADVANTAGE PROGRAM (H 4850)

House 154-0, Senate 37-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $5 million in funding to help some low-income senior citizens and disabled persons pay their co-payments under the state's Prescription Advantage Program. The funds would be targeted to help eligible participants with earnings at or below 188 percent of the federal poverty level. The Prescription Advantage Program is an insurance plan available to seniors over age 65 and low-income individuals with disabilities who work less than 40 hours per week. Members are required to pay premiums, deductibles and co-payments on a sliding scale based on their gross annual household income. The plan also includes an annual out-of-pocket spending limit. Override supporters said that reducing the co-payments of these very low-income people would ensure that they are able to continue to take advantage of the program and obtain help in purchasing their prescription drugs. They noted that without the $5 million assistance, many seniors and disabled persons would be left out of the program because they cannot afford the co-payments. In his veto message, Romney said he vetoed the funding because it is not consistent with his original fiscal 2005 budget recommendation. (A "Yea" vote is for the $5 million).

Anothony McDonnell of Quincy. There are no other candidates running for the position.

Running unopposed are Republican Robert Hedlund of Weymouth for Plymouth and Norfolk District Senator in General Court, Democrat Garrett Bradley of Hingham for Norfolk County General Court representative in the third district, and Michael Bellotti of Quincy for Norfolk County Sheriff.

The four parties on this year's ballot are Democratic, Republican, Libertarian, and Green-Rainbow Party. Unenrolled voters can choose to vote for any of the four parties and will remain an unenrolled voter. There are no candidates on the Green-Rainbow Party or Libertarian Party ballots.

There are 5,152 Cohasset residents who are registered to vote. Of those voters, 1,193 are Democrats, 1,240 are Republicans, and 2,700 are unenrolled. The remaining 19 voters are registered in other smaller parties such as Green-Rainbow and Libertarian.

Douglas said she has only received roughly 21 absentee ballots so far, which could be a good indicator of what is to come in terms of voter turnout. She said she has not seen any trends, such as college students requesting ballots before they head back to school.

Anyone who registered to vote by mail for the first time in Massachusetts after Jan. 1, 2003 or has never voted in a Massachusetts state, primary, or presidential election may be required to present identification at the polls. Those voters are asked to bring identification in order to help prevent delays. Acceptable identification includes a Massachusetts driver's license, Massachusetts photo ID, or a current utility bill, bank statement, government check, paycheck, or other government document showing the voter's name and address.

For more information, voters can stop by the Town Clerk's office, which is open during regular Town Hall Hours, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Tuesday from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday from 8:30 to 1 p.m., or call Town Clerk Marion Douglas at (781) 383-4100.

Absentee ballots are available

Absentee ballots for the State Primary on Tuesday, Sept. 14, are now available at the Town Clerk's office.

Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Sept. 13, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican, Libertarian, or Green Rainbow and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is enrolled in a political designation they may not vote in any state or presidential primary.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Sept. 14, to be counted.

Steve Harold

Election Day is Tuesday, September 14th

NORFOLK COUNTY COMMISSIONER

STEVE HAROLD

Dear Neighbor,

The Harold family has a long, proud history of involvement in public service and veterans affairs. My cousin Paul Harold served as State Senator, Quincy City Councillor and Norfolk County Register of Deeds. The Harold family has always believed that direct participation in the affairs of our community is an obligation, and an honor.

As the owner and operator of a small business for more than twenty years, I understand what it takes to manage a budget, take care of my employees, and build a profitable business. I ask you for the opportunity to put my private sector business management experience to work on behalf of the citizens of Norfolk County as a member of the Board of County Commissioners.

I respectfully ask for your one of your two votes on Tuesday, September 14th, so that I may carry on the Harold family tradition of community service.

Thank you, Steve Harold

Holly Hill Farm offers fall family farm series

Adults looking to expand their knowledge of organic gardening or parents seeking activities for their children will be glad to hear Holly Hill farm has just finalized its summer and fall schedule for its organic gardening workshop and family farm series.

• Saturday Sept. 18 from 10 a.m. until noon, the farm will host its "Bees Buzz," class which teaches students about the 20 hives at the farm which produce honey for sale. Students will learn about pollination and the importance of bees in nature from expert apiarist Luke Lambert. Friends of Holly Hill Farm pay $6 for the class, non members pay $10.

• Thursday Sept. 30 from 7:30-8:30 p.m. and Saturday Oct. 2 from 8-10 a.m. local naturalist Sally Avery will host a two part birding workshop. It will begin with the Thursday night indoor evening presentation, followed by the Saturday morning guided tour through Holly Hill Farm's walking trails. Friends of Holly Hill Farm members pay $16, non members pay $20.

• Saturday, Oct. 30 at 1 p.m. Farmer Frank White will lead a guided walk through Holly Hill Farm's trails. Suggested donation, $5.

• Sat. Oct. 23 from 10 a.m. until noon there will be a family farm tour. Farmer Jean White will lead a guided tour around the farm, with visits to the greenhouse and growing fields. Attendees will also get to meet the farm animals. Friends of Holly Hill Farm members pay $12 per family, non members pay $15 per family.

• Saturday Oct. 16 from 10 a.m. until noon there will be a family composting workshop. Attendees will learn how to develop a compost pile at home. Children and adults welcome. Holly Hill Farm members pay $12 per family, non members pay $15 per family.

The farm will also host after school programs. The two session series includes four afternoons at the farm, during which participants will learn about organic farming. Highlights include: sowing seeds and planting crops, making compost and preparing fields for Spring, harvesting and tasting the fruits of Summer before frost, and a trip to Weir River Farm. (Cost: $60 per child)

• Session 1 (ages 5-7), Wednesdays beginning Sept. 22, 3:30-5:30 p.m.

• Session 2 (ages 8-10), Thursdays beginning Sept. 23, 3:30-5:30 p.m.

For additional information and registration for all events, contact Jon Belber by phone at 781-383-1455 or by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com., or visit the farm's Web site at www. Hollyhillfarm.org.

'Hills of Hull' house tour

Wellspring's House Tour, "Hills of Hull," will take place Saturday Oct. 2, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to benefit Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull. Tickets are $15 prior to the event and $20 the day of event. They are available at: Wellspring, Flow Zone Café, Bookport, Hingham, and Fleming's, Cohasset

Wellspring is offering an opportunity to view nine of the most beautiful homes in Hull. The "Hills of Hull" allows participants to enter and enjoy private homes in the area where they will see Hull from a different angle. All homes included on the tour were specifically recruited for their charm, beauty and views.

Ticket price includes entrance at all tour homes as well as a 10-percent discount at the following restaurants: Bridgeman's, Jake's, The Red Parrot, Mermaids Boutique and Flow Zone Café and Raffael's. For tickets and information: phone: 781-925-3211; e-mail: vinny@wellspringhull.org; Web-site: www.wellspringhull.org.

CHS gridders eye back-to-back title runs

CHS football opener
Skippers at Nantucket
Saturday, 1:30 p.m. kickoff

When Cohasset High football coach Tony Rolfe declares the South Shore League to be "as wide open" as he can ever recall, it's fun to wonder how much of that analysis might be based on détente.

After all, Rolfe's Skippers, champions of the South Shore League in both 2003 and 2001, return eight of 11 starters to a defensive unit that was the stingiest last season among all Div. 5 teams in Eastern Mass.

"But look at those players we lost," counters the seventh year head coach, pointing specifically to league all-stars Chris Boilodeau at cornerback and team leading tackler Tony Truglia at inside linebacker.

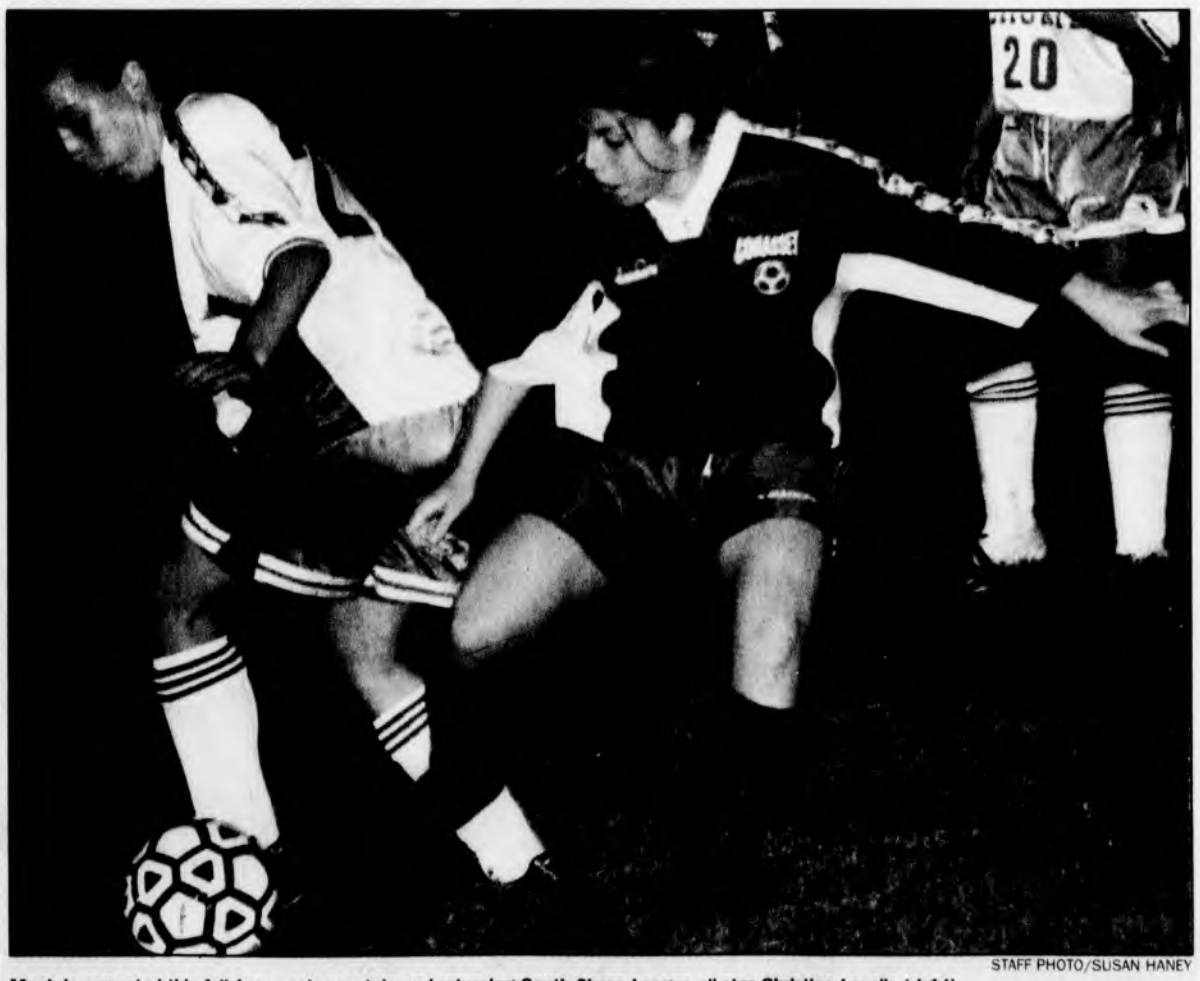
Lady booters set sights on third straight playoff run in '04

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

With another step forward last year, Cohasset girls soccer is becoming a force to be reckoned with in the South Shore League.

The Skippers finished 10-8-1 in 2003, then lost to Sacred Heart in the first round of the Div. 3 state tournament despite clearly outplaying their opponent.

The next step? Getting over that first-round hump and advancing in the playoffs. On paper, the Lady Skippers would certainly appear to have the talent necessary for pulling this off.



That is not to say, however, that there won't be some holes to fill left by last year's seniors. The caps and gowns have claimed, among others, two of last year's three SSL all-stars, Jenn Buckley and Holly Graham.

Buckley was perhaps Cohasset's best all-around player, providing goal scoring, playmaking and solid defense from her center-midfield position. Graham played very well all season long from the all-important sweeper position.

The team has also lost seniors Gillian Weber, Sarah and Leah McMorris and Alicia Sanchez. Weber and the McMorris twins were among Cohasset's best offensive threats up front, while Sanchez stepped in for an injured Brenna O'Donnell and did a great job on defense.

Fortunately, there is plenty of talent returning this fall, led by defender Christine Lovallo and

CHS golfers open with impressive win over Abington

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High golf team started the season on the right foot, Thursday, taking a decisive 34.5-19.5 decision over South Shore League rival Abington on the road.

Junior Mark Bouchard was the only top player for the Skippers who had never played Abington's Par 34 Strawberry Valley course, so coach Torin Sweeney placed him in the sixth spot in his lineup. The junior responded by shooting a day's best round of 36, two over par, to take his head-to-head match up by a 7-2 score.

"It was wild how that worked out," laughed Sweeney. "The only guy who never played that course gets the best score of the day. Mark really shot a great round."

Not far off this pace was senior Ricky Lordan out of the fifth spot. He shot a three over 37 to also earn seven of nine points.

"Ricky shot a real nice practice round over there last year, so I had a feeling he might come up big," said Sweeney. "It was real encouraging getting that kind of play out of the bottom spots in the order."

Cohasset's returning number one player, sophomore Kevin Barber, matched Lordan's 37 to pull out a 5.5-3.5 decision over his counterpart.

Senior Chris Simms, playing out of the fourth spot, shot a solid round of 40 to win his match up, 6-3.

Senior Colin Magruder took a 5-4 decision out of the third spot with a round of 42.

Only senior captain Tim Pilczak, playing against a tough number two, lost his head-to-head tussle, his score of 41 producing a 4-5 final.

The Skippers were slated to host Norwell today, but that match was postponed due to the Cohasset Country Club not being available. They will get back into action next Wednesday, Sept. 15, when they hit the road to take on defending South Shore League champ Harwich.

The matches will come fast and furious after this, with three per week in most cases, with the Skippers needing to wrap up their 14 match slate before mid-October.

CHS field hockey team opens season with numerous new faces

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

It's that time of year again… to store the bathing suits and sunscreen and to pull out the field hockey sticks and backpacks. Like the Olympic torch, Coach Deb Bostwick has ignited the varsity field hockey team for another season.

She has a lot to heat up on her coaching plate. Twelve seniors moved on and nineteen players moved in. Coach Bostwick recognizes serious reconstruction needs to take place.

She has wasted no time in setting the wheels in motion. The Deer Hill School playfield provides the setting for two hour practices five days a week. When asked by the Mariner about her early observations, Bostwick candidly comments, "This is a fun team. The girls do not yet have the best skills but they are smart and coachable."

Captains Christina St. Pierre and Allison Dean lead the drills, which consist of conditioning, driving, cutting, grid work and field positioning. Junior Katie James believes "communication on the field and good passing" remain essential to a good season.

James adds: "We are trying to work together…all nineteen of us. Building self-confidence will prove crucial."

Brooke Allen also has expressed enthusiasm for the practices.

"Coach Bostwick has taught us how to position ourselves on the field and set up on the corners."

Brooke Allen speaks from experience, having played field hockey since the seventh grade. When asked what motivates her to play year after year, Allen

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Soccer Club registration underway

Registration for the upcoming soccer season is now underway with registration forms available at the Town Hall. All players must be registered prior to participating in practices or games.

As in prior years, the Fall season will include practice and play for players age 4 through 11 (6th grade). However, as a result of the elimination of Middle School team sports, the Club will also sponsor practice and competitive team play for 7th and 8th grade players as well this year.

In-town programs for players age 4 (PreK) to 9 (4th grade) will begin on September 18th and continue through November 13th excluding Columbus Day weekend. Travel program training for the U12 (5th and 6th grade) and U14 (7th and 8th grade) age groups will begin on September 11th with practice and games in the Cranberry League continuing through early November.

A coaching clinic for all new or interested coaches has been schedule for Saturday, September 11th, with a coaches meeting to start the season scheduled for Wednesday, September 15th.

Soccer Club Coaching Clinic Saturday at 10:00

The Cohasset Soccer Club will be sponsoring a coaching clinic for all new and returning coaches on Saturday, September 11th at 10:00. The clinic will run from 10:00 to 12:30 and will be led by Martin Clark, Coerver Soccer's Director of Coaching.

The clinic will be focused on working with new coaches and the mastery of basic soccer skills, but all returning coaches are also welcome to attend. The course will be a hands-on session so come prepared to do the drills and participate in the sessions.

Learn to Skate and Beginner Instructional Hockey Registration

Another step in the right direction

striker Casey Anderson.

Lovallo was Cohasset's third all-star last season and also the team M.V.P., dominating many games from her fullback position. The senior will move back to replace Graham at sweeper this year.

Anderson, meanwhile, led the team in goals from her outside forward spot, with several of those coming in clutch situations, including a game-winning corner that went directly into the net against Abington. That victory spurred the Skippers strong second-half run that was responsible for getting them into the postseason for a second straight season.

Others returning seniors who saw significant playing time in 2003 were keeper CeCelia Chapman, defenders Danielle Hajjar and Mary Silvia— slated to play stopper and fullback in '04, respectively— midfielders Nicole Whitney, Molly Kirk, MacKenzie Holway and Rachel Garber, and forwards Lindsay Kennedy and Lauren Rizzotti.

Lovallo, Anderson, Whitney and Garber will share the captaincy.

"I think I have great senior leadership on and off the field and that is not only from the captains," said seventh year Skippers head coach Deb Beal. "I have a remarkable group of seniors this fall and selecting captains was not easy."

In fact, the veteran head coach sounds pretty pleased over just about everything she's seeing on the field.

"I think, for the first time since I have been coaching at Cohasset, I have an abundance of midfielders, which is great," said Beal. "They are in shape and they are ready to run. I have been very impressed with the attitudes and the desire to play so far."

The Lady Skippers have had three scrimmages to date—versus Pembroke, Rockland and Hull— and the veteran coach has been relatively pleased with what's come out of all three.

"We made many mistakes, as did the other teams," reported Beal, "but on the flip side we did many good things many times. I don't see any big holes that I need to worry about. I think we have every position covered by a capable person at all times."

Beal said she also looking forward to the infusion of talent that will come from last year's JV squad. One of those girls will be Lindsay Durkin, a sophomore who saw some postseason playing time at forward. She showed good speed and awareness on the field, and should provide a solid scoring threat for Cohasset in 2004.

Other girls Beal is expecting to step up to varsity are junior Emilie Shea and sophomores Emily Coggins, Lara Novak, and Carin Garber.

Players who will start with the JV team but may potentially see time with the varsity squad include sophomore keeper Melissa Crowley-Buck, juniors Cassie Rosano, Jen Dinger, Jess Bilbo and Jessica Himan, and sophomores Katie Bolger, Charlotte Sida, Christina Pinkus, and Colleen Richardson.

The JV squad will be rounded out by sophomores Shalea Daly, Alyssa Hinman, Jamie Genovese and Siobhan Fludder, along with freshmen Abby Foley. Meg Anderson and Anna Haggerty.

The girls opened the season Tuesday at home with a 4-1 non-league win over Cape Cod Academy, with Anderson kicking off her senior campaign in grand fashion with tree goals, all coming in the final 9:30 t obreak open what had been a close game. Whitney netted the Skippers first tally.

The game was evenly matched to begin, according to Beal, something she attributed to first game jitters.

"We were able to pick up the momentum and make some things happen as the game went on," Beal reported. "We are a young team in the sense that not everyone is on the same page as far as making the game easier for us, but this will improve and the communication on the field also improves.

"We made some careless tactical mistakes. I can't expect perfection but now we have some things to work on and smooth out. Casey Anderson played very well for us today. She came alive and was in the right place at the right time three times. I give the girls a lot of credit today for sticking it out and finishing the game with a victory."

And, in the final analysis, the victory left Beal feeling even better about the makeup of her team.

"I can't help but be excited about the depth of my team," the veteran coach continued. "We really have no one superstar, I have 18 girls who can play soccer. There are no holes and every position is covered well. I think that as the season progresses, I am going to see many different girls step up and do the job.

The CHS girls will open play in the South Shore League tomorrow when they host Mashpee (4 p.m. start @ Alumni Field).

Beal has non-league home-and home series with Cape Cod Academy, Holbrook and Scituate, two historically weaker teams and one, Scituate, that could be loaded. Beal figures her team will need to win the vast majority of its league games over Mashpee, Carver, Harwich and Hull to earn a decent seeding for the Div. 3 state toruney, because Abington appears to be tough and Norwell may well contend again for a state title.

says, "the thrill of scoring a goal."

Is another trip to the MIAA Tournament in the cards this year? A 50 percent win record (tournament qualification standard) sounds less than extraordinary. Yet, facing powerhouse teams like Mashpee and Harwich can make the goal a serious challenge.

"If we want to make the tourney, we need to communicate on the field," asserts junior Brooke Allen. She adds: "If we learn to work as a team and keep our confidence, who knows what could happen?"

Coach Bostwick agrees teamwork and not individual playing will dictate this team's level of success.

"We need the team to jell together. It's too early to talk about our tournament chances," she observes.

Part of this jelling includes learning to stay in position and not backing down or being intimidated. Bostwick teaches with the experience of having played field hockey at the collegiate level herself.

Much of the credi, for 19 varsity players rests with Bostwick's ability to generate enthusiasm for the sport. ' the same breath, she describes the game as "powerful, fast-paced and exciting".

On the offensive end, expect to see Brooke Allen, Katie James, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Carrie and Christie Muir firing off some shots. In the midfield, watch for Liz Condos, Courtney Hurley, Christina St. Pierre, Remy Lee, Erin Liddell and Kathrine Whoriskey.

Defensively speaking, Allison Dean, Colby Durant, Alison Fludder, Whitney Condon, Vanessa Plant, Devin Smith, and Ellen Tarpey will all try to protect goalie Aaron Bigley.

Though new to the goalie position this year, Coach Bostwick says "Aaron's aggressive style and fearless attitude will serve him well."

Scrimmages with Hingham and a Duxbury Jamboree have sharpened Cohasset's work on basics. A 2-1 loss in the Hingham scrimmage showed the Skippers need to communicate better during the game. In the Duxbury Jamboree, the Lady Skippers contended well with many of the teams they played against, especially Carver, Stoughton and Plymouth North.

Hopefully the Skippers' practice will pay off in their season opener at Hanover this afternoon

"If we bring our A-game, we should be able to defeat Hanover," said junior Katie James.

Unfortunately for the Skippers, Mia Lieb-Lappen will have to sit on the bench due to wrist surgery. Lieb-Lappen remains upbeat. "I expect the optimistic attitudes on this year's team to carry us far."

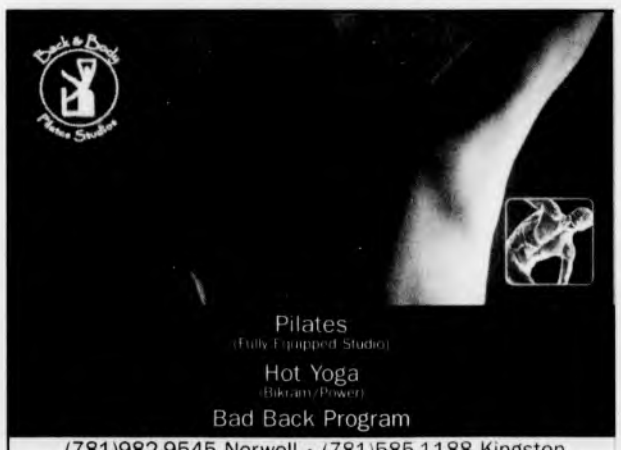
Weymouth Club offers 'back to school' kids programs

Labor day is nearly upon us and it's "back to school time" for thousands of South Shore youngsters. The turn of the calendar will also signal the start of an eclectic schedule of fall fitness programs for school age youngsters at Weymouth Club in South Weymouth.

Among this fall's offerings at the South Shore's largest fitness complex will be a number of programs for youngsters in various age groups. These include Kids Karate for kids 5 to 10 years of age. The eight-week program will be held from 3:30 to 4:15 p.m. on Tuesday afternoons, beginning September 21st. All skills levels are welcome.



Yoga for the Athletic Youth, a six-week program for ages 12 and up, will be held from 4-5 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons, beginning September 22nd. This program is designed to increase flexibility, enhance concentration and teach relaxation and stress reduction. It's non-competitive and fun, taught in a relaxing atmosphere.

The programs are open to both members and non-members on a course or drop in basis. For additional program information and fees, please call Weymouth Club at 781.337.4600.

For information, please contact Stephanie Meyers-Roche at Weymouth Club (781.337.4600) or Darryl Elliott at Bay State Physical Therapy (781.335.1151).

Ted Straughn (#34) returns as a vital two-way starter at fullback and linebacker.

"Chris was our coach on the field, one of the smartest players I've ever been around, and Tony was our heart and soul in a lot of ways. He set the tone for us."

Maybe coach, but it still seems there's a pretty good blend of talent out there on that side of the ball.

The defensive line returns seniors Kelvin Ferriera (the team sack leader) and Leo Clougherty at the defensive end spots, and Matt Baroudi at one tackle.

Senior captains Matt Casey (second on the team with 71 tackles) and Ted Straughn return for another season at linebacker. Ditto for seniors Joe Durkin (the third tri-captain), D J Silvia, and Crandon Leahy in the defensive backfield.

No matter how you slice it, that's a whole lot of experience.

Hard nosed junior Scott Wakefield (5-10/175) has emerged as the favorite to man the other tackle spot, with Rolfe hoping he can use his speed to get around the outside and pressure the passer or force the run back to the inside.

Sophomore Jeff Brown, a natural athlete who also shone on the hardwood and lacrosse field as a freshman at CHS, has proven to be one of the most pleasant surprises for Rolfe and staff over the last few weeks, and he's now the favorite to fill the void at safety created by Bilodeau's graduation.

Rolfe is quick to point out he would never expect the sophomore to do everything Bilodeau did, but did note "Jeff has handled everything we've thrown at him so far."

"Jeff is a fearless player and a very smart player too," continued Rolfe. "It's exciting to think how good he could be."

The improvement of juniors Anthony Dipaolo and Dave McKenna in the defensive backfield has Rolfe talking about the possibility of moving Leahy to linebacker or even to the bench—the preferred location on defense for his starting quarterback.

"Crandon is going to be our quarterback, and, all things being relatively equal, I'd like to have him over there on the sidelines to discuss offensive options and plans when the defense is on the field," said Rolfe. "You only have so much time in a game to discuss these things."

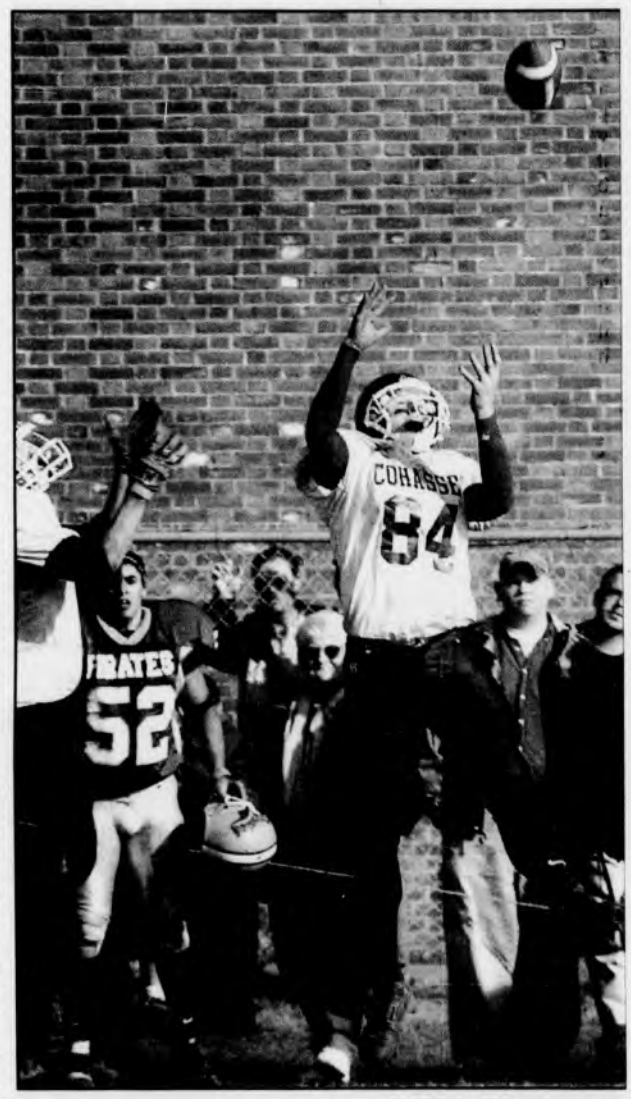
The seventh year head coach wishes he had this range of options on the offensive side of the ball.

The graduations of quarterback Mike Dooley, 1,300 yard rusher DeWayne Morris, both SSL all-stars, and half of last year's starting offensive line have left some immense voids.

The lone returnee to the backfield is Straughn (6-1/210) at fullback. Straughn is a devastating blocker and bruising straight ahead runner, the latter attribute being something Rolfe hinted we could see a lot more of this fall. Straughn's fellow captain, Joe Durkin, figures to have the inside track to take over the lead running responsibilities, however.

The 5-foot-11, 180-pound Durkin is arguably the fastest player on the team, but also shows no hesitation to take it hard between the tackles.

"Joe can fly, but he doesn't mind the contact either," reports Rolfe. "He's pretty well rounded."



Senior Brendan Michaud is also expected to see some time in the backfield, either at wingback or fullback.

With Bilodeau (28 receptions for 323 yards and 4 TDs) off to college, Silvia (14 receptions for 212 yards and 2 TDs) returns as the elder statesman of the receiving corp. There are several candidates for the other spot on the outside.

On the line, junior left guard Nick Arment will start his third year, Casey returns at center and junior Dan McCarthy will move from tackle to tight end. There are several players vying to fill the void left by Mariner All-Scholastic guard Steven Davis, left tackle Dan Tarpey and tight end Sean Connolly.

Clougherty, freshman Jake Cuneo (6-2/245) and sophomore Justin Alexander appear the favorites for those three spots at the time of this writing.

It seems unlikely anyone could provide all of the positive things Mariner All-Scholastic quarterback Mike Dooley did (1,050 yards of offense, rushing for 334 yards and eight touchdowns, and passing for 725 yards and six more TDs), but Leahy, a powerful 6-foot-2/205-pound natural athlete, will give it his best shot.

Crandon Leahy (#84) goes from catching passes to throwing them.

"I don't think Crandon is going to disappoint," Rolfe offered. "He's one of our fastest players, he's big, he has a good arm and he's done everything we've asked so far. I think people are going to like what they see with him."

One thing that concerns Rolfe is the reduced preparation time. Because of the late labor day and start of school, games are starting the same week the schools opened.

"I know everyone is in the same boat, but I'm only looking at one team right now, mine, and it's been difficult," he said. "There's not a big margin for error. We're game planning this week, and there are still a lot of things on the field we'd like to address a little more."

Yeah, we're guessing this is a touched with a hint of détente too.

The Skippers open the season for real at Nantucket on Saturday. They'll be at Archbishop Williams a week from Saturday and host Cardinal Spellman for the home opener on Sept. 25.

WELCOME BACK

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley greets some students at the grade 3-5 school on the first day yesterday (Wednesday).

arrived and the classes were complete and ready to line up, Gauley welcomed everyone and told them he would be "starting a brand new tradition this year," and that Jones would be rolling out the red carpet to welcome students to the building. He also told the students that Jones has been working very hard to get the school ready for them, and had come in at 5 a.m. that morning to finish because, "He had so much he wanted to get done."

As Jones prepared to roll out the carpet, a very excited Gauley said to a student, "Woo-hoo!" The carpet was rolled out, and classroom by classroom students entered the hall. As they passed, Gauley said hello to the students and wished everyone a happy first day of school. One student shouted over his shoulder as he left, "I like the red carpet Mr. Gauley!"

Rolling out the red carpet is a tradition Gauley said will continue on in the coming years. "I admit, I stole the idea," he joked, adding a woman he works with at a camp during the summer had done the same at the school she teaches at. However, Gauley said he loved the idea and the carpet has now become a Deer Hill tradition that will be done on both the first and last day of school.

Piano lessons start up again

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson-schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure.

Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music of Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln, Norwood, and currently in Cohasset.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

For more information, call 781-383-1487.

Dog obedience

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer another session of dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School this season.

Classes will be held on Monday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting Sept. 13. For all classes the fee is $100. For the five-week, one-hour, per-week program. Dog owners are required to have their dogs' shots/inoculations up to date. The class, which will be for beginners, will be held from 6-7 p.m.

To register for the next available session, call the recreation office at 781-383-4109.

Determined raccoon is rescued from hull drain grate

Was trying to beat the tide

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There's a little Hull raccoon that's happy to be in Hingham.

She may not be completely sure how she ended up at the New England Wildlife Center off Fort Hill Street but one thing is for certain — she is safe and warm and her harrowing ordeal is over.

The little raccoon with her head stuck in the grate.

Hingham firefighters try to cut the grate while Hull Assistant ACO Casey Fredette holds the raccoon steady.

The little raccoon is wrapped in a blanket after her ordeal.

It was sometime early Tuesday morning when Hull animal control, fire department and DPW responded to a call that a raccoon had its head stuck in one of the squares in a drain grate.

The "youngster" made her way through a drain pipe from the beach to Hull's Edgewater Street when the tide rose and rather than drown, she pushed her head right through one of the grate's square holes firmly lodging it there. All that was visible from the street was the little creature's snout and ears.

A neighbor to the drain put trash barrels around to keep cars from running over the raccoon's head. Public safety officials arrived and couldn't free the raccoon. But they could remove the grate itself and transport the raccoon to the wildlife center off Fort Hill Street in Hingham.

Once at the wildlife center, veterinary tech Brian Michaels gave the raccoon a tranquilizer to calm it down. Hull Animal Control Officer Megan Hanrahan explained that raccoons run through the pipes at low tide scavenging for food such as clams and crabs on the beach.

Assistant Hull ACO Casey Fredette held the grate up in the back of the van transporting the little raccoon to the wildlife center.

Michaels, the veterinary tech, explained the center tried to "lube" the raccoon's head with Dawn detergent to try and slip it through the grate but to no avail.

"We just couldn't push it through," he said. "So the Hingham Fire Department came and cut her out." An engine from Hingham's Torrent station responded and used "saws-all," a cutting tool, to cut the grate and free the critter.

Michaels said the raccoon, a female who is about 6 months old, should do fine.

"She looks healthy, there aren't any wounds – she's a little hypothermic but it was out there (in the grate) for two hours," he said.

Hanrahan suggested a name for the creature. "They should name her Lucky," she said.

Legion clambake supports scholarship

The George H. Mealy Post 118 of the American Legion will sponsor its 22nd annual Christine Burke Scholarship Fund Clambake on Saturday, Sept. 11, from noon to sunset at Sandy Beach. Proceeds from the event will once again benefit worthy graduating South Shore High School students seeking higher education.

There will be a traditional New England Clambake Catered by Gulf River Clambakes, featuring lobster, steamed clams, chowder, barbecued chicken, your favorite beverages and more This year's event will also include live entertainment by The Irish Volunteers and DJ Jay Flori. The American Legion Auxiliary "Play Ladies" will have games and activities for the kids. Tickets are $35 for adults. Children not eating the clambake are free and there will be plenty of complimentary hot dogs and watermelon.

There will also be a raffle drawing at the clambake for, the winner's choice, of two Vespa Motor Scooters with a trailer or $5,000. The motor scooters and trailer were donated by Herb Chambers Vespa of Boston and local businessman Neil Murphy. The chances are $10 each and only 1,000 chances will be sold.

For tickets stop by the American Legion Post at 95 Summer St. 781-383-9657 or call John Covell at 781-383-0178 Rain Date: Sunday, Sept. 12. Tickets will not be sold at the event.

Nick Flynn at Buttonwood Books

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present former Scituate resident Nick Flynn discussing his book "Another Bull* Night in Suck City" (W.W. Norton, $23.95) Thursday, Sept. 23, at 7 pm at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset. Nick Flynn has written a powerful, gritty memoir that will strike a chord with South Shore residents. He grew up in Scituate. Both his parents were raised in Scituate (his father was born in Hingham and his family later moved to Scituate). The locations described will bring an immediate visual association with local places and events; First Cliff, Second Cliff, Third Cliff, Scituate Harbor, restaurants, Provincetown, The Red Sox, Beacon Hill, Boston and the Pine Street Inn. Flynn was 24 when he began to work at the Pine Street Inn and eventually met his father, Jonathan Flynn, absentee parent, would-be writer, convicted con man, dreamer, alcoholic and homeless person. His story of his youth and his eventual meeting with his father is recounted in his book "Another Bull* Night in Suck City" (a phrase Flynn senior uses to describe his life on the streets). This is a free event and the public is most welcome. If you are unable to attend but would like a signed copy, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com

the better to see you with

Better medical treatment starts with better medical diagnosis. In radiology, that means staying ahead of the technology curve. For you, it means less invasive breast imaging, virtual colonoscopy, 3-D CT and Boston's first PET/CT scanner. And because our services are provided on site, patients benefit from shorter wait times and faster physician feedback. See for yourself by visiting www.bidmc.harvard.edu or by calling 800-667-5356.

Shelter house tour and garden party set for Sunday

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMO@CNC.COM

On Sunday, Sept. 12 from 2 to 6 p.m., Bruce and Alice La Vigne will open the doors of their historic Scituate Harbor home at 26 Brook Street to visitors.

Stray cats with special needs are on the rise among the Scituate Animal Shelter population and this Sunday's fourth annual Garden Party and House Tour will benefit them, along with dozens of other feline and canine residents. Money raised through the event will help cover the high cost of veterinary and special care for animals housed by the shelter which serves Scituate, Norwell, Cohasset, Hull and Hingham.

On Sunday, Sept. 12 from 2 to 6 p.m., Bruce and Alice La Vigne will open the doors of their historic Scituate Harbor home at 26 Brook Street to visitors who can take part in a silent auction featuring work from local artists, and enjoy fine food donated by Riva Restaurant co-owners Mike and Jimmy Burke.

"One hundred percent of the money goes to the animal shelter," said David Cerutti, organizer of the event. "This town is committed to their animals."

Shelter director Kathy Pendoley, said that the house tour is one of the biggest fundraisers of the year for the 11-year-old facility. Other efforts include a golf tournament, yard sales, and sales of the shelter's Bone Appetite cookbook.

Cerutti said supporters and volunteers known as the "friends" of the animal shelter will be helping out with Sunday's event. He added that the shelter has a mailing list of about 2,500 people and currently houses four dogs, 50 cats and one rabbit.

Large numbers of stray cats in residence at no-kill shelters like Scituate's is common, Pendolay noted.

"There is a huge population with cats in the area and everywhere," she said.

Most of the cats at the Scituate shelter were outdoor cats that couldn't find their way home or were abandoned. Others are sick with parasites or emaciated. The majority of the cats that come to the shelter have not been spayed or neutered. That's where the shelter, its fundraisers, and its friends come in.

Cerutti is expecting about 200 people to explore the Scituate home Sunday, possibly raising up to $8,000 for the shelter.

According to Cerutti, the house hosting this year's tour and garden party was built on the site of an onion farm in 1879. The La Vigne's bought the Victorian home in 1999, and added 1,800 square feet of living space in 2001, designing it similar to a cottage.

"It's a mix of old and new," said Bruce La Vigne about his home, adding that it still maintains the original architectural details, restored parquet flooring and antique pine furnishings. "We were flattered when (the Scituate Animal Shelter) asked us to do this."

The recently renovated home also features a spacious great room, octagonal sunroom, gourmet kitchen, and several elegant porches.

You'll love decorative grasses

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

A visit to our local nurseries is a must at this time of year. Healthy, fresh trees and shrubs are arriving daily at many garden centers while perennials and nursery stock from earlier in the season tend to be on sale for bargain shoppers. Spring-flowering bulbs are usually available early this month and should be purchased as soon as possible to ensure the best selection. Store in a cool, dry location until ground temperatures drop later this month. For a touch of autumn color, choose from a glorious selection of late-blooming plants including colorful chrysanthemums, handsome ornamental cabbages and kale, hardy sedums and cheerful asters, and the supremely beautiful and fragrant sweet autumn clematis.

A perfect foil for these traditional fall bloomers are the carefree ornamental grasses. Most decorative grasses are in their glory during the latter half of the growing season as they finally reach mature stature and begin to display their feathery plumes and seed heads. Perhaps the most popular and best known ornamental grasses are the Maiden grasses, members of the Miscanthus family. These elegant grasses form singular clumps characterized by slender, slightly arching foliage that range from delicate 3-foot specimens like 'Yaku Jima' to the giant M. floridulus reaching a height of up to 12 feet. They perform best in moist soils, full sun and good winter drainage but are tolerant of a wide range of conditions. Silky plumes shimmer in the autumn sun as they sway in the breeze and provide textural contrast in addition to sound and motion, especially during the stark winter months. Clumps enlarge gradually but sufficient space should be provided initially as their dense, fibrous root systems make division challenging. Spring transplanting is preferred and a saw may be required to divide an established clump.

Maiden grasses should be sheared as close to the ground as possible before new growth appears in early April.

Numerous cultivars of Miscanthus are available including several green and yellow-striped varieties known as Zebra (Zebrinus), and Porcupine grass (Strictus). For a delicate, see-through quality, try 'Gracillimus' or 'Morning Light', both standing about 5 feet when established with slender, slightly arching foliage. Russet-colored plumes appear in October and become beige and fluffy as they mature. Variegated members of this family, including 'Cabaret', and 'Silberfeil', produce sensational, eye-catching clumps, or for a different color, look for 'Pupurascens' with purple-tinted leaves that fade to red late in the season.

Most decorative grasses are in their glory during the latter half of the growing season as they finally reach mature stature and begin to display their feathery plumes and seed heads.

Switch grasses (Panicum) are equally lovely additions to the landscape, offering a similar upright architectural presence in the landscape while displaying a slightly more delicate appearance in addition to being considerably easier to divide and relocate. Airy open seed heads give a hazy effect in late summer and early autumn. Several cultivars offer blue-tinted foliage reaching heights of 3 to 6 feet including 'Dallas Blues', 'Prairie Sky' and 'Heavy Metal'. A recent introduction, P. 'Shenandoah', has markedly red to burgundy tones and stays quite compact at under 3 feet. These hardy grasses will acclimate to nearly any soil type in sun or part shade.

The family of fountain grasses (Pennisetum) is another favorite characterized by dense clumps of narrow arching leaves and late summer flowers that resemble caterpillars or bottle brushes. Several selections of Pennisetum are currently available including a darling dwarf called 'Little Bunny' and a number of compact 2-foot varieties including 'Hameln' and 'Cassian'. A recent introduction, 'Karley Rose', produces lovely pink tinged flowers and an especially late-blooming cultivar 'Moudry' demonstrates thick, black seed heads that often produce numerous seedlings. Perhaps the most irresistible of all the ornamental grasses is the crimson fountain grass (Pennisetum setaceum rubrum), which produces stunning burgundy leaves and long, elegant, arching flowers but regrettably, this sensational grass is very tender and must be treated as an annual. The fountain grasses thrive in average soils and full sun.

Several compact ornamental grasses exhibit blue-tinted foliages that provide attractive color contrasts to our predominantly green gardens. The blue fescues (Festuca glauca) form tidy 8-inch mounds of very thin, blue-gray foliage that are effective as edging plants in borders or foundation plantings. Blue oat grass (Helictotrichon) also demonstrates steel blue-gray leaves but is more upright in form, its spiky leaves reaching a height of 12 to 24 inches. Both these grasses tend to maintain their color well into the winter months and prefer sunny, dry, well-drained sites. Blue lyme grass (Elymus arenarius 'Glaucus') is equally stunning in color and thrives in dry soils, but growers beware as this striking grass has an aggressive nature and is often best confined in containers.

Northern sea oats (Chasmanthium latifolium) are a sentimental favorite of mine rekindling fond memories of the dunes of North Carolina when clusters of dangling oats appear in August. Tolerant of a wide range of soils in sun or partial shade, this 3 to 5-foot tall clumping grass seeds about and might be considered by some to be a nuisance but I transplant or weed out the excess.

These low maintenance plants offer a dramatic contrast in form, color, texture and height making them valuable additions to any landscape plan. Plant one or more in your garden this season and enjoy their beauty for months and years to come.

Her weekly gardening column 'Green Thumbs Up' has appeared in the Mariner newspapers for nearly a decade. Snipdoodles are great by any name

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Snipdoodles are referred to by many names. Along the Hudson River Valley they were called schnecken noodles, yet snipdoodles or snickerdoodles can also be found in many cookbooks. They are simple round cookies, flavored with vanilla and nutmeg and dipped in sugar and cinnamon, but they are too often baked flat with little chew. We were looking for a thick confection, almost a light macaroon, airy but with enough body to feel like a toothy sponge cake.

The first test was the shortening. Many recipes call for Crisco or a butter/Crisco combination, but we preferred all butter for flavor and for producing a thicker cookie. As with other thick cookies, we found that chilling the dough in the refrigerator for a couple of hours also helped add height and chew. We also added milk to the cookie dough which makes them softer and more delicate.

The hardest part of any cookie-making is determining when to take them out of the oven. The best test for snipdoodles is to see if the bottom is very lightly browned. The cookies will still be soft to the touch but they will set up as they cool. If the bottoms are not browned at all, the snipdoodles will come out underbaked and will deflate as they come to room temperature.

Two other words of caution. Check your oven temperature before baking with a good oven thermometer. (Taylor makes an accurate blue-alcohol-filled horizontal model for about $13.) Second, do not put two cookie sheets in the oven at a time. That causes uneven baking which, for this delicate recipe, usually spells disaster.

SNIPDOODLES

I add a bit of nutmeg to the batter which adds a gentle perfume to what is a very simple cookie. The texture of these cookies is heavenly; light but with a nice chew. They bake up nice and thick, almost like a macaroon. Take them out of the oven when the bottoms are very lightly browned and the cookie is still soft to the touch.

1stick unsalted butter (8 tablespoons), softened
1 1/2 cups plus 3 tablespoons sugar
2 eggs
1teaspoon vanilla
1/4cup milk
3 cups flour
3/4teaspoon baking soda
1teaspoon cream of tartar
1/2 teaspoon table salt
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 tablespoon cinnamon

1. Beat the butter and 1 cup of the sugar (reserve the 3 tablespoons) in the bowl of an electric mixer or with a wooden spoon until creamy and smooth, about 3 minutes. Add the eggs and vanilla and beat until fully incorporated. Add the milk and stir to incorporate. In a separate bowl, whisk together the next 5 ingredients (flour through nutmeg) and then stir into the butter/sugar mixture. Chill dough for 2 hours. Heat oven to 350 degrees. Line two cookie sheets with parchment paper.

2. Shape dough into large, walnut-size balls, about 1 1/4 inches in diameter. Mix together remaining 3 tablespoons sugar and cinnamon in a small bowl. Dip tops in sugar-cinnamon mixture. Place 3 inches apart on the lined baking sheet. Bake for about 12 minutes. Cookies will appear undercooked when removed from the oven; the centers will still be very moist and light. As they cool, the cookies will firm. The bottoms ought to be lightly browned, however.

Makes 20 to 24 cookies.

South Shore AAUW to meet on Sept. 13

The South Shore branch of the American Association of University Women will present its program for the upcoming year at a Pot Luck Supper to be held Sept. 13, at 6:30 p.m., at the Allerton House, Hingham.

Since 1881, this national organization has been at the forefront of promoting lifelong education, positive social change, and equity for women and girls. Although AAUW is an association of diverse professions, backgrounds, cultures, and ages, it is united in its goal of helping to shape the future.

If you would like to learn more, or would like to attend this meeting, call Madonna Hart, 781-331-0390.

AN ADMITTED LOSS

It has been thought, for many years, that older people deny their hearing losses by declaring that the problem rests with other people mumbling. In other words, they blame others for their inability to hear. All that may be changing, however, as aging baby boomers inspire a new attitude to aging and hearing loss. According to a recent study, only 5% of a group of seniors who were asked about their hearing had suffered a hearing loss and denied having a problem. Researchers administered questionnaires to 91 people aged 65 and older about whether they had any hearing loss. Then then tested people's hearing and handed out a follow-up ten-question survey. Sixty-two percent of the participants admitted having a hearing loss.

If you've tried just about everything to deal with your hearing loss on your own-lip reading, shouting, turning up the volume, avoiding conversation, and withdrawing from social situations-now try a visit to FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. We have extensive training and skills to understand and diagnose your loss, state-of-the-art equipment to test your hearing, and the very latest in hearing instruments to correct your impairment. With our FREE hearing evaluations, FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased, and FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid, your hearing health care needs are fully covered here at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH:781-337-1144.

P.S. The first step in addressing a hearing loss effectively is admitting that you have one.

She has a twinkle in her eye, a smile on her lips and autism.

Rosie's family understands that for Rosie, and the more than one million Americans like her who are living with an autism spectrum disorder, research offers hope. That's why they joined forces with 7,000 other people in Boston last year, to raise money for the National Alliance for Autism Research (NAAR), the first organization in the country dedicated to funding and accelerating biomedical research to unlock the mysteries of autism spectrum disorders. To date, NAAR has committed $20.9 million to directly fund autism research — more than any other non-governmental organization in the U.S. Most of the money raised for NAAR comes from the Walk F.A.R. Nothing in writing for Cook Estate

Selectmen address citizen's concerns

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While many residents may have assumed there is a signed agreement between the town and Northland Residential to develop the Cook Estate property, Selectmen said Tuesday the only signed agreement which exists between the two is the company's bid proposal.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan, in response to questions posed by concerned citizen, Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, said there will be a signed closing document, but at this time, there is no written document similar to a contract between the town and Northland.

Quigley came to the meeting seeking answers which she had previously put in writing to the board, but for which she had received no response. Quigley asked for a copy of "Whatever signed agreement exists," between the town and Northland Residential, both verbally more than seven weeks ago, and formally in writing to Town Manager Michael Buckley and the Board of Selectmen. While Quigley said she had spoken with Buckley about the matter, he had said he was unable to give her the information, and referred her to the Board of Selectmen, which did not respond to her request.

"Here I am again, asking for the information," she said, adding for the board to not have the courtesy to write her back and "To totally ignore me is incomprehensible."

Sullivan apologized and said he would take responsibility for the oversight, adding it was not intentional. "I had assumed it was taken care of," he said.

Sullivan explained at the time he received the letter addressed to him, he did not have the information, but has since found out there will be signed closing document, but there is no agreement other than the bid process documents right now.

"What was so hard about giving the information?" asked Quigley.

The Cook Estate project is an interesting public-private hybrid with public money making it possible for the town to sell to a private developer who would ultimately build what the town wants: senior housing.

At last fall's special Town Meeting voters allocated $4.5 million to purchase the Cook Estate and agreed to seek $5.2 million in a potential sale of the combined Cook Estate and adjacent town land. Roughly 95 units are planned for the development.

The Mariner has also been trying to obtain copies of a written agreement between the town and Northland. The Mariner was told by Dave Fulton of GLC Consulting, which is working with the town on the Cook Estate project, that a Letter of Intent had been signed by the town and Northland this April, allowing Northland to begin due diligence on the site. Fulton also said the Land Disposition Agreement would be signed after the due dili-

Primary breaks record for lowest turnout

Only 4.6 percent went to the polls

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Tuesday's primary could be a record breaker in Cohasset.

Not for coming in first – but for coming in last in terms of turnout.

With only 241 or 4.6 percent of the town's registered voters going to the polls – the election can boast the lowest turnout since at least 1978, which is the farthest back the Town Clerk checked.

"It was dead," Town Clerk Marion Douglas said about an election when two voters at one time were considered a crowd.

One-hundred-ninety-six Republicans voted in Cohasset and 288 Democrats.

There was perhaps little reason for voters to turn out in droves. There were no contests on the Republican side. Races on the Democrat ballot only included races for councilor, register of deeds and county commissioner.

There were no races in either major party for U.S. Congress, state senator or state representative, or county sheriff – which could have attracted more voters.

That will change Nov. 2 when a US Senator from Massachusetts, John Kerry, a Democrat, tries to unseat Texas Republican, President George W. Bush. Presidential elections in Cohasset can draw upwards of 80 percent of the town's registered voters.

On Tuesday, no Cohasset voters pulled Libertarian or Green Party ballots, which

Art center celebrates 50 years

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The South Shore Art Center in Cohasset is going all out to celebrate its 50th anniversary.

The big event is the "50 Towns/50 Years" exhibition, juried by Dore VanDyke, which may be viewed in the Bancroft Gallery at the center Sept. 19 through Oct. 24, Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. The exhibit showcases distinctive work by South Shore artists.

VanDyke is executive director and curator at the Attleboro Museum Center for the Arts, where she manages the museum's exhibition, education, fund raising, and special events programming.

This follows a creative black-tie gala celebration during the anniversary weekend on Sat., Sept. 18, to honor those whose dedication over the past 50 years helped create one of the area's premier arts facilities, followed by the show's opening reception Sun., Sept. 19, from 4

Board outlines qualities for top Town Manager candidate

Dormitzer pushes for business background

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As the résumés continue to arrive from those interested in becoming Cohasset's new Town Manager, the Town Manager Search Committee will soon begin weeding through the pile. Members of the committee came before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday to help narrow down the list of qualities they should be looking for in potential candidates, and found the one definite requirement: the ability to hit the ground running.

With budget season and Town Meeting looming, the town doesn't have the time to slowly ease someone into the job, and needs someone with the experience to begin working on their first day. However, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the town may want to push municipal experience aside as the most important quality for a new manager, and look for candidates who have a strong business background, and can serve as the kind of leader the town needs. Someone with values who can energize others, is intelligent, ethical, and emotionally mature, and exercises self-control. "Not to dismiss the importance of municipal experience, but we have a great staff around here," that would be able to help a new person at the beginning, he said.

> "On the job training is not something we have time for right now."
> — Selectman Ronnie McMorris

However, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan, who agreed having those qualities are all important, said this is a critical time in Cohasset's history and, "There are a lot of issues someone would need to have to get up to speed on," including how the school department works, the politics of running a town, and the other duties municipal government requires which the private sector does not. "There will be a learning curve for anyone, but maybe we don't feel this is an appropriate time to consider it," he said. In addition, someone without municipal experience would need time to experience life in a municipal role, and it would take some time before they would even be able to gauge whether they can be effective in their new role. There is also the possibility someone with municipal experience could possess the qualities Dormitzer is looking for.

Selectman Fred Koed agreed with Dormitzer and said he doesn't want to rule anyone out based on municipal experience, as with everything, there can be exceptions. He suggested looking at every résumé and "If something stands out or makes sense," that candidate should be investigated.

However, Selectman Ronnie McMorris reiterated the importance of having someone on board who can hit the ground running because, "On the job training is not something we have time for right now," she said.

Search Committee Member Rick Flynn, who is also on the School Committee, agreed with Sullivan and McMorris, and said at this point, "We don't have the luxury to be able to train someone on the job." However, he also said that while "The ideal candidate has all of Ralph's qual-

Veterans committee seeks information

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee is looking to find Cohasset residents who served in the Armed Forces during the Persian Gulf War. The recently updated Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site has posted honor rolls for every war dating back to the Civil War, as well as hero profiles and information about Gold Star mothers. Currently, the committee has an honor roll page for the Persian Gulf War on its Web site, but no names to add to the list.

Please contact Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt via e-mail at: gpratt@suburbancompanies.com. Visit the committee's Web site at: cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Cohasset family turns events and memories into movies

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"We do everything from the concept, to the writing to the videotaping and editing."
— Derry Schwantner, Studio Sea

Armed with two MacIntosh computers and a plethora of creativity, Derry and Jim Schwantner have turned simple computer software into their very own movie-making business. Their work has been seen all over town, from video yearbooks at the schools to photo collages at Boy Scouts ceremonies, and the two are just getting warmed up.

Just over one year ago, the Schwantners began "Studio Sea," a production company that writes and produces video documentary content. Although the studio itself, which was located on South Main Street in Cohasset Village, is now closed, it was started to serve as a classroom-type setting, allowing children to bring their imaginations to life, and has branched out to include a wide variety of multimedia services.

Derry said the Studio began as an offshoot of her day job. As a computer teacher at the Osgood School, Derry sees the interest her students have in computers on a daily basis. However, with curriculum restrictions, children in her classes often have projects in mind and there simply isn't enough time to finish them.

"The kids wanted to tell their stories and illustrate them and there was no budget for printing out their wonderful creations," Derry said.

That, coupled with the fact that her daughter Carly, 11 had also been leaving half-written stories around the house, prompted her to begin thinking of a way to create a space where children could finish their projects and have a neat package to take them home in.

For roughly one year, children visited Studio Sea, but when the lease ran out, Derry and Jim decided it was time to branch out in their endeavor, changing their production company to provide a more creative set of services outside the classroom setting. The Schwantners now have a goal of making the medium available to more people who want to use sight and sound to record key events or tell stories about their organizations, companies, schools, and families.

Together, Derry and Jim are completely responsible for the production of the finished product.

"We do everything from the concept, to the writing to the videotaping and editing," she said. For a one-minute movie, it takes hours of editing video footage combined with sound to get the final clip, she said.

Derry said she trained herself to make her own movies, but she first learned about the technology through her son Alex. When he was 13 years old, Alex began making claymation movies using the computer, which Derry said were great, and he has been progressing ever since. "He's lucky to be getting in now," said Derry, adding Alex wants to be a director when he's older.

Derry began her movie-making career by practicing on I-movie, an Apple Computer movie-making program. She said at first, it took some getting used to because she really only began working on computers after she was married. She said she wishes the technology had been readily available much sooner, and she would have been able to start learning about computers at the age her students are at now.

Once she became very familiar with the first program, she said she outgrew it and began looking for something a little more sophisticated. That is when she began using Final Cut, which is the same program used to make motion pictures. "The Lord of the Rings would be made using this," she said.

The Schwantners will begin a new endeavor this week, as they will be providing the production and directing services for a new local access talk show called "Our Town," featuring former School Committee members Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo. The show debuts tonight (Thursday) at 8:30 p.m. on cable-TV channel 10. With his aspirations for become a director, Alex has been given the job of technical director for the show, and their other son Derek, 13 will help out as well.

Derry said the word has been getting out about the service she and her husband provide, and they have been asked to participate in some wonderful events. She said they just finished a movie for the South Shore Art Center, which will help commemorate the Center's 50th anniversary. In addition, the Schwantners have been hired to film the Mixfest concert featuring Alanis Morrisette, John Mayer, Lenny Kravitz, and Maroon 5 this weekend. "We'll take them as they come in," Derry said.

For now, the two are trying to build up a portfolio, and said, "Anything you can think up, we can do." She said she and her husband love working with people to see what kinds of ideas they can share. Between the two of them, Derry said there really isn't any request the two can't meet.

Alex Schwantner, along with his mother Derry and father Jim, will direct and produce "Our Town," a new local talk-show featuring Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo. The show is just one of many projects Derry and Jim have completed through their production company, Studio Sea.

'Our Town' debuts tonight

Sopranos fans might see some familiar footage when tuning in to cable-TV channel 10 tonight. The opening credits to "Our Town," a new talk-show featuring hosts Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo, feature the two cruising around Cohasset in their cars, past some familiar sights, much like the beginning of the popular HBO series.

The show will debut tonight, (Thursday, Sept. 16) at 8:30 p.m. on cable-TV channel 10. Special guests are Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan and state Rep. Garrett Bradley. Rich Ofsthun, the show's roving reporter, will provide footage from the RTF where he is interviewing citizens about what they'd like to see on the new TV show. The show will be repeated at 8:30 p.m., Sept. 23. The show can be reached by email at:

had no candidates.

Garrett Bradley, state representative for the Third Plymouth District, was the big vote-getter with 123 votes on the Democrat side.

Robert Hedlund, state senator for the Plymouth-Norfolk District, took top on the Republican side with 94 votes.

Tom Fogarty of Atlantic Avenue and Jonathan Eder of Hill Street were the last two voters to cast ballots at Town Hall on Tuesday. They arrived at 7:55 p.m. and 7:58 p.m. respectively.

Fogarty, a Republican, said he felt an obligation to vote even though there were no contests on the GOP ballot.

> "It was dead."
> — Town Clerk Marion Douglas

Eder, also a Republican, arrived at the urging of a coworker who said he should vote for Bob Stone for Plymouth County Sheriff. The only problem is, unlike its neighbors, Cohasset is in Norfolk County and Stone's name was not on the ballot here.

"I heard the sheriff debate on WATD (radio)," Eder said. "All the area towns were mentioned and I assumed that included Cohasset."

According to election workers, Eder was not alone in thinking the Plymouth County Sheriff's race — ultimately won by Democrat incumbent Joseph McDonough of Scituate and Republican Joseph McDonald of Kinsgton — would be on the Cohasset ballot.

Douglas, the town clerk, said the other all-time low turnout occurred in the Sept. 15,1988 primary when only 371 voters or 7.8 percent went to the polls in Cohasset.

Along Highland Avenue Tuesday, Dr. Edward Woods and Beth Marsden-Gilman campaign for Republicans, incumbent state Sen. Robert Hedlund and Mike Jones, who will challenge U.S. Rep. William Delahunt for his congressional seat.

Nothing in writing

genee efforts are complete. However, when the Mariner contacted Jack Dawley of Northland Residential for a copy of the letter, it was told the letter did not exist. Dawley said there is no Letter of Intent because work was halted on it when the wastewater issue, "reared its ugly head." Former Town Manager Mark Haddad announced in April that an on-site system would not be an option for the Cook site, although the property had been marketed as needing on-site wastewater disposal.

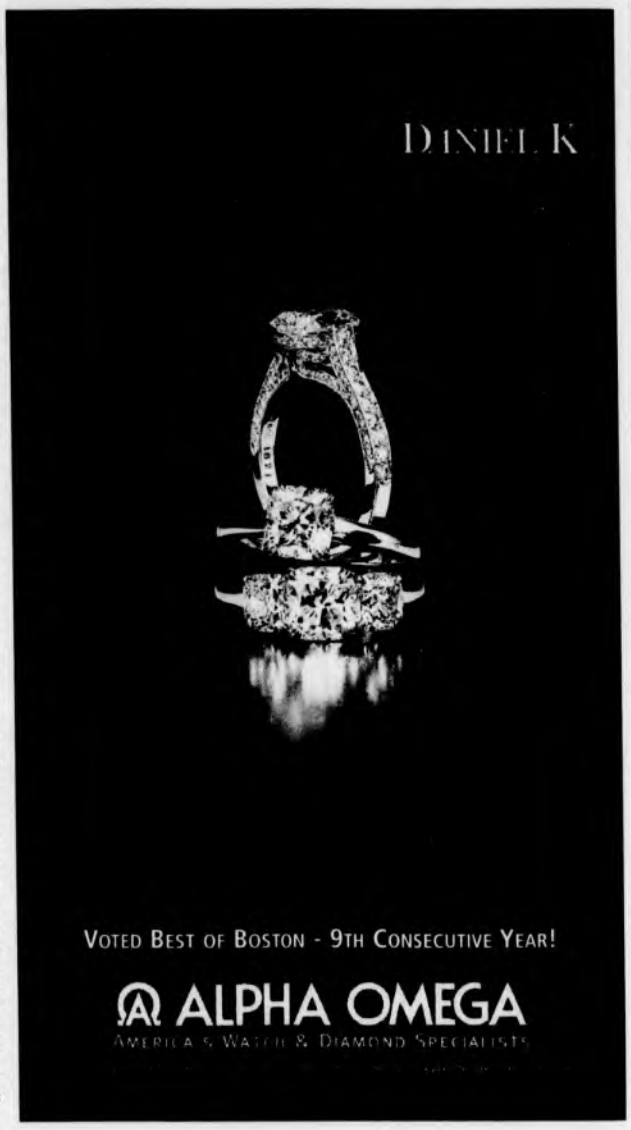
Dawley said due to the language in the RFP, the $100,000 deposit put down by Northland is the only agreement which is necessary for the $5 million project. He also said the Land Disposition Agreement, which is similar to a Purchase and Sale Agreement, is almost in its final form, but the lawyers are still tweaking it, and he hopes to have a final version ready to sign within the next couple of weeks.

Other questions

Quigley went on to ask whether the money being spent by Northland is solely the company's expense, and Sullivan replied it is his understanding Northland is spending the money on its own. Dawley confirmed any money being spent by the company is at its own risk. Quigley also asked about the private land owner which is supposedly working with the town on some kind of deal to leach water off site, and Sullivan said he was not sure about the status of that deal, and did not mention who the land owner might be or where the parcel is located.

However, a Second Amendment to the Purchase and Sale Agreement between the town and the Cook heirs, dated August 4, 2004, states, "the development of the (Cook) property as contemplated herein would, of necessity, require securing an off site means of wastewater disposal for the project from an abutter, Donald Staszko, and determining that such site could support such a system." Staszko owns Cohasset Plaza.

The Purchase and Sale also states the buyer, or the town, has until either Nov. 15, 2004 or one business day following the close of the Special Fall Town Meeting, but in no event later than Nov. 30, 2004, to resolve the wastewater disposal issue. The board set the Town Meeting date for Dec. 6 Tuesday night, which may require an additional amendment to the Purchase and Sale.



Quigley also asked what the breakdown of housing units would be and the cost for the various kinds of housing, and Sullivan said he wasn't sure. Sullivan said he thought it had been written about in the Mariner. Quigley said she would appreciate an answer in writing, "In a timely fashion."

There were other members in the audience who were also in search of more information regarding the Cook Estate. Tanna Carlson, 18 Old Coach Road, asked whether there would be a time where the board would give another presentation regarding the Cook, to allow residents to have a better understanding, potentially at Town Meeting. Sullivan said there will most likely be an article on the Town Meeting Warrant associated with the Cook and a wastewater solution, and voters will have the opportunity to weigh in on the future of the project.

Carlson said she remembers going to Town Meeting and voting, and being told that if the project cost more than $50,000 for the town, it could walk away. "Now we're $200,000 into it," she said. Carlson added she understood that a vote at Town Meeting this year would mean the Cook Estate could be included in the town's sewer system, but she didn't understand how there could suddenly be more capacity for the project when all the other projects have been told no.

Sullivan said the Sewer Commission has been evaluating the plant and determining the capacity that exists, and if there is capacity, the vote would mean the Cook could tie-in. "The only reason to bring it to Town Meeting would be to get approval to hook up to the municipal sewer," said Sullivan.

Sullivan said the vote may have to be two-tiered, with the first vote being cast to bring the Cook property into the Central District, and the second to allow approval to tie the project into the municipal sewer lines, but it is still too early to say, as the Warrant has not yet been drafted. The Warrant will close Oct. 15 and all articles will need to be submitted by then.

JIMMY FUND WALK

Jane Henderson of Cohasset will be walking the 26.2 Boston Marathon course from Hopkinton to Boston this Sunday, in the Jimmy Fund/Dana Farber Fundraising Walk for cancer research. If you would like to donate to the Jimmy Fund Walk or sponsor Jane, you can go to the "Jimmy Fund Walk" Web site and click sponsor a walker or make your donation in memory or in honor of someone you know. Jane will be walking with the team "Rosie's Walk" in memory of her sister who recently died of a brain tumor.

ON STAGE

Cohasset's Kate DeLima is starring in "All Night Strut!", a sassy musical review of the 30s and 40s opening tomorrow (Sept. 17) and running through Oct. 10 at the Turtle Lane Playhouse in Newton. An accomplished actress, Kate is also a math teacher and received her bachelor's from Harvard and her master's degree from Simmons College. For tickets to see "All Night Strut!" call 617-244-0169.

ACADEMIC STANDOUT

Alan and Linda Genovese of Howe Road want to report their daughter, Sera Genovese, recently completed her first year at Southern New Hampshire University in great form! For her efforts she earned dean's list recognition for the fall semester, and she was placed on the president's list for the spring semester. Sera's parents are justifiably proud!

PANCAKE BREAKFAST

The Cohasset Soccer Boosters will hold its annual pancake breakfast on Sunday, Oct. 3 from 8 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School Cafeteria.

Enjoy a great breakfast, try your luck at some fabulous raffle prizes, even get your car washed while you're eating! Tickets are $5 per person and are available from high school players, at upcoming school events and soccer games, or at the door. Bring the whole family and help support our high school soccer teams!

HARVEST SUPPER

The Annual Harvest Supper and Auction, an autumn tradition, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church Street. The public is invited to get together for dinner on Thursday evening, Sept. 30 at 6:30 p.m.. Dinner will include ham, string beans, Harvard beets, mashed potatoes, dessert as well as beverages. The harvest auction will take place following supper. Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for children. Reserve your tickets by calling 781-383-1298.

QUILT SHOW

The Herring Run Quilter's Guild, with members from many South Shore communities including Cohasset, will present its biennial quilt show on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 18 and 19. Over 100 diverse and beautiful recently made quilts will be on display including prize winners from the prestigious Vermont Quilt Festival. The show will take place at the Norwell Middle School on Route 123, about 1.5 miles east of Route 53 from 10a.m. to 5p.m. on Saturday, and 10a.m. to 3p.m. on Sunday. A boutique, silent auction and snacks will also be available. Admission is $5.

OUR WORLD FAMILY DAY

A full day of festivities for the entire South Shore is taking place on Oct. 2. Our World Children Global Discovery Museum is celebrating the dedication of the Brooks Thomsen Singer Performance Center and the opening of our toddler play space. This daylong event includes performances by the Tale Spinners, Inca Son Music & Dance, Gary the Silent Clown from Ringling Bros. Circus and Ryanhood along with face painting and arts & crafts activities for the kids. A dedication and a specially choreographed dance piece performed by the Meredith Butulis Dance Ensemble will be a couple of the special highlights of the day. The celebration begins at 10 a.m., admission is $4 for adults, $2 for children and $10 for families up to 6 members. Rain or shine. Parking is free. Call 781-383-3198 for more information.

Kate DeLima is starring in "All Night Strut!" at the Turtle Lane Playhouse in Newton.

PLAYGROUND GRAND OPENING

Bring the kids to the opening celebration for the Our World playground from 3-5 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 16 at the playground, 100 Sohier St. Hopefully, the kids have been playing on the new facility behind the library and the Our World Museum for a few weeks already, but having some lemonade and balloons will make it all official!

That is all the news for this week. I have to ask that everyone Please follow the guidelines and submit all information by Mondays no later than 5 p.m. Otherwise, it will be placed in the following week's column.

THE MONTESSORI COMMUNITY SCHOOL IN SCITUATE HAS CHANGED ITS NAME TO INLY SCHOOL.

"Kids on my baseball team thought Montessori was for younger kids. Even though I think it will take awhile for kids to know what Inly is, it will be worth it."
—Bob Sommer, 4th grader

"The new name begs people to look again at something they think they already know. It also helps people understand we go way beyond pre-school, to Middle School. Inly prepares INspired, INdependent learners for the real world."
—Donna Milani Luther, Head of School

"I like the name change because it makes me want to look further and find out—'What is Inly?'"

Local Girl Scouts collect toys for needy kids

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Somehow in the imagination of a child, toys can become lifelike, acting as a best friend and constant companion during the day, and helping fight off closet monsters in the night. While the excitement felt on the day a new toy is received may fade as the years go by, for those truly special toys, the day itself will always be remembered.

Recognizing the important role toys play in the lives of children, the Girl Scouts in Troop 4784 have been working with Cradles to Crayons, a non-profit organization which provides toys and other items to children living in poverty in the Boston area. In the past year alone the organization has provided 4,200 children with holiday gifts and books, 1,000 children with warm winter coats, hats, and mittens, and 600 children with back-to-school backpacks, and the girls in Troop 4784 hope to significantly add to the list of donations received.

The five 12-year-old girls in the troop, including Melissa Campedelli, Jennie Curley, Polly Murray, Megan Richardson, and Jennifer Spofford, will be collecting new or "gently used," toys and books at St. Anthony's Church from 8:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. this Sunday, Sept. 19. The girls are quick to point out, only those toys that are truly gently used and still in really good condition will be passed on to the organization.

"You wouldn't want to get a toy that's all broken up," said Polly, adding the children that will receive the donated toys wouldn't want to either.

The project will be a culminating event for these girls, who have been working diligently on various projects which all lead up to their earning their Bronze Award for Girl Scouting. The award is the highest honor a Junior Girl Scout can achieve. When deciding on a final project to undertake, there were many ideas which were considered, but in the end, donating to Cradles to Crayons was undoubtedly the best choice.

The girls will be collecting new or "gently used," toys and books at St. Anthony's Church from 8:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. this Sunday, Sept. 19.

Polly said many of the girls in her troop have younger brothers and sisters which have outgrown toys, and they don't know what to do with them. By donating the toys to a good cause, other children will be able to have fun with them too. Megan said all the toys the girls themselves have outgrown can also be donated to the cause, not just those of their younger siblings.

To help get the word out to the rest of the community, Jennifer said the girls got together and made fliers to hang up in various locations around town. From store front windows, to the library, to Town Hall, bulletin boards sure to spread the word to many different people were covered.

Already, Jennie has received calls from St. Anthony's to let her know bags of donations have been dropped off. With items already pouring in before the actual day of collection, the girls are excited to see how much will be donated to the cause.

After all the donations are received, the girls, chaperoned by Troop leaders Liz Richardson and Lillian Curley, will take a trip to Quincy to deliver the items, and will go on a tour of the site, to help reinforce exactly what their donation means.

The five girls in Troop 4784 have been together as a troop for eight years, and while they have had different troop leaders over the years, the girls have continually stuck together. "They're best buds," said Lillian Curley. Once their project is complete, there will be paperwork to fill out, which will need to be approved by the Girl Scout Counsel, and once approved, the girls will be eligible to receive their Bronze Awards.

To achieve this level, the girls have had to earn two badges related to their planned Bronze Award project. In addition, they have also completed the "Sign of the Star," which is like a badge but more involved. They were also required to earn the Junior Aide Award, the Junior Girl Scout Leadership Award, or two other comparable badges. In order to earn the Bronze Award, the girls must demonstrate the leadership skills they have learned along the way, as well as a commitment to the community. The planning and project together should take roughly 15 hours to complete.

Cradles to Crayons accepts everyday items which are donated free of charge to babies and children up to age 12. While the girls will be accepting toys and books, the organization collects everything from cribs to high chairs and clothing items. For those making donations to Troop 4784, please note stuffed animals and cloth toys will not be accepted, nor will violent toys such as guns, or books with torn pages or writing.

The Girl Scouts in Troop 4784 will be collecting donations of new or like-new books and toys for Cradles to Crayons Sunday, Sept. 19 from 8:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. in the parking lot of St. Anthony's Church. Cradles to Crayons is a non-profit organization based out of Quincy. For more information on Cradles to Crayons, please visit their Web site at www.cradlestocrayons.org. To make a donation prior to Sunday, items will be accepted at St. Anthony's or at the individual Girl Scout homes. Please call Jennie Curley at (781) 383-0695, Megan Richardson at (781) 383-0998, Polly Murray at (781) 383-9444 or Jennifer Spofford at (781) 383-1680 with questions.

The quality and tradition of Dover Rug

Three generations ago the women of a small village in Pakistan began weaving rugs by hand from their homes. Their devotion to craft, their care, their eye for color and detail became a signature style of these rugs as they were exported and sold in the United States and Europe.

This was the beginning of what is now Dover Rug.

South Shore Art Center kicks off 50th year celebration to 6 p.m. The art center is located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

"The exhibition is part of an effort on our 50th anniversary to make the statement that we really are the South Shore Art Center – a resource for all 50 towns that are included in the South Shore region," said Hingham architect Vcevold ("Vcevy") Strekalovsky, who designed the building in which the art center is now located in 1987. "The art that is displayed is representative of as many of those communities as possible."

The exhibit name refers to the 50 communities that make up the South Shore, including Abington, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, Holbrook, Hull, Quincy, Hanover, Kingston, Rockland, Marshfield, Milton, and Scituate and as far away as Taunton, Bridgewater, Westwood, Raynham, New Bedford, Rochester, Brockton, Lakeville, and Easton. None of the artwork in the exhibit has been shown at the SSAC before, and it is all for sale.

Strekalovsky, a SSAC board member for many years, had two pieces selected for the show. One is of Hingham Harbor at sunset and low tide. "The scene spoke to me with some abstract quality," he said. "I tried to capture the light, space, color, and structure that I saw." The other is of the Isle au Haut in Maine.

Considering that both his father and grandfather were artists, it's not surprising that Strekalovsky grew up painting, primarily in water color. Now he mostly paints in oil. "I experienced that in high school and I never forgot the feel and smell of oil – to sculpt with paint as it were."

After not picking up a brush for a number of years, Strekalovsky began painting seriously again five years ago with John Kilroy at the North River Art Society. A number of artists in the workshops there are also involved with SSAC. "That experience brought me into contact with quite a large community of adult artists," he said. "To paint together is extremely rewarding. Artists learn from each other and feel a drive in spite of being tired from a day's work. We explore various thoughts and subjects together in the workshops."

"Whenever people refer to it as the Cohasset Art Center, I say, no, no, it's the South Shore Art Center. People come from near and far."

— Chris Rifkin, SSAC board member

The center's Manning Lobby features a 50th anniversary exhibit of historical photo montages assembled by Hingham resident Chris Rifkin, who has been a member of the SSAC board for more than 20 years. "So many people have been involved over the years that it's hard to recognize everyone for their contributions," she said. "People come and go, but we're like a big family. People stop by the office with their children to say hi and just to chat. The art center is a community resource where people can socialize and share a common interest in art and music. Good friendships are formed."

The "50 Towns/50 Years" exhibit celebrates five decades of "enriching communities south of Boston through art exhibitions and education," said Monica McKenney, SSAC director of development and public relations. "Artists from 50 towns were invited to submit their art. Thirty artists applied, but only 47 pieces were chosen for display. The process was very selective."

The exhibition includes works by Vcevy Strekalovsky, John Swanson, Janet Kingan, and Priscilla Seddon of Hingham; Monica Martinez of Abington; Stephanie Roberts of Pembroke; Marie Peters of Bryantville; Pam Golden of Marshfield; Paula M. Campbell and Ros Farbush of Hull; Paul Crimi of Hanover; James Baker and Nancy Sargent Howell of Scituate; Jake Basso, Pamela Bower, Philip Dolan, Heidi Ferguson, Ken Lindgren, and Jeanne McKenna of Norwell; Jane Flavell Collins of Duxbury; Tony Andrade and Mark Bieber of Quincy; Irma Cerese, Susan A. Hollis, and Ken Taylor of North Easton; Rob Millard-Mendez of South Easton; Anna Mogilevaky of Dedham; Virginia Holloway of Randolph; and Elizabeth Parker of New Bedford.

In October, nationally recognized artist Todd McKie will select work by national artists for an exhibition, "Remembrances of Things Past: The Last Fifty Years."

The art center offers classes and workshops for children and adults at all levels throughout the year and visiting artist workshops and educational outreach programs. There are also artist talks, lectures, concerts, artist potluck dinners, art auctions, and special events. The work of local artists is exhibited in the two galleries year-round. Visiting artists lead summer workshops attended by well-known artists and teachers from all over New England, providing a "nice cross-section of experiences," said Rifkin. Classes range from botanical drawing and photography to children's clay and life drawing classes.

"Anything involving clay is popular," she said. "The kilns are always firing." Monoprint classes are another favorite. She noted that it's not unusual for a board member who may never have drawn before to enroll in an art class.

SSAC also has an outreach program for students in several communities and provides exhibition opportunities and programs in which they can participate.

It's unfortunate, Strekalovsky said, that art is looked at as an "add-on" in many educational systems, "whereas in Asia and eastern Europe it's seen as an essential component of the learning process. In Hungary and Romania art is a basic part of the curriculum, strengthening students' ability to learn other disciplines, such as science and math. Art helps to develop the whole brain. It helps you think, organize, and problem solve and contributes to one's self-esteem."

STAFF PHOTO/BERT LANE

Artists from 50 towns were invited to submit their art. Thirty artists applied, but only 47 pieces were chosen for display. The process was very selective, according to Monica McKenney of the art center.

The primary mission of the art center is to provide educational and exhibition opportunities that enable SSAC members to show their work and cultivate an understanding and appreciation for art, Strekalovsky said. "There's no need to go to New York or Newbury Street to buy original art."

The SSAC also provides a chance for adults to rekindle an early interest in art that they may have never pursued. "Art is about learning to see, to solve problems, to design, to select, and to give expression to what we may not otherwise have an opportunity to express in our other side of life," he continued.

Rifkin noted that the art center has evolved over the years and "gets bigger and bigger, encompassing more communities. More people find it," she said. "Whenever people refer to it as the Cohasset Art Center, I say, no, no, it's the South Shore Art Center. People come from near and far."

SSAC is such a success that there's a need for more gallery and class room space. "The center is in constant use," Rifkin said. "It's bursting at the seams." To help relieve the crunch for space, the SSAC has developed some artist studio space on Government Island in Cohasset, which it rents to artists affiliated with the center.

But more classroom space is still needed. This has proved challenging in light of recent cuts in Massachusetts Cultural Council funding. "At some point we'll have to find more space," Rifkin said. "There are a lot of people who want to teach and others who want to be taught."

In the meantime, the annual festival, which is the major fund raiser for the art center, SEE ART CENTER, PAGE 9 continues to get "bigger and better," according to Rifkin. In addition to exhibits by local artists, the event has grown to include local craftspeople and a strawberry festival run by the Second Congregational Church. There's also a music stage and a children's activity tent. "The festival is a huge community effort involving many volunteers," she said.

Rifkin recalls the night she found her mother, Dottie Laney, outside during a wind storm holding down the tents so they wouldn't blow away. "We've gotten more professional since then," she said with a laugh.

The late Mary Alice Flynn of Scituate built up the gift shop. "She was such a wonderful volunteer," Rifkin said, "a sweetheart who knew everybody. We all miss her."

The shop is currently underutilized. "We have a wonderful space with no one to run it. If anyone with retail experience would like to give it a try, it would be a wonderful volunteer opportunity," she said.

The Center is looking forward to its next 50 years.

'Concept' has grown into 1,200-member organization

South Shore Art Center celebrates its 50th year

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The South Shore Art Center is bustling with activity.

The Center was founded in 1954 by a small group of artists who wanted a place to exhibit their art and exchange ideas.

SSAC now has 1,200 active members and features two spacious galleries, teaching studios, and a darkroom.

The concept for an art center developed following a festival on Cohasset Common in 1953 or 1954 during which local artists displayed their work on a clothesline.

SSAC opened in 1954 on Brook Street across from the then-Cohasset Savings Bank. The first classes included copper working, flower arranging, painting, drawing, and a number of craft classes. A photo from the Center's archives shows a woman sitting at a loom, obviously teaching a class.

Following a fire, the center moved to a space above the bank. SSAC board member Chris Rifkin of Hingham recalls her family moving to Cohasset in 1959. Her mother, artist Dottie Laney, now a Duxbury resident, immediately became involved with saving the art center, which had run out of money. "She said she didn't move to a town with an art center to have it close on her," Rifkin recalled with a smile. "My mother and others immediately jumped in and managed to save it."

In 1972, the Center moved into the "flat iron" building on Ripley Road, where stage sets were built for star-studded Cohasset theater performances in the 1920s. The spot is also the site of a former railroad station. "The ceilings were so low that the easels would scrape against them," Rifkin said.

Hingham architect Vcevold Strekalovsky designed the current art center building in 1986 on the shell of the former Tantillo's Auto Body Shop in Cohasset Center. He recalls how the site was chosen. Claffy Williams, a well-known Cohasset artist and president of the SSAC board at the time, and Strekalovsky had considered a number of sites in Cohasset and other towns without a decision.

Then one day he was sitting at the Strawberry Parfait and looking toward the former body shop when the thought came, "This is it! This is the place we'll build the new art center." The result was "an educational, social, and cultural center in what was not an active part of town at the time."

The building rose to two stories, extending out into the street. "We incorporated angular geometry to take advantage of the north light to create interesting flowing spaces with flexibility for teaching and exhibitions and to relate the building in a welcoming way to a main part of downtown Cohasset," said Strekalovsky.

Almost $1 million was raised to help pay for building the new center. The $330,000 mortgage was paid off within five years thanks to successful fund-raising efforts.

"We had a burn the mortgage ceremony, with the fire department standing by with a hose," Rifkin recalled.

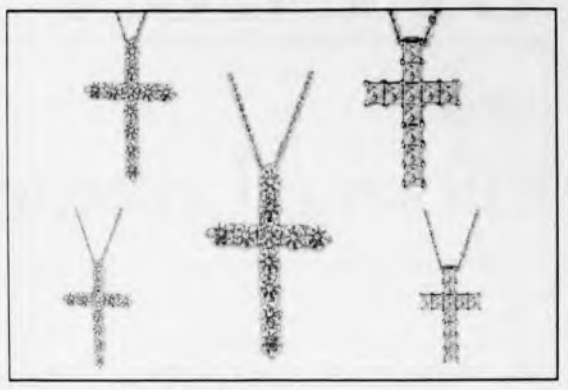
Lanci Valentine of Duxbury was the first director of the new center. Later Dillon Bustin served in that capacity and established a folk music and jazz connection. Sarah Hannan is the current director. "We've been lucky with our directors over the years," Rifkin said.

While digging through the SSAC archives recently in preparation for setting up historical photo montages for the upcoming "50 Towns/50 Years" exhibition celebrating the center's 50th anniversary, she discovered photographs, notes, and letters from previous directors. She used these to develop a timeline, with a panel for each decade, incorporating the SSAC logo and typeface of each period.

To help her in her research, Rifkin invited a number of people who had been involved with the center over many years to a luncheon. "I wanted to bring them together in the hopes of spurring their memories," she said. And it worked. "We had the best time. Out of that came the fact that at one time the Center's classrooms were located in an old Buick dealership on Ripley Road," said Rifkin, along with other interesting recollections.

At the same time, the Center had a gallery at the corner of South Main Street and Depot Court in a building that was once Ralph Harrison's Pharmacy, featuring a soda fountain where Rifkin enjoyed lemon and cherry cokes.

Tom Lucas, Rifkin's high school art teacher, had earlier founded the center with MacIvor Reddie. Because of her mother's close connection with SSAC, Rifkin grew up knowing most of the center's directors and board members.



Rifkin's father, Bob, and her mother took art classes at the center. He took up painting late in life and went on to win prizes at the SSAC Festival on the Common. His first work, a painting of a farm in Vermont, had been done in 1959 or 1960 while on vacation and was displayed at the art show then. "Somehow my father got into the local papers as Grandpa Moses," Rifkin said with a laugh. "After that, my father stopped painting for some reason, but took it up again when he was in his 70s by enrolling in a watercolor class at SSAC."

His wife began entering his work in the annual festival and he began winning first prizes. "We asked him if he would like to be a gallery artist, but he said, no, he didn't want to sell anything, that he would give his paintings away."

Rifkin, a stained glass artist, studied in the mid- to late-1970s at the Museum of Fine Arts School. Later, she became formally involved with the Center as a board member, and she oversaw the construction of the new building for a year because with her background, she was able to interpret the blueprints.

Informed voting

Before we start beating ourselves up over the low turnout Tuesday — let's be honest, for the most part only diehard voters, candidates' friends or family members, or their ardent supporters bothered to head to the polls this week.

Why? Without any races in "major" offices and no races at all on the Republican side there wasn't much motivation to cast a ballot.

But Nov. 2 is going to be an entirely different story. Presidential races alone can draw upwards of 80 percent of registered voters in our town.

While we encourage everyone to exercise their right to vote, we are not going to beat the bushes to get voters to come to the polls.

Voting is our right and the privilege we enjoy in a democratic society. But we strongly believe every vote cast should be an informed one. In this age of quick hits on the Internet and sound bites on TV and radio – many voters can be swayed by the cliché or catchy slogan they just heard rather than sound, analytical thought and reflection.

There are those who want to make voting easier with the hope of getting more citizens to participate.

We're old school. In our view, voting shouldn't be something you can do while waiting in the drive-through lane in a fast food restaurant. That's an exaggeration – but is not out of the realm of possibility in these times of making everything simpler for everyone.

With roughly six weeks before the election, we urge all our readers to pay attention to the candidates' message and stance on issues ranging from health care to the War on Terrorism. While the race between President George W. Bush and U.S. Sen. John Kerry tops the ballot – there will also be a race for U. S. Congress between incumbent Democrat William Delahunt and Republican Mike Jones, among other races – including Governor's Council. In the weeks ahead we plan to learn about that office.

Here in the United States we often take our rights for granted. Everyone has the right to vote but that includes the obligation to be informed. There's still time before Nov. 2 research the issues and decide which candidates deserve our vote.

We welcome your feedback on local races and specific issues you would like to see us address. We want to keep you informed about the issues you care about. We are political junkies and enjoy providing coverage throughout the campaigns. But we are only a resource when we are addressing issues readers are invested in.

REMEMBERING 9-11

Homestead exemption increase

Register William P. O'Donnell reported recently that legislation has been enacted to increase the Massachusetts homestead exemption amount from $300,000 to $500,000.

A Declaration of Homestead provides limited protection against creditor claims. An estate of homestead in real estate is established by filing a declaration at the Registry of Deeds with respect to a homeowner's principal residence. By exempting the value of the statutory amount (now to be increased to $500,000) from most unsecured creditor claims, the declaration helps protect possession for the benefit of the filer, spouse and dependent children.

"The effective date of the new statute is Oct. 26, 2004," O'Donnell continued, "but as of that date the increased benefit will apply to all previously filed homesteads, including those filed prior to enactment of the statute."

The complete text of the new law, Chapter 218 of the Acts of 2004, is available from the Norfolk Registry, or online at http://www.mass.gov/legis/bills/st00995.htm. Forms and additional information are available at the Norfolk Registry, online or by mail.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Police Chief praised for directing traffic

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was sent to Police Chief James Hussey with a copy to the Mariner.

You lead by example this morning (Wednesday), at the intersection of 3A and King Street near Forest Avenue, I was behind you as you pulled your cruiser over and stepped into the intersection at the height of commuter hour (8:10 a.m.) and directed traffic. A thoughtful response and a class gesture by a leader. In my 10 years in this town, I have never seen a police officer direct traffic on 3A during a bottleneck — only details a construction sites and traffic accidents.

Glad you are in Cohasset !

Medications and your well being

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The big news in the health industry is that the cost of health care is going up at double-digit rates, this rate is twice as much as anything else the government spends our money on (OMB web page). Since a big part of the Medicare budget is cost of drugs, the popular press, not to mention several highly respected studies and books point out that large pharmaceutical companies are using the system to extort unreasonably high prices for drugs from consumers. Moreover, according to several reliable medical authorities, the system of drug research does not provide sufficient emphasis on illnesses which affect the greater numbers of sick people, but rather on those which can be expected to glean the most profit, such as Viagra.

But these facts deal with numbers of dollars with too many zeros behind then to be real to most of us. We are more interested in our own medication cost and whether it's doing the most good for our dollar. Of course, younger age groups worry considerably less about medical costs than seniors, but even younger people are taking more medications for a wider variety of ills than ever before.

And with increased use comes increased risk as well as benefit. Several precautions are important if you are considering adding a medication to those you may already be using:

Before you use any medication, your health care provider should be told:

• If you have ever had an allergic reaction or unusual reaction to any medication, food, or additives. For example: penicillin, yellow dye or sulfites.

Several precautions are important if you are considering adding a medication to those you may already be using.

• If you are on a low salt, low sugar, or any other special diet. Most medications contain more than their active ingredient and many liquid medications contain alcohol.

• If you are pregnant or planning to become pregnant. Certain medications may cause birth defects or other problems in your unborn child. For other medications, safe use during pregnancy must be carefully considered and should be discussed with your health care provider.

• If you are breast feeding. Some medications may pass into the breast milk and cause unwanted effects in the baby.

• If you are now or have taken any medications in the past few weeks. Don't forget over the counter (non-prescription) medications such as pain relievers, antacids, cough / cold and laxatives.

• If you have any other medical problems other than the one(s) for which your medication was prescribed.

But it becomes even more important, and more expensive, as we get older and we increase our use of medications for added ailments. According to the American Society of Consulting Pharmacists, seniors take more medications than any other age group. Seniors between ages 65 and 69 have, on average, 13.6 prescriptions filled per year. Those between 80 and 84 years old have 18.2 prescriptions filled per year.

The physiological changes of aging can alter how a body processes and reacts to a certain medication. In the aging body, the liver and kidneys may not as easily metabolize medications. In addition, changes in the distribution of fat and muscle can make seniors more susceptible to adverse drug events.

Seniors have more chronic diseases and multiple conditions, so they use more prescription and over-the-counter drugs. More than 77 percent of seniors between the ages of 65 and 79 suffer from one or more chronic diseases. The number rises to 85 percent for those over age 80.

So, as you get older, it's important be careful about medication. Write down the name of each medication you take, the reason you take it, how you take it, and the form (tablet, capsule, liquid), color and shape of the medication. Write down side effects and any special instructions. List all prescription medications and all over-the counter medicines, including vitamins or other nutritional supplements, pain relievers, antacids, laxatives, and herbal remedies. Add new medicines when you start taking them. Give this list to all doctors you plan to see.

We are all paying a lot for our medications. It's up to each of us to get our money's worth.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Studying music makes you smarter!

COMMENTARY

JOAN JENSEN

It has been proven long ago that the study of music enhances one's mathematical ability, organizational skills and sociability.

It is a well known fact that successful people who reach fame and fortune generally have a musical instrument which they play for enjoyment. Howard Gardner, educator and researcher at Harvard University theorizes that one of the ways children learn is through a natural musical "sense". It has been proven long ago that the study of music enhances one's mathematical ability, organizational skills and sociability.

Music is an emotional outlet. How many times has someone sat down at a drum set and pounded out some anger, or wept while playing a nostalgic tune at the piano? Music has been used for years as a therapy for physical and psychological ailments. Dancing with a rhythmic piece helps coordination, and uplifts the soul.

This goes for adults too.

Adults who return to the piano (for example) after years away rediscover the joy (and challenge!) of playing tunes which are old friends. It's wonderful brain food. Good for the arthritis. Good fun.

More and more, it is becoming evident that music is a very important part of a child's education. It is valuable in and of itself, and can be used as a means to teach "readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic." Not to mention history, social studies, science...and it makes it all fun!

The best school systems have strong music programs. In Massachusetts for example, Concord-Carlisle, Wayland, Lincoln-Sudbury all have top-notch educational systems with students showing high achievement in tests in all subjects, going on to colleges and successful professions. These schools all have orchestras, with instrumental programs beginning in the early grades. These schools all have music classes straight through the grades, and especially the impressionable middle school years. The students learn to read music and to appreciate all types of music: rock, classical, jazz.

Students who play together in an orchestra or band or who sing together in a chorus, develop a sense of team work very much as in team sports, but in a less competitive spirit. In performing, they work out their own parts to create an intricate and complicated weaving of sound with other musicians. Their sense of self-worth is enhanced. They gain self-confidence and trust in others. They learn to respect each other.

And it's not like learning. It's playing.

And it makes you smarter.

Joan Jensen teaches piano and voice to students ages 7 to 97 in her home studio in Cohasset and is the music director at Old Ship Church in Hingham.

LIBRARY CORNER

Not too late!

All students who have completed their summer reading and have not yet picked up their tee shirt, should see Mrs. Moody beginning on Monday, Sept. 20. If you did not reach your personal goal or did not do the recording of the books, it still may not be too late for you. Come in and let's talk about it.

Thursday night at the movies

Thursday evening, Sept. 23, at 7 p.m. for the first independent film evening featuring "Long Life, Happiness and Prosperity." This film focuses on the story of Kin, a young divorced mother raising her 12-year-old daughter, Mindy. When Mindy sets her sights on finding her mother a new boyfriend by using ancient Chinese magic, the results are unexpected, hysterically funny and heart warming. Not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission. Free admission and refreshments!

Artist exhibit

Landscape paintings of Lisa Marder will be on display at the library from Sept. 10, until the end of October. There will be an opening reception for the exhibit on Sunday, Sept. 19, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Upcoming events

Authors Bernard Corbett and Paul Simpson will discuss their book "The Harvard/Yale Rivalry: The Only Game That Matters," on Thursday Nov. 4, at 7 p.m. in the library's Meeting Room. The event is sponsored by Buttonwood Books. Author Bill Nowlin will talk about his book on Ted Williams on Monday Nov. 8, at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room.

Joseph Godzik is appointed to lung association

"I am happy to bring my perspective and experience as a public health agent to the American Lung Association."

— Joseph Godzik, V.M.D, Cohasset Health Agent

The American Lung Association of Massachusetts (ALAM) announces that Joseph Godzik, V.M.D., a resident of Scituate and health agent in Cohasset, has been appointed to its new board of directors. The board was formed on July 1, 2004, upon the merger of the four regional offices into one statewide corporation, serving the people of Massachusetts from the Berkshires to Nantucket.

Godzik first became involved with the Lung Association in conjunction with his work as a health agent with the Cohasset Board of Health. A member of the former ALA of Greater Norfolk County's Board of Directors since 1984, he has been a true leader in the organization, serving as president and a member of the environmental, executive, financial review, nominating, and program committees. Godzik initiated the Walpole office's first membership campaign, Partners for Life and Breath, bringing new donors to the Association and raising over $75,000. He also brings his dedication and energy to the ALA's fundraising events, including the "Blow the Whistle on Asthma" walk. He will continue to serve the Association on both the fund-raising and program development committees.

Joseph Godzik is a doctor of veterinary medicine and retired from the U.S. Army Veterinary Corps after 21 years of service. In addition to his work with the ALA, he served as a board member of the former New England Public Health Association. He is also active in Saint Mary of the Nativity parish in Scituate as a member of the pastoral council as well as a lecturer and CCD teacher.

"We welcome Joseph and the new officers and members of the ALAM Board of Directors," says Stephen Clapp, interim president of the American Lung Association of Massachusetts. "Joseph is a truly amazing volunteer and brings to the board a strong commitment to our mission and a wealth of expertise that will ensure new opportunities for this organization to help more people in Massachusetts. We look forward to continuing the success of the Association by working together to prevent lung disease and promote lung health."

"I am happy to bring my perspective and experience as a public health agent to the American Lung Association," said Godzik. "I am wholeheartedly committed to the research and educational programs the organization provides for the people of Massachusetts."

The American Lung Association of Massachusetts is a non-profit, volunteer-driven health agency whose mission is to fight lung disease today and prevent lung disease tomorrow. The Association fights lung disease in Massachusetts through research, education, advocacy and community service. With the generous support of the public, the American Lung Association is Improving Life, One Breath at a Time.

Windsor Tea Shop hosts first event

The Windsor Tea Shop, slated to open its doors in the former ABB Optical site, located at 1 Pleasant Street in early October, is now taking reservations for its first theme tea. "A Victorian Christmas," tea, will be the first themed tea in a series, and will feature the renowned Donna and Ron Lasko of Osterville, who are well-versed in the customs of a true Victorian Christmas.

The tea will be held Sunday, Dec. 5 at 2 p.m., and will feature "courtship tea," a blend of black tea with the essence of ginger, which was formulated by Donna Lasko. Only 40 seats are available for the event, which will serve both tea and light luncheon fare, and the price per person is $35.

To make reservations, please call Judy McColgan at (781) 545-7100 prior to Oct. 1. For more information or new contact information after Oct. 1, please visit the Windsor Tea Shop Web site at www.windsorteashop.com.

Remembering Tea Pot Dome

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I used to have an editor named Frank Hart who was the consummate Democrat. When Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defined the word "Democrat," they put Frank's picture beside it. He was convinced the "R" behind the candidate's name stood for "reprobate."

This was in 1952 and when the occasional Republican strolled through our shop and engaged Frank in a discussion of the Eisenhower vs. Stevenson presidential race and backed him into a corner as they did occasionally, Frank would rear back and shout, "Oh, yeah! Remember Teapot Dome!"

My question is this: When is the 2004 Presidential Campaign going to start? The real one, I mean.

I thought of Frank and Teapot Dome last week as I watched, this time from afar, as the 2004 Presidential Campaign struggled to finish the war in Vietnam.

The Teapot Dome scandal, which was so long ago that even I have no firsthand recollection, involved the leasing of government reserves in Wyoming to oil companies, a deal for which several high-ranking Republicans in the Harding administration went to jail.

That was 30 years before the '52 election just as Vietnam was 30 years before the current one.

My question is this: When is the 2004 Presidential Campaign going to start? The real one, I mean. When will the inquiring minds who want to know — most of them in the media, I'm afraid — be satisfied that the war in Vietnam is over and there is not a damn thing we can do about it now?

Will we have to wait until we find out whether those Viet Congs were really shooting at the Swift Boats in the Mekong Delta that day in 1968 before W and Live Shot will let us in on what they have in mind for a national health care plan?

Whaddya bet one of the TV news channels has a team in Vietnam right now, looking up aging Viet Congs to ask them where they were on such-and-such a date and whether or not they were shooting. Film at 11, hopefully before Tuesday, Nov. 2.

I'm sure voters are waiting with bated breath to find out what George Bush was doing on those days when he was absent from his National Guard training post in Texas — or was it Alabama or someplace else. I gotta find out. So much depends on it.

Some extreme Democrats have gone so far as to note that if George was AWOL from his post for more than 30 days he would have been what the armed forces called a deserter and how would you like a deserter to be commander-in-chief while there's a war in Iraq?

And some extreme Republicans have accused John Kerry of giving aid and comfort to the enemy in his anti-war remarks to Congress after his tour of duty on the Mekong. That's called treason, which used to be a hanging offense, along with desertion.

So this may be an historic election in more ways than one. When was the last time a "deserter" ran against a "traitor" for president of the United States?

Local aid gets $75M boost in supplemental budget

AMY LAMBIASO

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

In an election year, every penny counts. After spending weeks waiting for the $649 million supplemental budget to hit their desks, lawmakers had the bill to Gov. Mitt Romney by 8 p.m. last Thursday (Sept. 9) — less than three hours after it was released, chock full of earmarks for local projects and policy changes important to their districts, and their reelection efforts. And with 183 outside sections and a $75 million local aid distribution, it's likely lawmakers won't be afraid to let the voters know how much better off they'll be thanks to the budget bill's passage. The one-time local aid boost, especially, will play high in an election year where local officials, teachers, police and fire personnel are anxious to add back what was taken away during the last three years of budget cuts.

Lawmakers throughout the week said they couldn't talk about the bill because it hadn't been agreed to, but in the days and hours before its release they couldn't resist touting the local aid hike. Senate leaders gave members an extra day to spread the good local aid news to their districts, and the local media. Republicans were ready and waiting to give their stamp of approval to the bill, pronouncing early in the week that they were backing the agreement — even before there was an agreement. The day after returning from a long Labor Day weekend, Senate Minority Leader Brian Lees called the package "very positive" and signaled that there would be good news for cities and towns. Lees had promised earlier in the year to push for inclusion of an income tax cut in the bill, but this week said that will have to wait 'til next year.

The ranking Republican on the Senate Ways and Means Committee followed suit the next day, saying he was prepared to support the bill "because it has additional money for cities and towns," said Sen. Richard Tisei, R-Wakefield. Republicans also said the local aid boost was Gov. Mitt Romney's idea first. "The governor had this first, with $100 million," said House Minority Leader Bradley Jones, R-North Reading. "But if anyone with a primary race wants to get a bang out of this — it's got to be done now." Local leaders acknowledged the political angle to the policy of increasing local aid. Geoffrey Beckwith, a former legislator who now heads the Massachusetts Municipal Association, attributed both politics and policies to the decision to include the money.

The strangest thing about the bill was the way it was advertised. For weeks, lawmakers insisted the bill would be a simple and boring bill-paying exercise. And even when the bill's details were finally unveiled, lawmakers barely acknowledged what was plain to see — scores of projects that government critics sometimes call pork. Lawmakers passed on an opportunity to talk about the importance of those projects. Somehow, though, they may find a way to let voters know about the "bacon" before the election.

The supplemental spending package included much more than the $75 million in additional one-time unrestricted local aid. Other spending initiatives included: $11.9 million for substance abuse treatment spending; $32 million for higher education contractual obligations; $3.3 million to launch two additional MCAS exam this spring in science and history; $1 million for a GPS system to track sex offenders; $16.8 million to raise the hourly pay rates of court-appointed defense attorneys; $15 million to hospitals for Medicaid payments; $21.6 million for charter schools; $2 million for a State Police crime lab feasibility and cost study.

• 80 percent of students pass MCAS on first try — Four out of five students in last year's 10th grade class passed both the English and math sections of the MCAS exam on their first try, the state reported. The results mark the highest first try-pass rate on the state exam required to graduate, after 69 percent of the class of 2004 and 75 percent of the 2005 class passed the exam on their first attempt. Gov. Romney and Education Commissioner touted the results, but called for a greater focus on reducing the racial achievement gaps.

• Health care, education top Romney's fall agenda — Nearing the mid-point of his four-year term, Gov. Mitt Romney announced he plans to reform the state's delivery of health care and method for funding education. Actual plans were not announced but, Romney said, will be part of his big fall agenda. The issues are not new to the governor, who proposed a revised Chapter 70 formula and delegated the responsibility of devising a way to expand health care access in the state to Health and Human Secretary Ronald Preston almost immediately upon entering office.

• Advocate for the poor loses battle with pancreatic cancer — Beacon Hill's longtime advocate for health and human services, Stephen Collins, died Sept. 6 after a battle with pancreatic cancer. Collins, 51, announced his illness after resigning from the non-profit organization in May. He led the group for five years, pushing consistently to save programs as the state faced its worst budget crisis in years. Collins first joined the coalition in 1990, after first entering the human services field in 1977 with the Cambridge Guidance Center.

• US Rep. Meehan: I'm likely running for senate and I've got lots of $$$ — Talking with State House reporters this week, US Rep. Martin Meehan confirmed that he will seek to sit where the Bay State's junior senator currently sits, should Sen. John Kerry move to the Oval Office. Records show that Meehan has raised $600,000 since July 1, and currently boasts a $4 million war chest, more than his likely competitors. He said he needs $10 million to run a successful campaign.

ities with the experience," there is a chance the committee could be "blown away," by someone they didn't expect. However, Flynn said while the committee has its ideas of what a prime candidate should be like, the board is the client, and the committee needs more information on what the board would like to see, to be sure it can do its job properly of finding an appropriate candidate.

Search Committee member Sam Pease said what the board needs to do is come up with a "best athlete" profile, which can outline the person who would perfectly fill the position, possessing every quality the board is looking for. "What kind of person would fit the bill?" Pease asked.

Sullivan said ideally, "We'd like to have someone with all of Ralph's attributes who can hit the ground running," and joked, "There you go guys."

Dormitzer said having a completely municipal background may not be necessary, but relevant experience is a must. But Flynn said the private sector "Is a very different animal," from municipal government, and bringing in someone without the adequate municipal experience could, "set somebody up for some difficulties or frustration."

Sullivan agreed and said, "I can see someone coming in and saying, 'You've got to be kidding me,' because there are so many restrictions."

But Pease said should, "Mr. or Ms. Superstar," come out of the woodwork, he doesn't want to see them pushed aside because they have no municipal experience.

"I think that's why we asked for five candidates," said McMorris.

Sullivan said other qualities the board would like to see in potential candidates are strong written and verbal skills, as they will have to deal with people in and outside of town, from students to state departments to senior citizens. "The issues and pressure points are endless," he said. Someone who is able to see the big picture is also a must, while it is also important to be able to identify the smaller problems people face daily, and work with them to come to a solution. The candidate should have good public speaking skills as well as good budgeting skills, financial and project management skills. The person must also be able to juggle many things at once.

Flynn said because there is a new police chief and a new superintendent, the new Town Manager will be given the opportunity to serve as a consensus builder among leaders of different organizations around town which are also experiencing change. "This is an awesome opportunity for the town to put a new team together and move forward together with one vision," he said.

Pease asked what the new Town Manager have accomplished by this time next year to be considered successful, and Koed said if there is a sense everyone is working together and differences aren't "popping up for whatever reason," the manager will be doing his or her job. Flynn said everyone should feel they have been listened to and treated fairly, "Even if they didn't get what they wanted."

The committee will continue to look over the applicants and will narrow down the field to present five finalists to the Board of Selectmen. Member Joe DeVito, who is also the Town Treasurer and Tax Collector, said he has been doing some proactive searching on his own in the meantime. He said he spoke with a friend who is a former personnel director, and she has sent roughly 14 e-mails out to current Assistant Town Managers and Town Managers to let them know there is an opening in Cohasset. He said he is also in the process of getting an e-mail list to send more correspondence out to municipal employees that could be interested in the job.

The committee may begin looking at interviewing third party search firms, which will be a backup only in the event all 47 applicants are rejected. A Sept. 28 deadline has been set for résumés.

The new Town Manager would replace Mark Haddad who abruptly resigned in May. Michael Buckley, the town finance director, has been serving as acting Town Manager. Buckley says he is not interested in the permanent position.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Hingham Journal. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE, BHRC records local representatives and senators' votes on three roll calls from July sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$189,041 FOR COMMUNITY ACCESS TO COURTS PROGRAM (H 4850)

House 112-44, Senate 32-5, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $189,041 in funding for a Suffolk County community access program to assist low-income residents who experience educational and language barriers when dealing with probate and family court. Override supporters said this program goes into neighborhoods to educate residents about this court that deals with divorce, paternity, wills, estates and other issues in these residents' lives. They argued that this is an invaluable program for these people who would otherwise have face major barriers in dealing with the court. Some override opponents said the state simply cannot fund this program during these difficult economic times. Others argued that it is unfair that only Boston's "politically-wired" Suffolk County has this program when other counties could also benefit from a similar program. (A "Yea" vote is for the $189,041. A "Nay" vote is against the $189,041).

$2 MILLION FOR WIRELESS LEARNING PROGRAM (H 4850)

House 130-25, Senate 32-6, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $2 million in funding for grants for a pilot wireless learning program. The $2 million must be matched by at least $4 million in matching funds from other public or private entities. Override supporters said this innovative program would allow students and teachers to be trained in and work with this cutting edge wireless technology. They noted that this could lead to expansion of the program throughout the state and argued that the benefit to students would be invaluable. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the funding because the program was not recommended. (A "Yea" vote is for the $2 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $2 million).

SOCIAL SERVICE PROVIDERS AND STATE MANDATES (H 4850)

House 155-0, Senate 33-5, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget provision requiring the state to negotiate an amended agreement with social service providers when a new rule or law mandated by the state government or the courts has an adverse financial impact on the provider. The amended agreement would have to offset the increased cost to the provider. Override supporters said it is unfair when these providers sign a contract with the state for services or supplies and then lose money later when a new state mandate increases their costs. In his veto message, the governor said the new requirement would create a substantial burden on state agencies and increase the cost of the delivery of these services. (A "Yea" vote is for requiring the state to negotiate an amended agreement. A "Nay" vote is against requiring the state to negotiate an amended agreement).

Planning bus routes not an exact science

Some runs reworked due to over crowding

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The first week of school can be a fly-by-the-seat-of-your-pants operation, because no one ever knows quite what to expect. This year, even with schools housing different grade levels than they had before, new staff roaming the halls, and a new superintendent to oversee it all, things went off relatively without a hitch.

With the exception of tweaking some busing routes, Supt. Denise Walsh said everything went according to plan. "You kind of hold your breath day one," she said, but added she has received nothing but positive feedback.

With the middle-high school taking on the sixth grade this year, there is an extra grade of students which needs to be figured into the school's existing bus routes. In light of the changes, some buses ended up carrying more students than they should have been. Fortunately, Transportation Coordinator Peggy Litchfield was able to reorganize the bus routes and add an additional run, which should alleviate some of the over-crowding.

"Last year went exceedingly well," said Litchfield, in terms of bus runs being completed according to plan at the start of the year. However, Litchfield said this year, she was not as happy. One bus leaving the middle-high school at the end of the day that first week had around 60 children on it when legally, it was only allowed to have roughly 40. Buses are only allowed to carry three children per seat.

"When she was leaving, she really knew she was over (capacity)," said Litchfield of the driver. However, the driver was told to go ahead and begin her route by someone at the school, and she did. However, Litchfield said if a bus is ever over capacity, the driver should immediately turn off the bus and get in touch with her, which is what will be done in the future should a similar situation ever occur. "Everyone got home safely, but this is not a scenario I anticipate will be repeated," said Litchfield.

The over-crowding happened as a result of not only having more children riding the buses, but many of the new students all live in the same area of town. Litchfield said in the Forest Avenue section of town, there is a large contingent of sixth graders, and they have all been added to the middle-high school runs, where they previously would have been attending Deer Hill. There may have been children who were dropped off in the morning by parents and decided to take the bus home in the afternoon, and therefore the problem was only noticed at the end of the school day.

The athletic season is not yet in full swing, but once it is, there could be less students riding the buses in the afternoons when they stay after at school. Litchfield said she was able to pull in a spare bus to help with the routes for now, and said that bus will continue to service students for as long as it is needed. "If it means we run it for the rest of the year, we will," she said.

Other areas of town were able to solve the problem of potential crowding prior to the start of school. Litchfield said she noticed over the summer that a large number of kindergarten students were going to need to be picked up in the Hillside area of town, and an additional bus run would need to be scheduled. A substitute driver was able to come on board, and the problem was solved before it began.

School Committee member Jamie Williams complimented Litchfield on her ability to turn the problems around so quickly, but Litchfield is quick to point out the only way the changes were able to happen is because she has such a wonderful crew. "There is tons of consistency," said Litchfield, as some of her drivers have been working in Cohasset for roughly 20 years, which helps when any transition is needed. "We should be very proud of them."

SCHOOL BRIEFS

School bus reminders

With the school year off to a great start, Transportation Coordinator Peggy Litchfield said to keep things going well, it is important for parents to remind their students, no matter what age, that they cannot cross the street to get on the bus until the red lights are on, the stop sign is out, and they have been given the OK from their bus driver. She said from where they sit, the bus drivers are able to see the whole picture, and can potentially see cars coming that children might not be able to see from where they stand, and for safety's sake, children may not cross the street until told to do so.

New school bus and van

After months of waiting, the schools have received a new brand school bus, which should be up and running this week. The bus needs to be registered, and have various tests including emissions, before it is allowed on the road, and Transportation Coordinator Peggy Litchfield said it shouldn't be long before all safety checks are complete and the bus is ready to roll.

The bus was purchased with funds voted on at the annual Town Meeting, as was a special needs van, which is also on its way to Cohasset. Litchfield special-ordered the van to be painted the same color yellow as the school buses, and have the same lighting system as well. Most vans are painted white and Litchfield said it makes it hard for motorists to recognize it is transporting students to school. However, the yellow color of the van coupled with a special-order lighting system which will shine amber and turn to red as the stop arm extends on the van, there will be no mistaking the van for anything other than a school transportation vehicle.

MCAS scores

Although they have not yet been publicly released, Supt. Denise Walsh said the Cohasset schools have received their MCAS scores, and it is earlier than they have ever been received before. "We're very pleased with grade 10," said Walsh, adding there has been a significant improvement in scores. Walsh said the scores will most likely be released at the next School Committee meeting, Thursday, Sept. 23.

Schools apply for grants

Supt. Denise Walsh said the Cohasset public schools have applied for supplemental financial assistance from the FY05 foundation reserve program. Any local or regional school districts which have experienced a reduction in chapter 70 aid are eligible. A grand total of $6,870,000 has been approved by the Legislature to be divided among qualifying communities. Grant awards are expected to be announced by Oct. 15.

PSO calendars are available

Cohasset PSO calendars are complete and have been mailed out to homes around town. For those who did not receive a calendar, extras will be made available at all three Cohasset schools, and can be picked up any time.

No parking, standing on Old Pasture Road

A reminder for parents picking up children after school. There is no parking or standing at Old Pasture Road. At the close of school, there is a walking and biking path that many students use, and it becomes dangerous when there are cars coming and going. There is a sign designating the area as a no parking zone which can be enforced if necessary.

Schools say energy upgrades can add up to annual savings

Lights, sensors to help conserve

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Paying for the cost of energy has been an expensive endeavor for the schools, causing waves during last year's budget season, and anticipated waves for this year's as well. However, schools financial assistant Karen Park, at the direction of the School Committee, has begun looking into ways to cut energy usage, which could lead to long-term savings for the schools.

Park, along with a representative from Energy Conservation Inc, based out of Hanson, walked the three schools, making note of the energy being used and any conservation measures that are already being taken. The School Committee said it will ask the School Building Facilities Committee if there is any money left over from the school construction budget to help with the costs of the proposed upgrades.

Park said Energy Conservation, which works directly with Mass Electric, recommended purchasing 112 new ceiling mounts with dual technology occupancy sensors to be installed in the middle-high school at various locations. In addition, it is recommended that the middle-high school also purchase 15 new wall switch occupancy sensors to be installed throughout the building. These changes would allow the lights to become motion activated, and would turn off when no one is in the room.

In the middle-high school gymnasium, the company suggests purchasing 39 new four-lamp T5HO High Bay Fluorescent lights with occupancy sensors, which would allow the lights to turn off automatically when no one is using the gym. The total cost to purchase the new fixtures for the middle-high school would be roughly $61,000. However, the company estimates making the changes will result in an annual cost savings of $11,000.

At Deer Hill, Energy Conservation is suggesting purchasing 48 new ceiling mounts with dual technology occupancy sensors to be installed throughout the building as well as 20 new wall switch occupancy sensors, which would control the lights to come on only when they detect motion. The company suggests purchasing 18 new four-lamp T5HO High Bay Fluorescent lights with an occupancy sensor for the Deer Hill gymnasium as well. The total estimated cost for improvements at Deer Hill is roughly $28,000, but the company estimates there would be a yearly cost savings of roughly $5,200.

The Osgood School is already equipped with motion-sensor switches in every classroom, but the company suggested purchasing 14 new four-lamp T5HO High Bay Fluorescent lights with occupancy sensors. The lights would cost the school roughly $7,000, but it is estimated there will be an annual savings of $1,000.

If the changes are implemented, the total cost to the town would be roughly $96,000. However, the town would save a little more than $17,000 annually. With a Mass Electric rebate of roughly $27,000, the schools would pay roughly $69,000 for the upgrade, which would mean the schools can recoup what was spent through the savings they are expected to receive in a matter of four years.

If the changes are implemented, the total cost would be roughly $96,000. However, the town would save a little more than $17,000 annually.

"This is great," said School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy, a former member of the School Building Committee. "It's nice to see something that can bring significant savings."

The schools currently have some energy conservation measures in place, which has led to rebates from the electric company. However, additional savings is greatly needed as this year's budget season is about to begin.

As the schools began closing out the 2004 fiscal year, there were a number of bills that came in which were more than had been anticipated. While $14,000 had been budgeted for electricity, the final bill came in at$22,000. Fortunately, that cost was able to be covered by money in the existing budget, but other costs could not be financed as easily.

A $90,000 Keyspan gas bill came in around the end of April or beginning of May, and because the schools only recently began using gas instead of oil to heat the schools, there were no previous figures to go on, and the estimates given by Keyspan were much lower than what the meter readings actually read. Paying that cost will require voters at Town Meeting to approve it as an unpaid bill for the town.

Buttonwood hosts Brian Jacques at 4 p.m. today!

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Rte. 3A in Cohasset, will host New York Times best-selling author Brian Jacques on Thursday, Sept. 16, from 4-5:30 p.m. at Cohasset store. Mr. Jacques will be making eight stops on his New England tour and Buttonwood is honored to be one of those chosen.

Mr. Jacques is the author of the award winning epic series "Redwall". He will be discussing his latest book, "Rakkety Tam" (Philomel, $23.99), which introduces two wonderful new adversaries, the brave and strong Rakkety Tam MacBurl and the evil and sinister Gulo the Savage. Gulo, together with his horde of white-furred vermin, arrives on the borders of Redwall Forest on a quest to kill his brother and retrieve the powerful Walking Stone, the all-important symbol of power. The rescue of Redwall Abbey lies in the hands (or paws!) of two impressive squirrels, Rakkety Tam MacBurl and his mate Wild Doogy Plumm and assisted by the Hares from the Long Patrol.

This is a free event and the public is welcome.

KoKo Island renovation plans back on the table

Family-style eatery floated

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Discussions are far from over regarding proposed changes to the KoKo Island and Hair Affair site, located on Route 3A. Michael Tack of the Nauset Group, the company looking to re-vamp the site to include a family style restaurant and Dunkin' Donuts, said when he comes back before the Planning Board Sept. 22, he will have a new, revised set of plans, which incorporates the concerns expressed by both abutters and the board itself, in the safest manner possible.

"The process has been very good," said Tack, adding there has been a lot of good input during meetings from both the board and abutters. He said what makes a good town is good zoning, and he said everyone has been working together to make sure the site plan makes sense for the town and what it would like to accomplish.

Roughly 15 Fairoaks Lane residents came to the Planning Board's public hearing when the plans were first unveiled for the site. At that point, developers discussed the possibility of renovating and conjoining KoKo Island and Hair Affair, turning the former into a family-style restaurant with a sports bar and the latter into a donut shop with a drive-up window. Fairoaks Lane is off of Sohier Street and abuts the 3A site to the east, directly behind the property.

Abutters were mainly concerned with the prospect of the drive-up window causing excessive traffic, noise pollution, and air pollution in an already crowded area. In addition, there are already two other Dunkin' Donuts shops on 3A, within close proximity to the new proposed site. Tack said the plans were drawn under the assumption that the Dunkin' Donuts currently located in the Stop & Shop plaza will move into his site.

Tack said the proposed Dunkin' Donuts would most likely hold the same hours of operation as other chains, which is 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Abutters said they were concerned about the potential noise the speaker at the drive-up window could generate, as early risers may have to raise their voices to make their early morning orders, and that noise would carry into earshot of abutters' homes. Tack said the option of looking into only having window orders for a certain timeframe in the morning, which would cut back on the noise, could be considered. Abutters were also concerned with the potential fumes idling cars would emit.

The majority of abutters in attendance said if renovation plans did not include a drive-thru, they would not be concerned with the proposed changes to the site. Many agreed the site is in need of a facelift, which they are not opposed to. However, Tack said the plans for the site have been designed around the premise that a drive-thru window will be part of the renovations.

In addition, a sports bar which serves alcohol made abutters a little leery of the project, but Tack said now, that aspect of the plans has been changed. As a compromise, Tack said new plans feature a family style restaurant which would be geared toward casual family-style dining, which does not have a bar. The restaurant would close between 10 and 10:30 p.m., where a sports bar would be open much later. The restaurant would not be open for breakfast, which would assure it would not be adding to any morning traffic at the drive-thru. While there are still a few prospects regarding what the actual restaurant chain will be, Tack said the new restaurant could potentially continue serving Asian cuisine, as KoKo Island currently does.

Route 3A is already very traffic heavy, but Tack said he and his partners have spent the last month and a half revising and re-planning the site keeping traffic in mind. "Our number one concern is safety," said Tack, for both customers and abutters to the site.

Planning Board members were concerned that while plans suggested roughly 17 cars could be accommodated in drive-up line, there would be no way of telling what might happen if on the busiest day of the year, more than 17 cars want to get in line. Without a traffic light to help provide a break in traffic, exiting from the site could be problematic. Members said currently, traffic prevents easy access onto 3A in either direction from Sohier Street, which is closer to the light at Stop and Shop than the KoKo Island site, and a coffee shop which generates a good deal of traffic during the commute would potentially cause a traffic disaster. Members said cars are more than likely going to have to wait when exiting, and any more than three cars in the left turn exit lane would cause a back up into the coffee line.

Tack said those concerns have been taken into consideration and have been incorporated into the plans, and in the end, he said they have come up with a plan that could provide the safest traffic pattern on all of 3A. "We really do think this is the best redevelopment of the site," he said.

The proposed changes to the KoKo Island site will be taken up again at the Sept. 22 Planning Board meeting. The meeting will take place in the basement meeting room at Town Hall, and will begin at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

Field hockey team drops two, but better things on the horizon

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

With an intensity that might rival Hurricane Ivan, the Hanover Indians field hockey team blasted past its visiting Cohasset rival on Sept. 9. At the final whistle, Cohasset fell by a numbing score of 9-1.

"We are a very inexperienced team," stated Coach Bostwick. "The players know the basics and remain very coachable. Yet, they simply do not have experience at the varsity playing level."

Only three varsity players returned to play this fall.

"We have to move faster on the playing field," said junior Erin Liddell, voicing her frustration. "We need to help each other out more than focus on our individual playing."

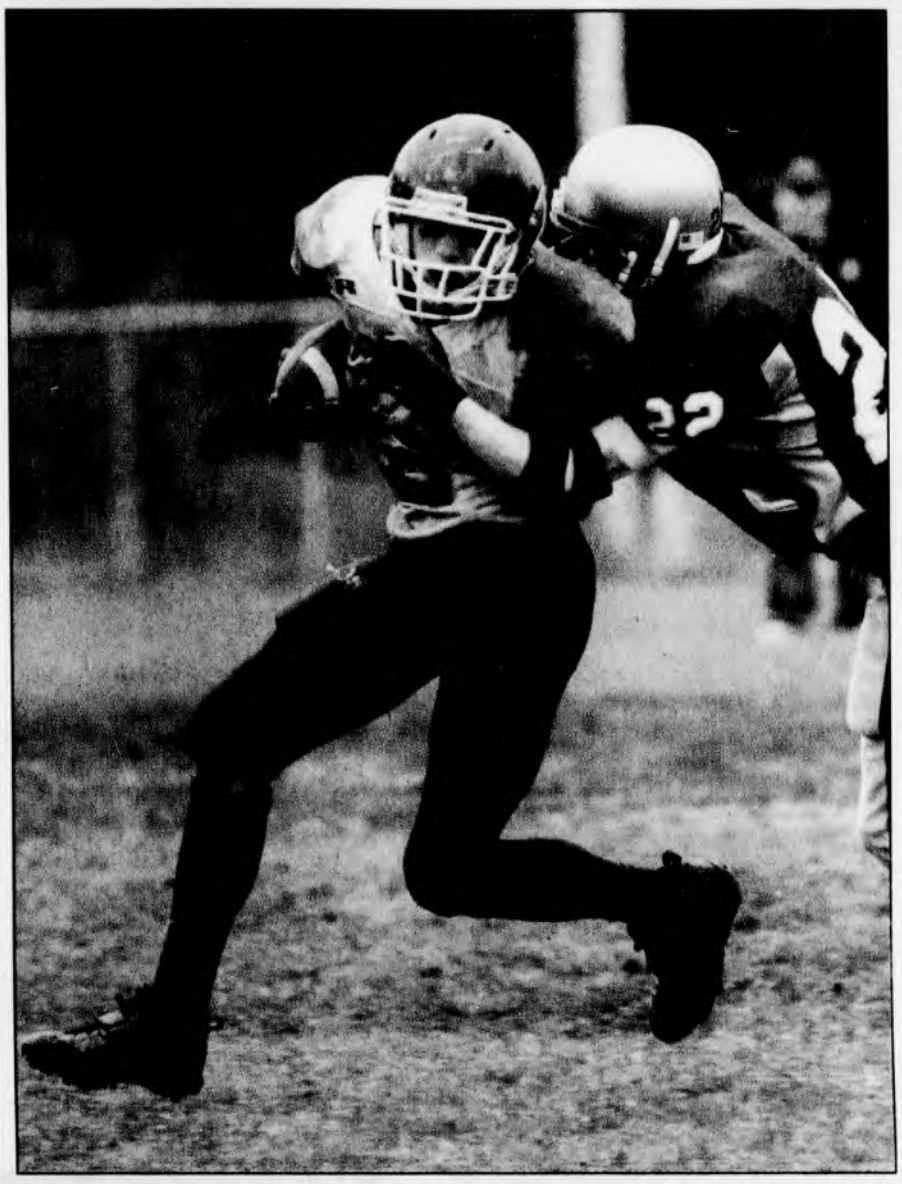
The one bright spot in the showdown with Hanover came on a nice goal by Brooke Allen. In a cross from Christie Muir to Katie James, James took the ball down most of the field and fired over to Allen for the score. Otherwise, the situation looked pretty bleak.

Goalie Aaron Bigley turned back 18 out of 27 shots on goal, a sure sign the defensive side of the team needs more work.

The very next day, Cohasset hosted the Cougars of Notre Dame Academy. In a chilly evening match-up, the Cougars clawed their way to a decisive 4-0 shutout.

"The girls were really down on themselves from the night before," offered Coach Bostwick. "The Hanover game took the wind out of our sails."

Junior sweeper Vanessa Plante made a very honest observation.



"We just weren't pumped for the game," said Plante. "But we can definitely bounce back. I am not worried."

There may indeed be brighter skies ahead.

Neither Coach Deb Bostwick nor her players seems too worried about the season. Deb feels that once she can find a team that can work well together, the season will be completely different than the current state of the team.

Looking farther down the road, the Skippers will make their first league debut this week in Carver. Unfortunately for the Skippers, next week they'll find themselves face to face

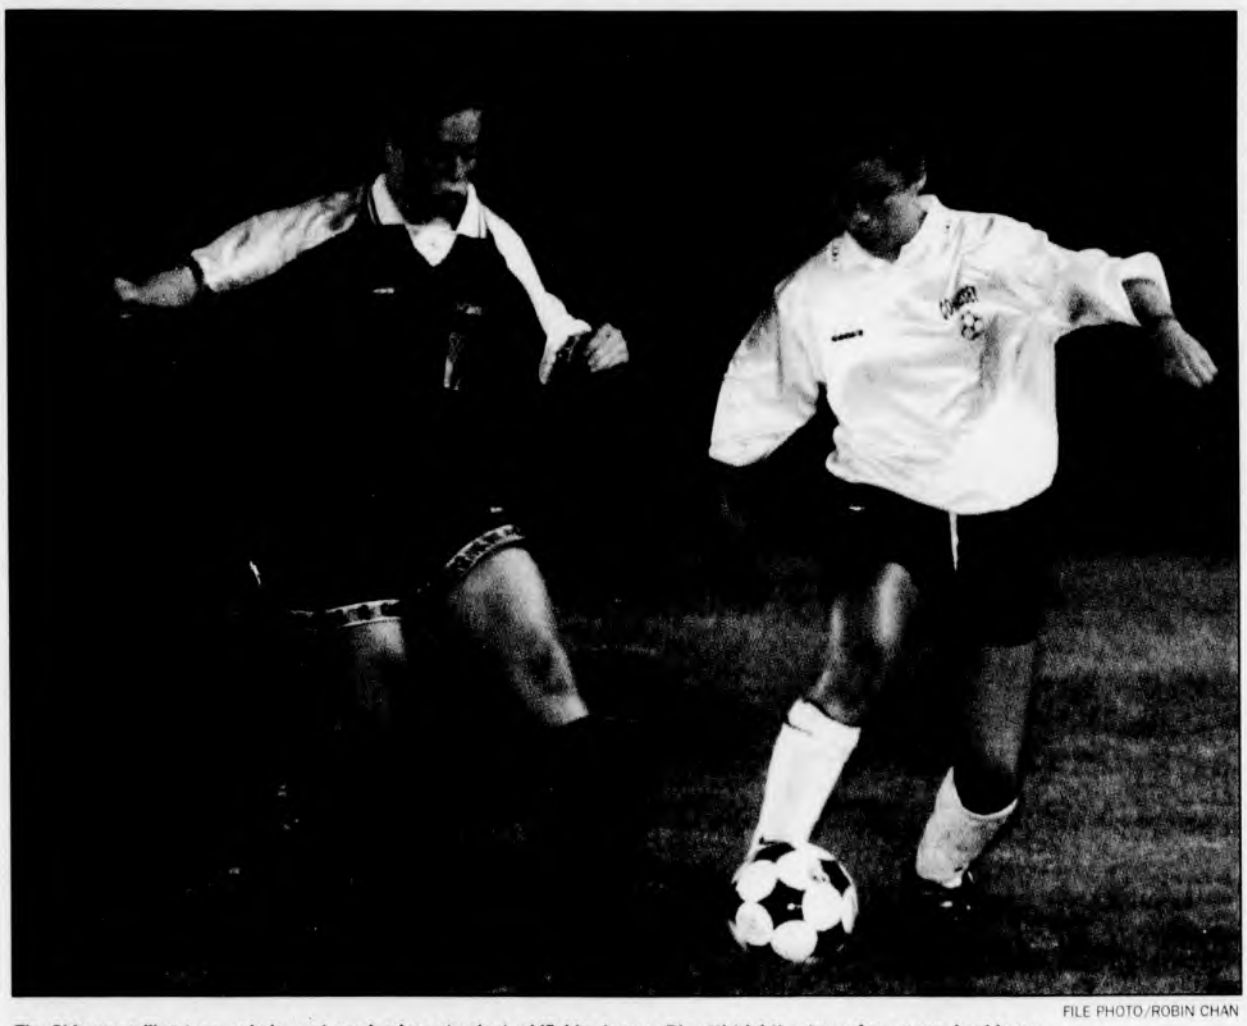
Skippers harpoon Whalers

CHS defense, Durkin the difference in grid battle at Nantucket

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM



It probably shouldn't come as all that great a surprise that Cohasset's defense was the story of Saturday's season opening 12-0 win on the Nantucket High gridiron.

After all, the Skippers returned eight of 11 starters to a defensive unit that was the stingiest last season among all Div. 5 teams in Eastern Massachusetts.

The host Whalers were held to just five first downs, none on the same possession, and completed just three passes, but two of those for negative yards.

That, combined with a break out day offensively from senior captain Joe Durkin, was more than enough to get the Skippers off to a 1-0 start. Durkin, a part time wingback a year ago, moved into the starting tailback spot and rushed for 117 yards on 23 carries and scored two touchdowns, one on the ground, the other on a 34-yard pass play.

A tie that binds

Girls soccer team not happy with Mashpee deadlock

By Mike Spellman
SPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The contrast was striking.

There were lots of cheers, smiles and high fives from the members of the Mashpee girls soccer team as they headed off the Cohasset High field and back to their bus with a 1-1 tie.

On the opposite sideline, not even a grin was to be found. The Lady Skippers knew this was one they let get away, and now they can only hope it won't come back to bite them in the long run.

The hosts definitely had the better of the play and created more quality scoring chances, but only sophomore Lindsay Durkin was able to slip it past the Mashpee keeper, that coming with 8:20 to go in the first half.

Mashpee would eventually counter, putting one past junior keeper Melissa Crowley-Buck, and that would be it for the scoring.

"No matter how many opportunities we had, we could not put the ball in the net," said Skippers coach Deb Beal a few days removed from the disheartening outcome. "It was frustrating and discouraging. I give the girls credit, though; they never quit."

Choosing to dwell on the positives, the veteran coach pushed the opinion that Friday's loss had the potential to make her team stronger.

"Mashpee forced us to play kick and run and we couldn't get out of it," she said. "I think we learned some lessons that day and we had two good days of practice to work out the kinks. I think we're ready for the weeks ahead. I am seeing the girls make much better tactical movements on the field during games and especially during practice."

Beal has been at this long enough, though, to know not to get too carried away with what she's seeign in practice.

"Practice is easy," she conceded. "The pressure is low and their minds work better. Game situations are stressful and they tend to move impulsively and not off of one another. We spent a lot of time these past two days working with each other on our skills as opposed to improving our own individual skills.

"We did a lot of moving to open space and working in smaller tighter situations. They are learning if they can keep their eyes up, they can see more."

Of course, it hasn't helped that the injury bug has started biting.

"Some pre season aches and pains are flaring up," reported Beal. "Better now, though, than later in the season."

Standout midfielder Lauren Rizzotti sat out the Mashpee game with a sprained knee, but Beal said she expects her back early next week.

Senior keeper Cecelia Chapman jammed her thumb

Boys need to kick up effort

Sloppy soccer team lucky to be at .500

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Save for two and a half minutes of play this season from his Cohasset High boys soccer team, Rob Leary has not been a happy coach.

"We're just not playing good soccer right now," said the Skippers second year head coach. "Our defense as a team has been horrendous. And that's not just the guys in back I'm talking about. Our midfielders and forwards are diving right in and not listening. They're not playing smart."

All things considered, the Skippers certainly appear fortunate to enter this week of play with a 1-1 record. It is the aforementioned stretch of 2:30 that's responsible for the win. The Skippers scored three times in the game's opening 150 seconds at Mashpee on Friday, and then barely hung on for a 4-2 win.

"That could have very easily been a loss too," asserted a non-too-pleased sounding Leary. "We played 87 and a half minutes of sloppy soccer. If it hadn't been for (senior keeper) Prescott (Busk) coming up huge all over the place, we could have very easily been down 6-3 at the half."

Busk stopped four or five breakaways before the break, as well as a penalty kick.

As he made clear, Leary does not lay all of this at the feet of his backfield. However, he is shuffling in a number of players into those spots right now, he says, "in the hopes someone will step up."

It doesn't help that junior sweeper Sam MacDonald, who Leary calls his "best defender," has been slowed by an ankle injury in both games. After playing sparingly in the season opening 5-0 loss to Hanover on Tuesday, he did not play at all Friday.

"It just wasn't worth taking the chance of him getting hurt

Cohasset capitalized on a turnover to get the ball on its own 40 with about two minutes left in the half. Crandon Leahy then hit Durkin for the game's first score.

Cohasset opened the second half with a 10-play march - mainly on Durkin runs - that culminated in a 5-yard touchdown run from the captain.

The Skippers finished with nearly 200 yards of offense, 147 on 30 rushes and 48 through the air.

The game started slowly, with both teams failing to make first downs on their first series.

The Whalers broke loose on their second possession with a 35-yard gain on a pitch out to the right, giving them a first-and-10 on the Cohasset 33-yard line. The Skippers defense dug in, though, and shut down the Whalers running attack. On fourth-and-six, Cohasset knocked down an attempted pass to take over on downs on their own 29 yard line.

A five-yard offsides penalty moved the Skippers back to their own 24. But Durkin got tha tback and a little more with an 8-yard gain up the middle between Nick Arment and Matt Casey.

Senior Crandon Leahy, starting his first game at quarterback, then rolled to his right and completed a pass in the flat to tight end Dan McCarthy to the 35, good for a first down.

The offensive line again opened holes up the middle and Cohasset gained another first down. The drive ended there suddenly, however, as a Nantucket defender fell on a fumbled hand-off at his team's 45-yard line.

The Skippers appeared to get the ball right back a few plays later, as a mishandled pitch appeardd to be recovered by a Cohasset defender. However, the call went the other way. The Whalers took advantage of their good fortune by picking up a first down on a quarterback keep, moving to Cohasset's 45-yard line.

Senior defensive end Kelvin Ferriera put an end to that drive, however, sacking the Whalers QB for a five-yard loss and forcing the punt.

The Skippers offense went three and out and the ensuing punt saw the Whalers start out just 51 yards from pay dirt. The Skippers defense once again held the line, though, and forced the Nantucket punt team back onto the field. The snap sailed high over the punter's head and, as he attempted to run with the ball after running it down, he was smothered by Dave McKenna and Casey Coleman at the 24-yard line, setting up Cohasset's first scoring opportunity.

On second-and-eight, Leahy was sacked back on the 35-yard line, dimming the Skippers hopes of taking advantage of the opportunity. However, on third down, the offensive line provided Leahy plenty of time, allowing a deep pass pattern to develop. Leahy completed a perfect pass to Durkin on the 10-yard line and Durkin scampered in for the touchdown and six points.

The Skippers failed to convert a two-point pass play, however, leaving it a 6-0 game.

Nantucket fumbled the ball on the next series, as Ferreira ran down the opposing QB. Scott Wakefield scooped the ball up at the 26 and ran it back to the 9-yard line. Cohasset attempted two roll out passes to the right, but the Whalers secondary tightened.

Durkin slashed for a seven-yard gain over the right side, as Arment, Casey and Jake Cuneo provided running room. However, a shoe string tackle at the two-yard line on fourth down turned the ball back over to the Whalers with just a few ticks left on the first half clock.

Cohasset started the second half by returning the kick off to the 37 yard line and then put together an impressive drive to score on their first possession of the second half.

On first down, Durkin picked up 21 yards on a dive up the middle, breaking left off the blocking of Leo Clougherty and Justin Alexander. Durkin then gained another 12 yards on a pitch out right to put the ball on the 30 for another first down.

Leahy completed a five-yard pass to McCarthy on a down and out to the right sideline to the 25.

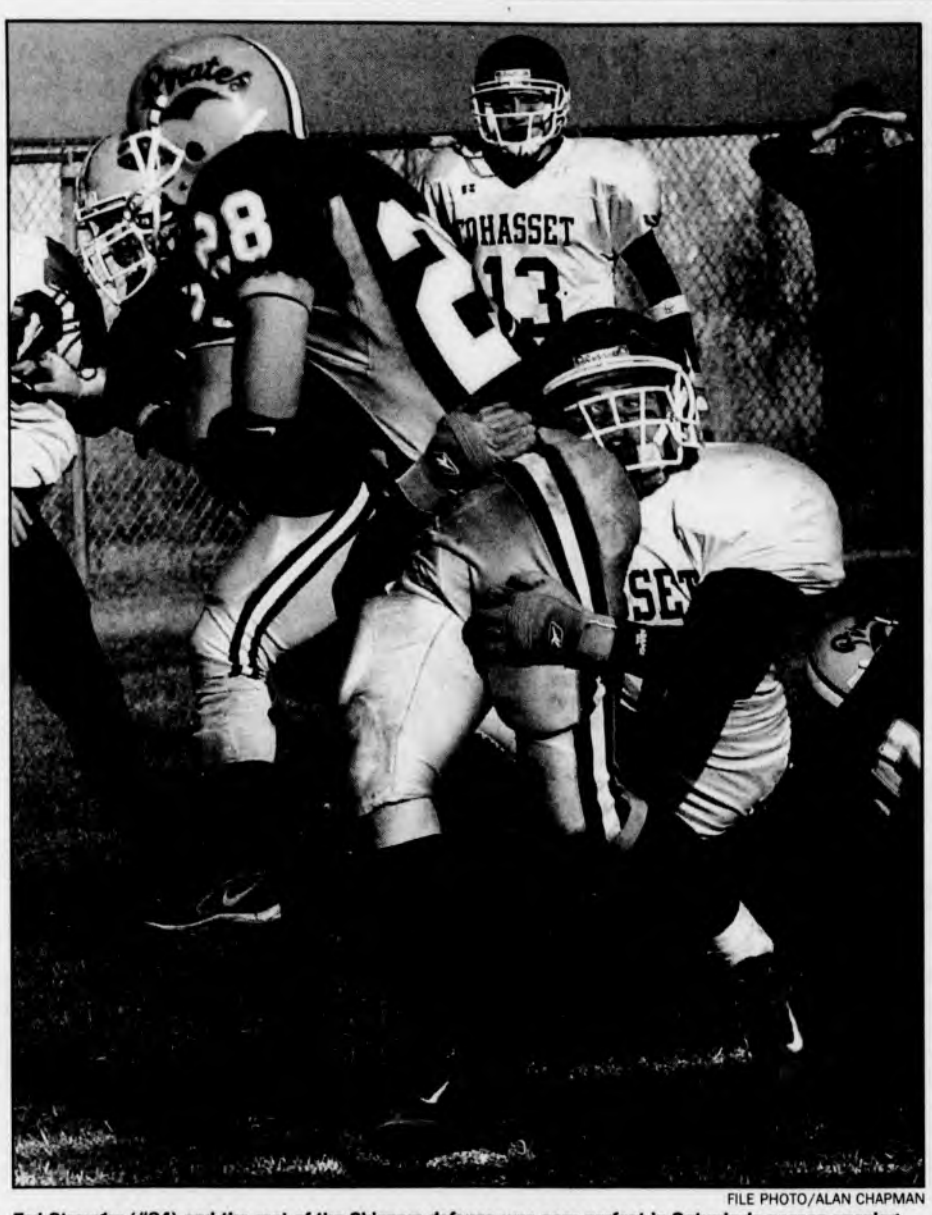
The offensive line provided running room again, as Durkin gained another seven yards on a half back draw up the middle and another first down at the 19.

Another half back dive and completed pass to the right flat put the Skipper offense just inside Nantucket's 15 yard line.

Cohasset kept the ball on the ground, running to the right side over third year junior starter Nick Arment, and Durkin scored his second touchdown on a half back dive over Arment and Cuneo.

Leahy kept the ball on the conversion attempt on a roll out option to the right, but was tackled short of the goal line.

On the Whalers next series, senior captain Ted Straughn intercepted a pass, giving Cohasset excellent field position on the Nantucket 49-yard line. However, Cohasset fumbled the hand off on the next play and Nantucket recovered at the 50.



The Skippers defense held again, ending the Whalers series with yet another third down quarterback sack by Ferriera.

Nantucket punted to the 36, where Cohasset took over. After two incomplete passes, Nantucket recovered another Skipper fumble on the hand off at the 36 yard line. The defense again came up big when Casey stopped a screen pass for a two-yard loss and Nantucket failed to convert on fourth down with a little over two minutes left in the game

The Cohasset offense took over, gained another first down and then let time expire.

The Cohasset defense was led by Ferriera, who had four sacks and harassed the Whalers backfield all day. Leo Clougherty and Scott Wakefield controlled the middle of the defensive line. Linebackers Ted Straughn and Matt Casey performed well and had multiple solo tackles. Jeff Brown, Anthony Dipaolo, Joe Durkin and Dave McKenna contained the Whalers passing game.

The Skippers will play another Saturday afternoon game on the road this week, this time travelling to Archbishop Williams in Braintree for a 1 p.m. kickoff.

worse," explained Leary. "It's better to lose Sam for one game than not have him for eight or so. We don't want this to become a big problem for him. He's a young guy and ankle sprains can be a tricky thing."

One defender singled out for praise by the head coach was senior captain Jonathan Littauer.

"We've just moved Jon back there, so he's learning on the fly," said Leary. "It's a brand new position for him, but he's done a nice job so far."

Friday's game followed a different pattern from most of the previous annual sojourns to Mashpee for the Skippers. Often, in recent years, the locals have started slow in the game after the long bus trip and then had to battle to get back into the game. That pattern reversed 180 degrees this time around, however.

Junior Ben Libby punched home an unassisted goal off of a scramble in front a minute into the game. That lead was doubled 37 seconds later when junior Aidan Buick finished on a feed from senior captain Sam Steele.

And 50 seconds later it became a 3-0 game, as Steele potted one of his own off a pass from fellow senior captain Kevin Dinsmore.

"Libby, Aidan, And Sam Steele all played well," said Leary. "They put pressure on the Mashpee net. Lack of offensive pressure is not one of our problems right now."

Mashpee finally put one behind Busk a few minutes into the second half, but Buick got that right back with his second of the game, with an assist going to junior Brandon Smith, and the Skippers appeared to be firmly in control.

That turned out to be a mistaken impression.

"We had to hang on at the end," said Leary. "We're turning the ball over way too much. We're turning it over off of passes and dribbling. We're doing it wrong all over the field and were doing it a lot. We're just not showing a lot of composure, and we're putting our defenders in a bad position."

A win is a win is a win, though.

"Considering the problems we've had the last few years when we take the bus down there, I'm happy to have come away with a win," Leary summed up. "But we're not going to have too many of those if we don't play better."

Hanover 5, Cohasset 0

If you can believe it, the coach sounded even more displeased following Tuesday's opener at Hanover.

Leary took much of the blame for this one on his own shoulders, saying "the kids weren't ready and that my responsibility."

Of course, it didn't help that the Cohasset players weren't back in school yet at that point while the Hanover kids were.

Leary did laud the play, though, after this one of tri-captains Steele, Littauer and Dinsmore.

"Dinsmore was immense all game," the coach said of his midfielder. "He should have had a goal that would have been one of the prettiest I've ever seen at the high school level on a volley from 35 yards out. I think the Hanover goalie was surprised himself making that save."

MacDonald gutted out ankle sprain and played 65 minutes at the defensive end. Hanover scored two goals late with him on the sidelines to make the final score appear more lopsided than it actually was.

"Sam is one of the toughest kids around," said Leary of MacDonald. "I wish I had more like him."

Next up

The Skippers were slated to get back into action yesterday at home versus SSL rival Abington, and then won't play again until next Tuesday at Carver (3:30 p.m. start).

prior to the Mashpee game, which allowed junior Melissa Crowley-Buck to see some playing time. Fortunately, there was no sign of letdown on that front.

"I think we are in for a goalie duel soon," reported Beal.

Beal expects assistant coach Carla Gigon, who has experience between the pipes, to have a lot of input into that decision.

"Carla helping me to make the decisions regarding goalies is a tremendous asset to this program," said Beal. "She knows what she is talking about and she has experience."

The Skippers faced a big test yesterday when they hit the road to take on powerful SSL rival Abington. They'll be at Cape Cod Academy on Friday, the team they beat 4-1 to open the season, and then host league foe Carver on Tuesday under the lights at Alumni Field (JV game starts at 5:30 p.m., with varsity game immediately following).

"We must capitalize on the mistakes of our opponents," stated Coach Bostwick. She added, "To contend with teams like Harwich we need to play with intensity and with no hesitation. In addition to the regular team practices, the girls must show a willingness to practice on their own if they expect to win on a regular basis."

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Soccer Club registration underway

Registration for the upcoming soccer season is now underway with registration forms available at the Town Hall. All players must be registered prior to participating in practices or games.

As in prior years, the Fall season will include practice and play for players age 4 through 11 (6th grade). However, as a result of the elimination of Middle School team sports, the Club will also sponsor practice and competitive team play for 7th and 8th grade players as well this year.

In-town programs for players age 4 (PreK) to 9 (4th grade) will begin on September 18th and continue through November 13th excluding Columbus Day weekend. Travel program training for the U12 (5th and 6th grade) and U14 (7th and 8th grade) age groups will begin on September 11th with practice and games in the Cranberry League continuing through early November.

A coaching clinic for all new or interested coaches has been schedule for Saturday, September 11th, with a coaches meeting to start the season scheduled for Wednesday, September 15th.

South Shore Stealers softball tryouts

Braintree, MA —The South Shore Stealers, a girls fast-pitch softball organization, will be holding tryouts for their 16U team on Sunday September 26th and Sunday October 3rd from 12:30 to 3:00 PM at Flaherty Field on Lakeside Drive in Braintree, right behind South Shore Plaza.

This is a new team that is looking for highly motivated and dedicated team players for the 2005 season. All positions are available which makes for a great opportunity for players. The South Shore Stealers looks to build on the success that they have had over the past two seasons with their younger teams with 9 first place and 5 second place finishes in 20 tournaments entered.

For information on the tryouts or the team in general please contact Rob Spofford at (781) 383-1680 or email Spofford@spoffordgroup.com or checkout our website at www.eteamz.com/ssstealers.

CYBSA girls softball pitching clinic

Cohasset, MA —The Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to announce a softball pitching clinic this fall for any girls interested in learning how to pitch or to improve on their skills. Jill McCoy, who has instructed in town previously, will be providing the instruction for this clinic.

The 3 session clinic will begin on Sunday, September 19th at 3:30 PM at Freedom Diamond. The next 2 sessions will be Sunday September 26th and Sunday October 3rd at the same time and place. The cost of this clinic will be $50 per pitcher.

Each pitcher will need to provide a parent catcher to participate. For further information and to register please call Rob Spofford at (781) 383-1680.

Cohasset Youth Baseball Major League tryouts

The try-out for the 2004 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Saturday, September 20, 2003 at Barnes Field at 1:30 PM. All boys and girls turning 10, 11 or 12 prior to August 1, 2004 wishing to play Little League major league division baseball and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. Although all eligible 12 year olds are automatically assigned to major league teams, their attendance is mandatory at this try-out. Players should register at Barnes

SSBC's Fall Ball League on deck

Rookie League play returns to Hingham

HINGHAM, Mass. (August 23, 2004) — The South Shore Baseball Club's annual Fall Outdoor Baseball Leagues, designed for players seven to 18 years of age in four different age groups, returns next month to Braintree, South Weymouth and Hingham.

Nearly 1,000 players have participated in the SSBC Fall Outdoor Baseball Leagues during the past four years. This season's five-to-six week instructional session is open to SSBC members and non-members.

"Braintree and Weymouth are great baseball towns and we're very happy to have our Fall League games played there once again," SSBC president/director Frank Niles, Jr. said. "Everybody will enjoy playing games and practicing, as well as receiving quality instruction from our professional coaches."

Ages 7-9: Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, 4-6 p.m., Sept.13-Oct. 15, at Hollingsworth Park in Braintree. Players enter individually and are placed on teams by SSBC's staff. Practice, drills and games combine for plenty of baseball.

Ages 10-12: Tuesdays & Thursdays, 4-6 p.m., and Saturdays, 10 a.m.-12-noon, starting Sept. 14 at Hollingsworth Park. If enrollment increases the number of participants to field seven teams, each squad will have a bye twice during the five-week schedule. Teams will be based geographically to facilitate carpooling.

Ages 13-15: Saturday doubleheaders, starting at 9 a.m., six weeks commencing Sept. 18 at Stella Tirrell Park, South Weymouth and Cronin Field, Hingham. Fee includes SSBC shirt, hat and umpires fees.

Ages 16-18 (High School Varsity): Sunday doubleheader games for eight consecutive Sundays, starting Sept. 12. Three to five SSBC clubs, pending enrollment, will compete against various local squads with 14 players per team. Fee includes SSBC and hat. Qualified umpires will be provided for all games, which will be played at fields including Stella Tirrell and Strong Field in East Bridgewater.

Rookie League

SSBC's popular "Rookie League" baseball program, specifically designed for boys and girls between the ages of 5 to 8 with little or no previous playing experience in organized sports, returns Sept. 14-Oct. 9 at Kress Field in Hingham.

Each participant receives one hour of instruction, one afternoon each week during the four-week session, and also plays in a one-hour game on Saturdays (starting at 9 a.m.). Practices will be held on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 3:45-4:45 p.m. Two teams may practice at each of these times.

"The Rookie League is one of our most popular programs," Niles added. "These young boys and girls will have a lot of fun learning how to play baseball from our experienced staff of instructors. Players are never too young to learn how to play baseball the right way."

SSBC's professional coaching staff will include Niles, Jack Larkin and Rick DelVecchio. They will teach basic fundamentals, as well as safety and sportsmanship. All "Rookie League" players receive a T-shirt and hat. The ball will be pitched - no hitting off a tee!

SSBC is a full service, year-round club and training facility for baseball and softball players, ages five and older, in Hingham. For more information about SSBC or any of its programs call (800) 767-1529/(781) 767-1529 or visit its Web site at www.ssbc.com

A. Lewis Rogers, Jr.

A. Lewis Rogers, Jr. died at his home, surrounded by his family on Monday, Sept. 6, 2004.

Mr. Rogers was born and raised outside Philadelphia. He attended the Mount Herman School and went to college in the U.S. Navy's V-12 program at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, receiving his Ensign's commission and an electrical engineering degree in 1945, at which time he was assigned to the battleship USS Cleveland.

Following his honorable discharge, Mr. Rogers settled in Virginia Beach where he began his career with Honeywell, working with the Navy to provide cooling apparatus for the new fleet of nuclear powered aircraft carriers. In 1968 Mr. Rogers and his first wife, Barbara (Daughtrey), relocated to Cohasset, where the family's pool served as the primary training facility for the town's swim team.

In 1977 Mr. Rogers married Deborah (Prouty) and moved to Lincoln where he worked with the Lexington based medical devices company, Instrumentation Laboratories. With the help of neighbors and his now expanded group of offspring, Mr. Rogers built a clay tennis court in his backyard. In 1982 Mr. Rogers was named president of the U.S. based medical devices subsidiary of Vickers, PLC.

In 1985 Mr. Rogers and Deborah "retired" to their house on Little Mill Pond in Chatham. Retirement for Mr. Rogers included a six-month assignment in Russia for the International Executive Service Corps.

Mr. Rogers was president of the Chatham Unitarian Universalist Fellowship and was a founding member of the new Unitarian Universalist Meeting House. He served on the Chatham Conservation Commission, Chatham Water Watchers, and was a member of the Monomoy Yacht Club.

He enjoyed clamming, boating, biking, and traveling.

Mr. Rogers leaves behind a large and loving family, including his wife Deborah, his children Robin, Kim, and Brian, step-children Laura, Dick, Mark and Chris Tosi, and 10 grandchildren, who always loved to visit their "Papa Lew."

A memorial service will be held at the Unitarian Universalist Church in Chatham on Friday, Sept. 24, at 2 p.m. All of his many friends are invited to attend.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Building Fund of the Unitarian Universalist Meeting House, Box 18, Chatham, MA 02633.

Dr. William C. Allard

Dr. William C. Allard, 72, of Cohasset, formerly of Worcester, died Sept. 8, 2004, in Brigham & Woman's Hospital after a long battle with heart disease.

He was born in Bath, Maine the son of William J. and Yvette Allard. Dr. Allard was a graduate of St. John's High School, Clark University, received a Master's Degree from Worcester State College, and earned his Ph.D. from the University of Massachusetts. He retired from his career in education as Superintendent of Schools in Westfield. Previously, he was Superintendent of Schools in Lunenburg, Principal at Exeter High School in Exeter, N.H. and was a teacher for many years in the Worcester Public School system. "Doc" was an avid fan of Assumption College men's and women's basketball teams, an avid Red Sox Fan and for the past 15 years his favorite pastime was attending all of his grandchildren's sports activities. He belonged to many Rotary groups, and had coached his sons Little League teams.

His wife Mary T. (Zofrea) Allard died in 2000. He leaves his son William J. and his wife, Libby Allard of Cohasset, and a daughter Barbara Dawidjan of Worcester and six grandchildren.

The funeral was held Sept. 13, from O'Connor Brothers Funeral Home, in Worcester. Interment was in St. John's Cemetery, Worcester.

Youth rowing fall sign-ups under way

Hull Lifesaving Museum is starting is youth rowing season.

Sign-ups are now underway for the Hull Lifesaving Museum's fall 2004 South Shore Youth Rowing season. The program is coeducational, and rowers of all skill levels, ages 11 to 18, "pull together" in the museum's big, traditional rowing boats exploring the waters and islands of Hingham and Hull Bays and Boston's outer harbor. The program's emphasis is on personal development through fun, adventure, and teamwork. The fall season runs Sept. 20 to Nov. 20.

The program operates Mondays and Wednesdays, 3:30 to 5:30 p.m., with additional race events, culminating with the Icebreaker (New England Youth Open-Water Rowing Championships), Saturday, Nov. 20. The cost is $120 for museum members and $160 for non-members; limited scholarship assistance is available. South Shore Youth Rowing is conducted out of the museum's Windmill Point Boathouse, located at 185 Main Street in Hull - the last building on the peninsula. Half of the museum's 14-boat rowing fleet is housed at this boathouse, and crews embark in one of several boats depending on their skill level, number, destination, and the weather.

For information or to enroll, contact Corinne Leung, Museum Director, at 781-925-5433 or email the museum at lifesavingmuseum@comcast.net. Complete information and sign-up sheets are also available on the museum's web-site, www.lifesavingmuseum.org.

Hull gazebo concerts on Sunday afternoons

Sunday afternoon concerts in Hull will entertain the community with big band favorites for the eighth summer in a row. Sponsored by the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home of Hingham, "Music at the Gazebo" concerts will take place at the Veteran's Memorial Park in Hull on Sept. 19 and 26.

Free T-shirts will be distributed to the first 150 concert-goers at the opening show, when singer Bobbi Carrey returns to Hull to wow locals with her soulful singing. Carrey has had a stellar year, performing to critical acclaim in the Boston and Cambridge markets.

The program will run from 3 to 4:30 p.m. on the third, and fourth Sundays in September. The performance schedule is:

Sept. 19: "That Old Feeling" playing hits from the 1930s and 1940s.

Sept. 23: Gregg Savage Quintet featuring swing and Big Band tunes.

The park is located at the intersection of Nantasket and Samoset Avenues across from Hull Donut House. Free parking is available at the Hull Redevelopment Authority in the adjacent lot. Concert-goers should bring their own seating. Performances will be canceled if it rains.

"These concerts have become a tradition here in Hull and are a great way to end the summer on a high note," said Dennis Keohane, director of Pyne Keohane Funeral Home. "We are very grateful to the Hull War Memorial Commission and appreciate both the use of the park and their enthusiasm for this community event." The Pyne Keohane Funeral Home (www.keohane.com) donated the gazebo to the War Memorial Commission in 1996.

Garden Party at Sunrise of Cohasset

Saturday, Sept. 18, Sunrise of Cohasset off Rte. 3A will host a Garden Party Celebration, from 2 to 3 p.m. with Scituate Girl Scout Troop #4397 commemorating the completion of the mural that the girls painted for the Sunrise Garden Patio.

If you are interested in attending, call 781-383-6300.

Cub Scout registration

Registration for new or returning Pack 38 Cub Scouts will be from 6-7 p.m. at the hallway entrance at the Deer Hill School on Sept. 21. Cub Scout boys grades 2-5 and Tiger Cubs (first graders) should register. Fee for Cubs is $30 for Tigers, $25. First Pack meeting for Cub Scouts will begin at 7 p.m. in the Deer Hill cafeteria on Sept. 21. Further information, call Linda Farrag at 781-383-9519.

Cohasset walkers join effort to cure diabetes

For the second year, a team from Cohasset called "Cohasset Kids for a Cure" will be taking part in the Walk to Cure Diabetes in Boston on Oct. 2. The walkathon, is one of the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation's key fundraisers intended to find a cure for juvenile diabetes and its life-threatening complications. The Walk, held in more than 200 locations across the country, raised more than $74 million last year for diabetes research. This year, their goal is to raise $80 million. The walk in Boston goes from the Hatch Shell across the Massachusetts Avenue bridge, and back to the Hatch Shell where there will be music, food and games for kids.

More than one million Americans have juvenile diabetes, also known as type 1 diabetes, a disease most often diagnosed in childhood that strikes suddenly and carries the constant threat of deadly complications, including heart disease, stroke, blindness, kidney failure, and amputation. Several children from Cohasset are juvenile diabetics, motivating a large team of caring families from town to participate in the walkathon last year and an even larger team to walk this year. An outpouring of support in the form of donations is also coming from local families who are not able to walk. And businesses such as JP Morgan, Shoe Market Kids, Goodwin Graphics, Scituate Raquet and Fitness, and Dean and Hamilton have sponsored the team in this year's walk.

Type 1diabetes occurs when the body's immune system attacks and destroys the cells in the pancreas which make insulin, a hormone that helps the body move the glucose from food into cells throughout the body, which use it for energy. Basically it allows organs to function and kids to grow. Kids and adults who have type 1 must take anywhere from 2 to several insulin injections everyday just to stay alive. They must also prick their fingers 6 or more times a day to check their blood sugar levels and make sure they are in safe range. Sugar levels are affected by food intake, insulin amounts, exercise, stress, adrenaline and other factors, so these must be carefully balanced throughout each day. Low sugar levels can cause loss of consciousness, and high levels lead to the risk of long term life-threatening complications. It is a very delicate and difficult balance, and the amazingly brave kids who have diabetes are faced with this challenge everyday.

Researchers still do not know why people are struck with juvenile diabetes, but they believe that autoimmune, genetic and environmental factors are involved. Juvenile diabetics will never outgrow the disease and there is currently no cure. The exciting news, though, and why the team is walking, is that thanks to dramatic research progress, a cure is now within our reach. Researchers have never been closer, and the only thing holding them back is money.

Cohasset Kids for a Cure's goal is to raise money now, so that a cure for this devastating disease will come soon - both shortening the time for this disease to do damage to these kids' organs and giving them a much better quality of life as soon as possible.

If you are interested in walking with Cohasset Kids for a Cure, or sponsoring a walker, please visit www.jdrf.org or contact the New England office of JDRF by calling (781)431-0700.

MBTA begins Greenbush town lot dig

Alternate parking plans explained

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The project will be completed in three phases to minimize the number of parking spaces that will be affected at any given time.

The MBTA is slated to begin preliminary excavation in portions of the Town Parking Lot, Monday, Sept. 20. The work will begin what is slated to be a two-month project, during which time the lot will be dug up one portion at a time. The project will be completed in three phases to minimize the number of parking spaces that will be affected at any given time.

Greenbush Community Coordinator Tom Carroll of Cashman Balfour Beatty said there will always be a way to enter the parking lot from the Pleasant Street entrance during the excavation. There will be between 15 and 20 spaces which are being excavated during most of the three phases, but roughly 50 alternate parking spaces will be available in various Village locations to help accommodate for the loss of parking.

Town Treasurer and Tax Collector Joe DeVito said the town has worked out a deal with George Roukounakis, owner of the Olympic Citgo station on South Main Street, and parking will be made available behind his building, across from the "Garage" teen center. DeVito said there will be barriers put in place to delineate the temporary parking lot, as well as signage. DeVito said the agreement requires there will be "no overnight parking," because Roukounakis must be able to receive deliveries from that portion of his lot. The agreement will be for two months, and patrons of the Red Lion Inn will be able to use the lot at night. "We really appreciate George working with us on this," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

Residents will also be able to park between the municipal parking lot and the Pleasant Street Parfait, and off Pleasant Street opposite James Lane. Both areas are currently unpaved, but DeVito said during this interim phase, the lots will be sprayed and treated to minimize dust. Carroll said the MBTA will also make the currently paved right of way next to the former ABB Optical building, which is currently being transformed into the shops at "James Brook Crossing," available for parking, which is the piece of land between the ABB site and the South Shore Art Center. The MBTA owns all of the land which will be used for parking except for the land at the gas station, and is lending it to help alleviate potential parking problems during excavation.

Carroll said all personnel associated with the Greenbush Line construction have been issued a badge which identifies them as CBB workers.

For a complete schedule of work to be done, there will be a posting on local cable access channels as well as the CBB Web site at www.cbbgreenbush.com. For questions or concerns regarding construction activities or to see plans, please call the Greenbush hotline 24 hours, seven days a week at (781) 682-6350.

MBTA e-mail

Greenbush Community Coordinator Tom Carroll said there have been some technical problems with the Greenbush Web site this week, and those expecting e-mail updates might not have received any correspondence. In addition, those who may have tried to sign up for the newsletter may not have been able to do so. Carroll said the problem has been fixed, but for those continuing to experience difficulty, please call the 24-hour Greenbush hotline at (781) 682-6350.

Matos has combined role at court and in the schools

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Officer Lisa Matos will be back in the school halls this fall.

The veteran Cohasset officer will also be making regular runs to Quincy District Court as police prosecutor.

In looking over how best to utilize his personnel, Chief James Hussey has appointed Matos prosecutor, who will also be working with schools in helping to educate students in the areas of alcohol and drug abuse, violence prevention, safety education and child abuse prevention programs. She will also be involved with issues affecting the elderly.

Matos returns to the schools with considerable experience. For years she served as the PALS (Police Assisting Local Schools) officer. PALS is a DARE-like program that was specifically tailored to Cohasset to bring police officers and teachers together to address some important issues.

Hussey plans to meet with new Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh and other school administrators today (Thursday) to see how police can be bettered involved in the schools.

"When I came to Cohasset, it became clear – as it is in all communities – that there is concern about problems with youth and related issues," he said. "We hope to get out in front of some of those problems."

Hussey also hopes police involvement in Jack Buckley's "Street Law" civics class at the high school continues where officers are invited in to talk to the students.

The chief explained the prosecutor is a part-time specialty post for which an officer is paid a stipend. The prosecutor represents the police department at Quincy District Court during arraignments and court proceedings. He said Matos won't be needed in court every day and the court proceedings usually take place in the morning. On court days, she will be busy working with the youth and elderly for the balance of the day shift.

Matos replaces Officer Bill English who served as acting prosecutor for roughly the past nine months. Hussey said English, who replaced Officer Rick Grassie in the post, did a super job.

Hussey, who posted the prosecutor position seeking applicants, said Matos is a better fit for the new, combined role because of her extensive experience in the schools. English is now working the day shift as a patrol officer.

Hussey said police want to get out in front of potential problems with youngsters.

"We want to see what we can do to prevent and intervene (before trouble erupts)," he said.

Matos resigned from the PALS post last January. Last winter, controversy gripped the town over two officers being placed on paid administrative leave pending an investigation into allegations of wrongdoing. [The two accused officers – who steadfastly maintained their innocence – returned to work in July].

At the time, Matos declined to elaborate on her reasons for resigning from PALS.

In a letter to the editor that same week, School Health Education Coordinator Mike Gill expressed his disappointment at losing Matos as PALS officer. He had the highest praise for Matos, describing her as a "born teacher."

"There is no question in my mind that hundreds, perhaps thousands of Cohasset students that she has worked with through the years have all benefited greatly from her," he stated.

Hussey said Officer Christy Tarantino is continuing as safety officer. In that role he deals with issues such as school bus safety and parking issues at the schools. He also looks at crosswalks and sidewalks and other areas of concern relating to the general safety of adults and children in town.

'Hate' graffiti being investigated

Police are investigating vandalism behind the buildings at Tedeschi Plaza where some very elaborate graffiti was discovered by an officer on routine patrol during the night shift Tuesday morning.

According to Chief James Hussey, the graffiti includes a swastika and the word Nazi, among a lot of other symbols and writing.

Hussey isn't sure that it is in fact a hate crime because usually that type of graffiti – as was the case in Scituate earlier this month – is painted where it can intimidate someone. In other words, it usually doesn't appear in a remote area.

"It doesn't appear that it was targeted toward someone," Hussey said. He explained police will ask someone with expertise to take a look at the graffiti – which is sometimes called "tagging" – to help determine its origin.

Hussey said police aren't sure how long the graffiti has been there. It was discovered because Hussey has asked his officers to check behind buildings in town while they are out on patrol.

"I hope we don't find that the graffiti was targeted toward anyone in the plaza," he said.

UNDER INVESTIGATION

Police Chief James Hussey has walked the area behind the Paul Pratt building (historical society headquarters) on South Main Street after reports of vandalism to the new lights along the walkway.

Hussey said he plans to meet with Tom Gruber of the historical society to determine if skateboarders are responsible, as Gruber believes. Gruber also said people are walking on the areas where grass seed has been planted. Police officers will be patrolling the area.

A Child's Secret to Winning on Wall Street

Soccer kid's portfolio up 355% in six months

At 12 years of age, in his soccer shorts, Christian Powers is not your average Wall Street investor. But neither are his hefty profits. Christian began trading stocks just after his twelfth birthday when his parents finally said he was old enough. In his first six months, Christian's portfolio was up 355%.

Software makes child's play of mastering stocks

How does a 12-year-old generate triple-digit gains that would be the envy of almost any investor? Christian's secret is Wizetrade™, a user-friendly software program that tracks the supply and demand of individual stocks and graphically captures the stock's movement. Once Christian sees the historical trend — and the current direction the stock has taken — he forms his trading strategy.

Home schooled by his mom, Treva, an experienced Wizetrader™, Christian was introduced to Wizetrade™ as part of his general education. "It's important for anyone to know good money management" explains Treva.

Spreading the wealth

"We tell our friends that if you're interested in stocks or ever consider buying stocks, get Wizetrade™ first because you need to be able to see what's going on with the stock," says Treva.

Stock runs in the family

Christian's younger sister, Summer, paper trades only, which means she uses Wizetrade™ to assess theoretical trades and then tracks their progress in real time. It's how to become familiar with Wizetrade™ without putting actual funds into the market. "The first paper trade she made is still successful,"says her proud dad, Parris.

Dad's portfolio up 500+ percent

Christian has taken his "Wizetrading" to heart — and to the bank. Christian's mom and dad also use Wizetrade™ and, in fact, introduced him to the software. His mom, Treva, says "My average over the last 26 trades has been 12 to 13 percent gain." Christian's dad, Parris, adds that with Wizetrade™, "Over the last two years, I've probably increased my asset (base) over 500 or 600 percent."

"It saved our retirement account."

For the Powers family, it's not just about making money. It's also about protecting what they've earned. When the U.S. stock market plunged three years ago and investors lost trillions of dollars, Parris says, "Our retirement portfolio was not affected in one little way by the movement that we saw in the market in 2001... That's probably the single most impressive thing about Wizetrade™ — it saved our retirement account."

Wizetrade™ was wise to Enron

Wizetrade™ focuses on the buying and selling activity in individual stocks. "The great thing about Wizetrade™ is that if you follow the Wizetrade™ criteria, you'd never be trapped into a stock like an Enron. The signals would show up very quickly... you'd be out of that stock long before it becomes a liability like Enron has become to so many people in their retirement portfolio," explains Parris.

Following stocks can be child's play. Wizetrade™ shows if the market is bullish or bearish on more than 27,000 stocks and mutual funds — whether your investing strategy is long term, intermediate, or short term.

Life without Wizetrade™ is not an option

Treva says investing without the advantage of Wizetrade™ would be "like a surgeon trying to do surgery without his eyes. When you have Wizetrade™, you can see what's going on and choose when to get in a stock and when to exit the stock. We're just so pleased with it."

Parris adds, "Having traded stocks beforehand, and now trading stocks using Wizetrade™, we would never trade stocks or buy stocks without using Wizetrade™."

Up $18,000 in two months

In May and June of 2002 when many stocks were declining, Wizetrade™ helped the Powers family identify stocks that investors still had strong confidence in. "Just watching those stocks, and entering and exiting according to Wizetrade™ criteria, we made over $18,000 in just those two months," reports Parris.

Still, 12-year-old Christian is the family's budding superstar. "He made $720 a few days ago on one of his trades. He's tickled," says Treva.

Christian doesn't hand out stock tips. His advice to everyone is simply to give Wizetrade™ a try. "Anybody can do it," predicts the successful young Wizetrader™.

The 2 Forces You Must Follow to Win on Wall Street

Anyone can be positioned to beat the market if they harness the power of the two key factors that rule Wall Street with an iron fist.

Wizetrade™ shows the supply and demand pressures on stocks in real time, positioning investors to capitalize on these two key market forces. Knowing which side of the supply/demand "tug of war" to be on has proven to be a significant advantage, and Wizetrade™ lets investors track supply and demand like a bloodhound.

Recognize a dramatic timing opportunity

A change in the balance of supply and demand is a classic timing opportunity. That's why thousands of investors rely on Wizetrade™ to monitor trading activity in real time. Wizetrade™ displays easy-to-follow red and green indicators that alert investors to making decisions regarding stocks experiencing extreme supply and demand pressures.

See if your stocks pass the Wizetrade™ test

Discover how many gainers (and losers) you're holding by attending the free Wizetrade™ workshop. See firsthand how Wizetrade™ works and how easy it is to use Wizetrade™. Within seconds, Wizetrade™ reveals if the forces of supply and demand have tagged a stock as a potential diamond or a hot potato.

- ☑ Witness for yourself which stocks investors are buying and which stocks they're dumping.
- ☑ Discover if you're holding blue chips that have investors singing the blues.
- ☑ See why market newsletters, magazines, and newspapers can't match the real-time market analysis of Wizetrade™.
- ☑ Discover why Wizetrade™ helps take the guesswork out of investing and lets you trade with added confidence if, of course, you believe in the universal law of supply and demand.

TAKE THE FAMOUS WIZETRADE™ CHALLENGE

Name any stock. See if Wizetrade™ gives it a green light, or a red light.

"No stock can fool Wizetrade™. We'll prove it at the free Wizetrade™ portfolio clinic."

George Thompson, Wizetrade™ Creator and Author of Don't Play in the Street

'Chess' a move worth making

When its 1988 Broadway production closed after just 68 performances, the game seemed to be over for "Chess." Indeed, the musical — with its large cast, daunting score and Cold War-themed story dealing with a chess match between American and Russian grandmasters — has rarely been revived. This weekend, however, "Chess" will be performed for the first time on the South Shore in a concert version presented by Norwell's Company Theatre.

"The music is just phenomenal and that's the primary reason for doing it," explained Michael Joseph last week by telephone. In addition to serving in his customary Company capacity as Music Director, Joseph is also director and producer of the concert which will feature a cast of 35 as well as a 25-piece orchestra.

With music by ABBA main men Benny Anderson and Bjorn Ulvaeus ("Mamma Mia!") and lyrics by Tim Rice ("Jesus Christ Superstar," "Evita," "The Lion King"), the show has become a favorite of musical theater devotees. Its book by Rice and Richard Nelson, reworked from an earlier London mounting before its New York debut, is another story.

"It is really a very compelling book, but for the American version they added many components that set it apart from the game of chess and made it a lot darker," explains Joseph. "In our production, we've inserted some of the musical elements from the London version and also some of the silliness that helps give the show a much-needed lightness and levity."

By streamlining the script and eschewing some cumbersome plot elements, Joseph has instead been able to focus the production on the music which will be performed by South Shore favorites including Hingham's Ann McCoy, Boston POPSearch winner Tracy Silva of Taunton, and Company staple John King of Weymouth.

"Our cast is part of the cult of 'Chess.' They were panicked to get roles in this show. People who most often play leads were willing to be in smaller roles and even the ensemble just to be able to do this show. There's an ABBA sounding song, and then the next piece is very symphonic, which makes this a challenging and rewarding score to perform," according to Joseph. "The ensemble gets to sing everything from catchy pop tunes to classical choral music. Our company has been just incredible to work with. Their attitudes have been very supportive. They're delighted to have a chance to do this music, and so am I."

("Chess In Concert" will be performed September 18-19 at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell. Opening night has already sold out, but seats are still available for the Sunday matinee. For more information, call 781/871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com

A FEW DRINKS TOO MANY?

While numerous studies have ascribed certain health benefits (including a lower risk of heart disease) to moderate consumption of alcohol, the excess consumption of alcohol is associated with elevated risk of disease. For instance, over-consumption of alcohol can damage the liver and brain and increase the risk for certain cancers. Now, a recent study finds that even moderate drinking can cause some degree of hearing loss by increasing the time it takes to process sound in the auditory brain stem. This nerve damage is caused by the long-term, cumulative effect of drinking alcohol. Because the damage to the auditory nerve adds up, even moderate drinkers can end up with as much nerve damage and hearing loss as heavy drinkers.

When any hearing impairment is suspected, a painless, comprehensive hearing test is in order. It will indicate whether the problem can be best helped with medication, surgery, or amplification by a hearing instrument. For knowledgeable concern, compassionate care, and a selection of the most advanced hearing devices available today, welcome to FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. (We also have an office in Abington.) Why not call us today at 781-337-1144 and set up an appointment for a hearing test?

P.S. Hearing loss associated with alcohol consumption might produce such symptoms as difficulty deciphering words of people who speak quickly, as well as hearing conversation amidst background noise.

Kidney transplant buddies organize bike-run for charity

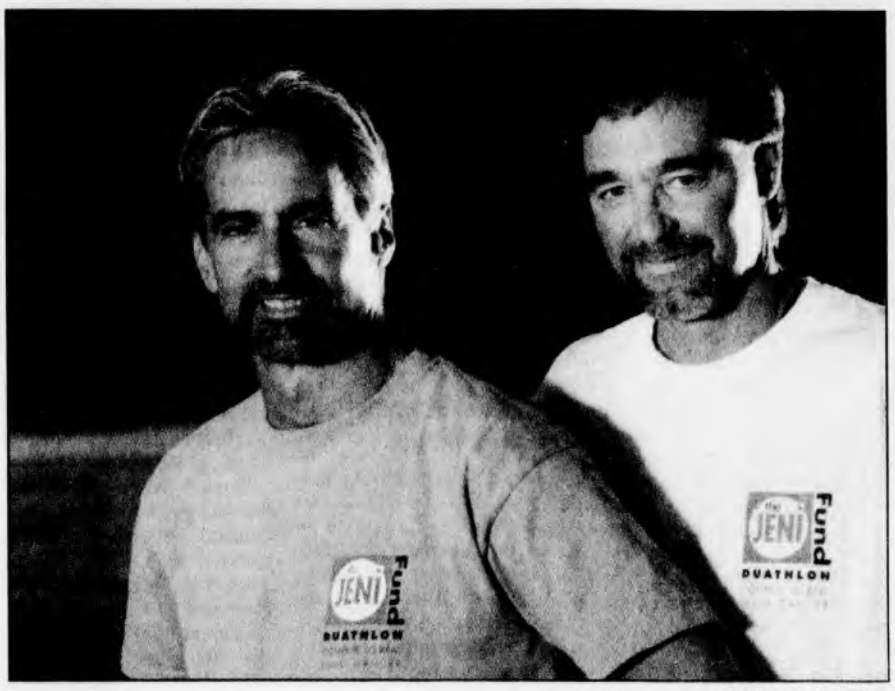
Proceeds help the Jeni Fund

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Looking at these two guys you'd never guess they spent a week together at Massachusetts General Hospital.

They're in terrific shape and compete in triathlons [run, bike and swim] on a regular basis.

They laugh at the same jokes; and they look enough alike to be brothers.



"I wasn't going to watch my friend suffer when all I had to do is show up."
— Chris Hebert

And while they may not be related, they share a bond that is thicker than blood.

Buddies and co-workers since they graduated from college roughly 25 years ago, Rich Berard and Chris Hebert would do anything for each other.

So when Berard's kidneys failed – Hebert immediately stepped up to the plate and said, "I'll shoot you a kidney."

Although it didn't happen quite that fast – ultimately Berard took his friend up on the offer. They underwent the transplant operation in October, 2001.

Chris Hebert, left, of Duxbury and Rich Berard of Cohasset are helping to organize an Oct. 3 duathlon in Hingham (bike and run) for the Jeni Fund, whose proceeds benefit lung cancer research for women.

Now the duo – who have raised money in the past for the National Kidney Foundation and other charities through competing in triathlons and other athletic events – have switched gears and are pitching in to help fight lung cancer in women by raising money for the Dana Farber Cancer Center.

The event is named for Hebert's wife's best friend, Jenifer Saltzman, who succumbed to the devastating disease at the age of 51. She hadn't smoked in 30 years. Her cancer, adenocarcinoma, is not associated with smoking and is more common in women.

Joanne, Hebert's spouse, is helping to organize the food for the event.

The Jeni Fund Duathlon – a two-mile trail run, eight-mile off-road bike, and two-mile trail run – gets underway at 9 a.m., Sunday, Oct. 3 at Wompatuck State Park off Union Street in Hingham. The course is for all ability levels.

Berard knows what it is like to be sick. He suffered from a degenerative kidney disease that would have tied the ath-

The first cut narrows field of candidates

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Town Manager Search Committee has begun sifting through the pile of submitted résumés and has narrowed down the first bunch of 55 applications to 18.

Members of the 12-person committee, of which Chairman Rob Spofford, Joe DiVito, Sam Pease, Nan Roth, Mary Snow, Melissa Browne and Rick Flynn were in attendance Monday night, sorted through the potential applicants, breaking the résumés into two separate piles – those to be further considered and those who were an obvious "no."

The committee had gone through the candidates prior to the meeting and many were prepared to discard a good number of the applications based on the sole fact that they didn't have the education or experience to be able to handle the job. Others were sent by Internet job search firms and were obvious mistakes, as some candidates from out of state who were not interested in relocating were included in the mix. However, there were viable

Elm Street trees could be history

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A bit of a controversy is taking root over the Historical Society's plan to remove two large trees as part of an upgrade project at the Captain Wilson house and the Maritime Museum on Elm Street.

The society had plans to remove the trees, but the board of selectmen has stepped in asking the group to hold off one more week while it investigates whether it has the jurisdiction to request the trees remain in place.

The society says it owns the land both large ash trees are on, and that it had plans to remove them today (Thursday), but will now hold off until the matter can be resolved. Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley had sent a letter to the society on behalf of the board informing it town bylaws require a shade tree hearing before tree removal can be authorized. However, society member Kathy O'Malley explained Town Clerk Marion Douglas and Richard Henderson,

Cedarmere development could break ground this fall

On-site septic is fall-back solution

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Despite rumors that the project has expanded to 600 units and is being sold off in pieces, Cedarmere developers say their proposed senior housing development is on course and groundbreaking could take place as early as November.

David Calhoun, 2 Sheldon Road, who is developing the site with his wife Kelli and their business partner Tom Ragno, came before the Planning Board last week not only to clear up some rumors, but present plans which will help the project meet the conditions set by the board when it approved the project's special permit application in January.

Early summer of 2003, the Cedarmere team began seeking out feedback from various town boards and their consultants, and abutters to the proposed senior housing development. The project was the first to file under the town's Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District bylaw, and under that bylaw, the plans become subject to review by many town boards. The project is slated for 41-acres on the former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street on the east side of 3A, and is planned to consist of a mix of 105-units of affordable and market rate apartments and condominiums for seniors 55 and older. The Planning Board must sign off on the final plans after developers have received approval from other town boards.

Special Town Meeting Warrant clarification

After speaking with Town Clerk Marion Douglas, the Board of Selectmen was required to rescind a previous vote to open the Town Meeting Warrant.

When the warrant is opened, it must be closed seven days later, and acting Town Manager Michael Buckley and the board felt it would be better to open and close the Warrant at a later date to allow residents more time to submit articles. Residents are required to collect 10 signatures to submit an article.

The warrant will officially be open Oct. 12 and closed Oct. 19, and it will be sent to the printer Nov. 1. It will take three weeks to print and should be mailed out Nov. 19. The Special Town Meeting will be held Dec. 6. For more information, contact Buckley at (781) 383-4105 or Douglas at (781) 383-4100.

Garage dance

There will be a dance for students in grades six through eight at the Garage, Friday, Sept. 24, from 7 to 10 p.m. There will be a charge of $5 at the door. Snacks and refreshments will be sold as well. The Teen Garage, located on James Lane, behind the Red Lion Inn, is open to grades six and older every Friday from 4 to 10 p.m. and the first and third Saturdays of the month from 5 to 10 p.m.

Annual shellfish bed closure notice

The Division of Marine Fisheries is reissuing the shellfish closure of Little Harbor in order to keep closure records current. This is not a new closure, but an annual re-notification of the existing closure of July1, 1991. The area will remain classified as "prohibited" and closed to the taking of all shellfish. Digging, harvesting, or collecting, and/or attempting to dig, harvest, or collect shellfish as well as the possession of shellfish from the waters, flats, and all tributaries to Little Harbor inside the Atlantic Avenue bridge is prohibited.

Planning Board office hours

The Planning Board office will now be open Mondays from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 8:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The office will be closed Fridays. Town Planner Liz Harrington will be in the office Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. For more information, please contact the Planning Board office at (781) 383-3517.

Farmer's Market annual dog show

The Farmer's Market will hold its annual dog show Thursday, Sept. 30 at 4 p.m. There will be a costume parade, and pet owners are asked to dress up their furry friends in their finest. For more information please contact Tina Watson at (781) 383-6205.

Removal of beach stones is illegal

Cohasset's bylaws as well as the State Wetlands Protection Act prohibit the removal of stones from Cohasset's beaches. All beaches, whether public or private, are protected by the state's Wetlands Protection Act, and the police will be closely monitoring various public and private beaches around town.

Safety fair at Senior Center

The first annual Safety Fair sponsored by the Cohasset Elder Affairs and the Norfolk County Sheriffs Office, TRIAD, will be held Oct. 13, from 10 a.m. to noon at the Senior Center, 3 North Main St. Opening remarks from Michael Bellotti, Sheriff, Norfolk County, followed by demonstrations, lots and lots of information on safety and brochures, and professional people to answer your questions will be available at Safety Fair.

There will be more than 25 vendors participating. Many with new information on how to remain safe, at home and in your community. This event is a great way to meet people and talk to provider first hand. You will be able to get important health questions answered and do one stop shopping for health and safety needs. Area seniors and families are welcome.

Suzanne Gunthier, OTR/D from the Arthritis foundation will speak before lunch. The luncheon will be served at the First Parish House, 23 North Main St. If you plan to attend this special event, RSVP To CEA office your lunch reservation at 781-383-9797.

Stringing together life lessons

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

STAFF PHOTOS/ BERT LANE

Birthday boy Matthew Doyle takes a big, deep breath to relax during a character education program featuring Lesley Smith and Sammy the Snail.

Entering single-file into the Osgood gymnasium, kindergarten students hear lively music coming from the small stage, and instinctually begin dancing as they take their cross-legged seats on the wooden floor. As the first grade students file in, the music hits their ears, and they begin to dance to their seats as well. By the time the second grade students arrive, all the children are clapping along to the rhythm, excited an captivated, eagerly awaiting a presentation.

This is the kind of music necessary to make children sit up, take notice, and participate — exactly what puppeteer Lesley Smith counts on during her shows. Smith, accompanied by Jimmy MacDougal on keyboards, and the Theatre of Life Puppets, teach children valuable social competency skills, which coincide with the character education curriculum already in place at the school.

"The program went together beautifully with what they've already learned," said Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan, adding from day one of the school year, every Osgood student has been learning valuable social skills as part of the Second Step Education Program the school participates in.

The Second Step program is a state requirement which Cindy Matheison of the Osgood Character Education Committee explains gives children a "Universal language to help solve problems." From bullying to calming down feelings of anger, to using words to help express feelings, character building lessons are integrated throughout every subject, ensuring children at Osgood have the message reinforced every day.

With help from the Osgood PSO as well as Holly Hill of the Social Service league and the Character Education Committee, Smith was able to come to Cohasset, and help reinforce the lessons the children are learning.

Smith began the show by singing some songs. The faces of children in the audience lit up when they realized they were hearing a familiar tune when Smith sang, "Stand by me." Smith then told the children a very animated story about one day when she forgot a piece of her set for the show. She asked the children to use feeling words to describe what she might have been feeling, or what they would feel in a similar situation. The children were then taught strategies for coping with situations, using American Sign Language.

They learned the signs for stop: the first thing they should do when they feel overwhelmed, followed by taking a deep breath to calm down, think: about solutions for the problem, and go forward: with that plan. They then sang an interactive song, signing the words they had just learned.

But after the songs came the real treat, when Smith went behind the curtains to present Sammy the Snail, a soft yellow puppet with a bright green shell.

He was joined by his puppet friends in a tale about bullying. Smith told the students the story was based on an experience she had when she was little, when some girls didn't want to play with her. They were very mean and Smith wanted them to stop, but when the teacher asked if there was a problem, she was too afraid to say "yes." Using Sammy as a role model, children are taught that bullying is "double D" behavior, because it is "dangerous and destructive," and children always need to tell an adult they trust when they're being subjected to it.

Sammy, along with his friend Sir Simon, a brave knight who lives in a castle, begin a medieval journey together, but when Sir Simon is turned to stone, it is up to Sammy to save him. He has to be brave, make friends with a scary dragon to make it into the castle, and ultimately saves the day. He learns to find the qualities in himself that make him special, and realizes what other people say doesn't matter as much as what he thinks about himself.

With a boost in self-esteem, Sammy vows to tell an adult at school about the bullying he has been going through. He realizes he has many adult friends at school, from teachers, to guidance counselors, to custodians and said he'll "keep telling until someone helps me."

The students were captivated from beginning to end, and were very eager to ask Sammy some questions at the end. Some wondered what he eats, and others wondered how Sammy could still be "alive," as he could still talk even with ventriloquist Smith standing beside him, visible to the audience. After questions, Sammy left the children with the message: "Let's work together to create a safe place for everyone."

For more information on Lesley Smith and the Theatre of Life Puppets, visit her Web site at www.sammysnail.com.

Downtown parking added during lot dig

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The fences are up and the MBTA has begun the two-month process of digging in the municipal lot, which has left some who frequent the Village wondering where to park. While parking spaces in the lot may be lost in portions during the two-month period, there is an abundance of new parking in the Village, which will all be available during the dig, and will hopefully help minimize its impact.

At the end of the Village closest to the Historical Society Headquarters, new parking has been created behind the Olympic Citgo station. Town Treasurer and Tax Collector Joe DiVito said the town has worked out a deal with George Roukounakis, owner of the Citgo station, and he has agreed to allow parking behind his building. The new spaces can be accessed via James Lane, which is between the Citgo station and the Red Lion Inn, and the parking spaces are located across from the "Garage," teen center.

However, overnight parking behind the Citgo station will be prohibited, as Roukounakis must be able to receive deliveries from that portion of his lot. Parking will be allowed for patrons of the Red Lion Inn and other businesses at night.

Toward the other end of the Village, parking is available in a variety of areas. Driving down Ripley Road and bearing left onto Pleasant Street, there is a small parking lot between the municipal lot and the Pleasant Street Parfait. Across the street, in the right of way between the former ABB Optical building and the South Shore Art Center, parking is also allowed. In addition, there is parking in the lot to the left of the ABB Optical building, just past the Pleasant Street Parfait on the right.

The excavation of the town lot began Monday and will be a two-month project, during which time the lot will be dug up one portion at a time in thirds. All personnel associated with the Greenbush Line construction have been issued a badge which identifies them as Cashman Balfour Beatty workers, which is the company the MBTA is working with during construction.

For a complete schedule of work to be done, there will be a posting on local cable access channels as well as the CBB Web site at www.cbbgreenbush.com. For questions or concerns regarding construction activities or to see plans, please call the Greenbush hotline 24 hours a day, seven days a week at (781) 682-6350.

Democrats host debate-watch parties

The Hingham Democratic Town Committee, in order to promote and heighten public awareness of the upcoming presidential debates, will be sponsoring a "Presidential Debate Watch Party" on Thursday, Sept. 30, at 5 Franklin Rodgers Rd.

A second event, a "Vice Presidential Debate Watch Party," will be held at 223 Wompatuck Rd. on Tuesday evening Oct. 5.

Both debate watch parties will begin at 8:30 p.m. in the evening and are open to the public.

There will be a bake sale and raffle to aid get out the vote activities.

Teens are especially welcome as they may be studying the upcoming presidential election in class and the debate watch parties will afford them the opportunity to watch together.

For directions to these events and other details, call Tom Vangel at 617-457-4000 or 781-740-2757.

Two arrested in burglary

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

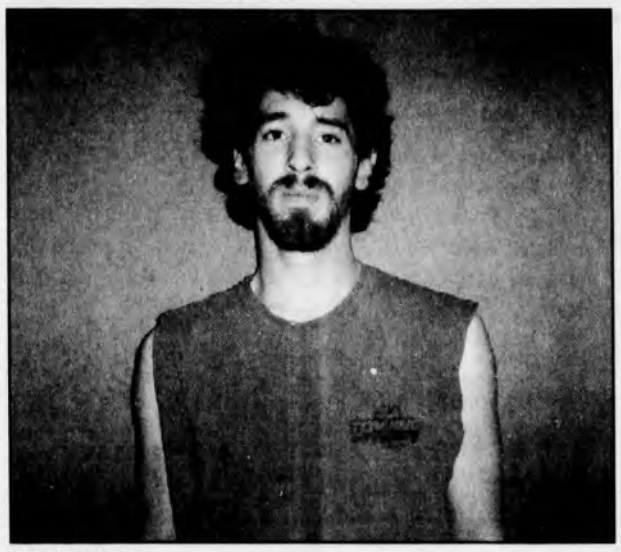
A routine patrol of the town's Recycle Transfer Facility led to the arrests of two men last Friday, when an alert patrolman noticed the door to the RTF office building was slightly ajar and went inside to investigate.

Det. Garrett Hunt of the Cohasset Police Department, who is investigating the incident, said at roughly 1 a.m., Officer Paul Wilson found 31-year-old Robert Andrews of 15 Hull St., Cohasset, and 25-year-old Steven Coble of 140 Atlantic Ave., Hull, allegedly filling an empty grass clipping bag from a lawn mower with various items from the building. They tried to make off with a chain saw, cordless drill, work gloves, a coil of rope, a can of lighter fluid, and a leather jacket.

The two were charged with nighttime breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony, larceny, possession of burglarious tools, and willful and malicious destruction to property of more than $250. Hunt said damages to the door are estimated at roughly $300.

A third suspect, 32-year-old Michael Doherty whose last known address was 12 Park Ave. in Hull, fled from the scene. At the time the Mariner went to press, Doherty was still being pursued by Cohasset police.

Andrews and Coble were arraigned in Quincy District Court Monday. Andrews was held on cash bail and subsequently sent to the Norfolk County House of Correction. Coble was able to make bail.



Hunt said within the last six to 12 months, there have been a string of break-ins at the RTF office building. He said while there have been no other arrests made to date, items stolen in the past are similar to those which were recovered Friday.

Coble has a history of criminal activity and was arrested in late August in connection with Cohasset boat break-ins. After investigating a boat going ashore on Gunrock Beach, Hull police found the boat filled with items primarily from Cohasset lobster boats. The boat was allegedly stolen from Cohasset and piloted to Hull. Stolen items included lobster pots, survival suits, rods and reels, flare kits, knives and binoculars. Coble was arrested and charged with receiving stolen property and carrying a dangerous weapon.

If you have any information regarding the break-ins, please contact Det. Garrett Hunt at the Cohasset Police Department at (781) 383-1055.

The Cohasset PSO has kicked off the school year with the Innisbrook Giftwrap Fundraiser! Be sure to open up those packets sent home from school and browse through this year's Innisbrook catalog. The selection of products are wonderful and don't forget that you are supporting our public schools, because we keep 50 percent of the profits. If there is any confusion regarding the due date for the forms: You may turn in your money and completed forms as early as Oct. 7. Keep in mind, Oct. 12 is the FINAL due date for all forms, so that we can have a delivery before December. As always, the PSO thanks you for your continued generosity and commitment to the education of our children attending the Cohasset Public Schools.

FILM NIGHT

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will be hosting an Independent Film Night tonight (Thursday) at 7:00p.m. featuring the film "Long Life, Happiness and Prosperity." Admission is free and refreshments will be served. For more information contact the library 781 383-1348.

GARDEN CLUB MEETING

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its first meeting of the season in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church at 9:30 am on Tuesday, Sept. 28. Coffee will be served at 9:00. New president Judy Dickstein will conduct the meeting, and the new club officers will discuss the current Fall Bulb Sale and other club and community events planned for the coming year.

The mycological expert Fred Saint Ours will present a fascinating program about the mysterious and often beautiful growths that are mushrooming around us after recent warm rains. Following the meeting, rain or shine, he will lead a discovery walk in Whitney Woods for all who wish to pursue the hunt. Walk participants should come prepared for weather and wear walking shoes.

GIVE CLUB A BOOST

Anyone interested in joining the Basketball Booster Club is invited to the next meeting on Sept 28 in the CHMS library at 7 p.m. This includes parents who have children playing for the high school, recreation leagues and travel leagues. Please come and join in to find what it is all about.

DERBY HOSTS FAIR

Derby Academy would like to welcome the South Shore community to its annual Fall Fair on Saturday, Oct. 2, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Rain or shine, there will be carnival games for all ages, a haunted graveyard and spooky storytelling, pony rides, live music, art activities and face painting. Thrill seekers can navigate the "Extreme Adrenaline" obstacle course, ride the giant slide, climb the rock wall and go bungee jumping. "Gourmet Galley" in the dining hall will offer a full lunch menu of fresh salads, wraps and pastas, or you can feast on grilled hotdogs, ice cream and cotton candy on the fairgrounds. There will also be a table of home-baked goods. Vendors will be selling jewelry, used books, fossils and other specialty items.

Derby will also be holding its "Swap-It" mega yard sale in Hersey gym at the edge of the fairgrounds, selling clothes, sports equipment, household items and more. The Derby campus is located at 56 Burditt Avenue, at the corner of Burditt and Fearing Avenues in Hingham. For directions to the school, please refer to www.derbyacademy.org.

TRYOUTS

The tryouts for the 2005 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Saturday, Oct. 2, at Barnes Field at 1p.m. All boys and girls turning 10, 11 or 12 prior to July 31, 2004 wishing to play Little League major league division baseball and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. Although all eligible 12 year olds are automatically assigned to major league team, their attendance is mandatory at this try-out. Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 12:30 p.m.

This will be the only opportunity to try-out. The rain date will be Saturday, Oct. 16. Questions regarding may be directed to either Liam O'Connell at 781-383-9538 or Nancy Froio at 781-383-1897.

COME DISCOVER

A full day of festivities for the entire South Shore is taking place on Oct. 2. Our World Childrens Global Discovery Museum is celebrating the dedication of the Brooks Thomsen Singer Performance Center and the opening of our toddler play space. This daylong event includes performances by The Tale Spinners, Inca Son Music & Dance, Gary the Silent Clown from Ringling Bros. Circus and Ryanhood along with face painting and arts & crafts activities for the kids. A dedication and a specially choreographed dance piece performed by the Meredith Butulis Dance Ensemble will be a couple of the special highlights of the day. The celebration begins at 10 a.m. admission is $4 for adults, $2 for children and $10 for families up to 6 members. Rain or shine. Parking is free. Call 781-383-3198 for more information.

EAT UP

The Cohasset Soccer Boosters will be holding its annual Pancake Breakfast on Sunday, Oct. 3, from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Deer Hill School Cafeteria. Enjoy a great breakfast, try your luck at some fabulous raffle prizes, even get your car washed while you're eating! Tickets are $5 per person and are available from high school players, at upcoming school events and soccer games, or at the door. Bring the whole family and help support our high school soccer teams!

Als,o the annual Harvest Supper and Auction, an autumn tradition, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church St. in Cohasset.

INTERGENERATIONAL REPUBLICANS

The public is invited to get together for dinner on Thursday evening, Sept. 30 at 6:30 p.m. Dinner will include ham, string beans, Harvard beets, mashed potatoes, dessert as well as beverages. The harvest auction will take place following supper. Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for children. Reserve your tickets by calling 781-383-1298.

YOU GO GIRLS

The Cohasset Girl Scouts held a townwide ceremony last Friday evening for Bronze & Silver Award recognition, bridging, investiture and rededications.

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund and state Rep. Garret J. Bradley were on hand to recognize the following girls on their accomplishments and to encourage those who are still working on their awards. WEDDING

Edgar - Cellucci

On July 4, 2004, at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset, Jennifer Anne Cellucci, daughter of Judith and Daniel Cellucci of Cohasset, became the bride of Robert Joseph Edgar III.

Mr. Edgar is the son of Patricia and Robert Edgar of Hanover.

The Rev. John Mulvehill performed the Nuptial Mass.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Attending her as maid of honor was her sister, Amanda Cellucci of Quincy. Serving as bridesmaids were Trish Edgar of Hanover, sister of the groom; Christina MacDonald of Arlington; Lisa Thompson of Hingham; Tara Wainwright of North Carolina, cousin of the bride; and Laurie VanGerp of Illinois. The flower girl was Claudia Cellucci of Weymouth and the ring bearer was Jared DiPietro of Weymouth.

Performing the duties of best man were Mark Edgar of New York and Greg Edgar of Hanover, brothers of the groom. Serving as ushers were Aaron Haak of Florida, Brad Nail of Abington and Timothy Byrne of Quincy, cousin of the groom.

The bride, a graduate of Notre Dame Academy and Fairfield University, is employed in the advertising department at Talbot's.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joseph Edgar III

Her husband is a graduate of Xavarian Brothers High School and Auburn University. He is employed in equity sales for Guardian Investor Services.

After a reception at the World Trade Center, Boston, and a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple are residing in Weymouth.

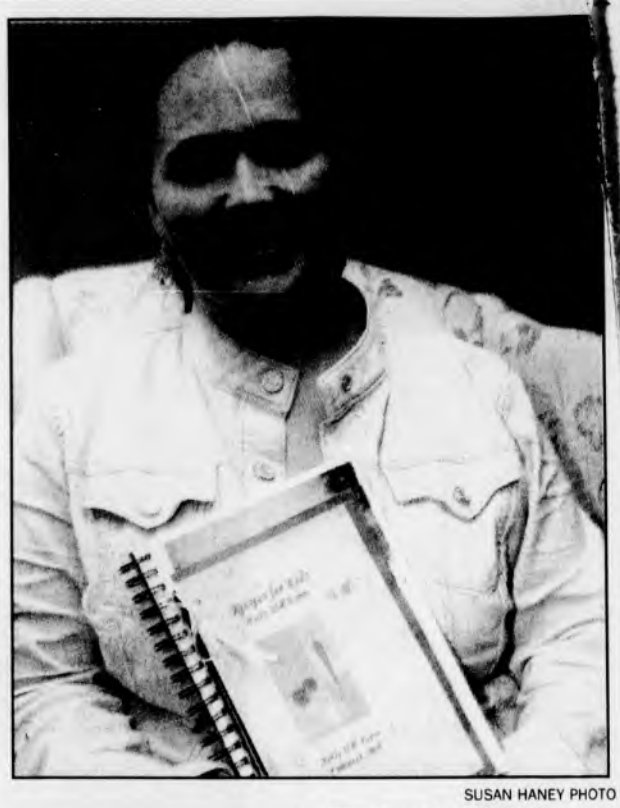
Girl Scout's cookbook serves up Silver Award

Local farm used as resource



By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Nestled between books written by Martha Stewart and the Barefoot Contessa, a cookbook designed and compiled by Girl Scout Katie Callahan will soon be found in many Cohasset kitchens. Using locally grown produce as her inspiration, Katie worked with Holly Hill Farm to create a cookbook that would not only be child-friendly, but promote the use of local, organic produce for everyday meals.

Katie's cookbook, titled "Recipes for Kids : Holly Hill Farm," was created as a project which earned her a Girl Scout Silver Award. The Silver Award is the second highest honor a Girl Scout can receive and requires much hard work and dedication. Katie is currently a sophomore at Cohasset High School and has been a Girl Scout since she was 5 years old. She, along with three other girls from Troop 4778, were presented with their Silver Awards during a ceremony held last Friday night.

While some of the recipes in Katie's cookbook were collected by the farm, some are Callahan family favorites, and some are Katie's own original creations. "I've taste-tested most of them," she said, adding, "They all have at least one ingredient you can get at the farm."

Katie's mother Alison, who is also one of two leaders for the troop, has been very involved with the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, a non-profit organization which uses the farm for educational purposes, using its many acres as an outdoor classroom. During the summer, children who participate in the Young Farmers' program are taught the ways of organic farming, and prepare a meal for their families using what they have harvested. Katie said the farm has been wanting to publish a cookbook, and they were thrilled when she volunteered her services.

Girl Scout Katie Callahan holds the cookbook she designed and published to earn her Silver Award, the second highest honor a Girl Scout can receive.

The cookbook is broken down by section, and is easy for children to follow. At the very beginning, she has illustrations she created of kitchen utensils children might need to use to make some of the recipes, such as measuring cups, pots, and pans, to help them prepare for what could be their first venture into the kitchen. The very detailed drawings which span two pages, took Katie 8-1/2 hours to draw.

In addition, Katie has a section which outlines cooking rules, to ensure children proceed with caution and safety, and have their parent's permission before putting on their aprons.

Most of the book is broken down by vegetable. Recipes for carrots, cucumbers, kale, potatoes, and tomatoes and a number of other organically grown items found on the farm are included. There is a special section for salads, and Katie includes recipes both for traditional green salads as well as potato and tomato salads.

Children, as well as some adults, may not have much experience using herbs, which are grown in abundance at the farm. Katie's cookbook outlines the different kinds of herbs and the dishes they can be added to enhance flavor.

Silver Award projects are very detailed endeavors, and Katie said hers began in August of 2003. Because she used photos from the farm as illustrations in the book, much of her project was on hold while she waited for the spring and summer to arrive again, so she could photograph the vegetables while they were in season.

While she waited for the seasons to chance, Katie had much design work to complete. She completed the layout on her home computer and said all the written copy had to be specially formatted for the pages. "I got halfway through and had to reformat it again," she said, which took even more time. The pages for the book are printed on both sides, meaning formatting was a hefty job, and Katie said it took her 11 hours just to complete the layout of the pages.

Katie's cookbook is a community service project, and is available free of charge at the Holly Hill Farmstand. Katie said she dropped off 35 black and white copies at the farm stand last week, and hopes to have color copies available in the future.

In addition to Girl Scouts, Katie said she loves to swim and she also plays both the guitar and the piano. "I'm very musically oriented," she said. Katie said she likes to listen to classic rock by artists like Jimi Hendrix and Led Zeppelin. Katie also said she likes to travel and has driven down to Florida with her family five times.

Mt. Blue event to raise funds for Zimbabwe farmers

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

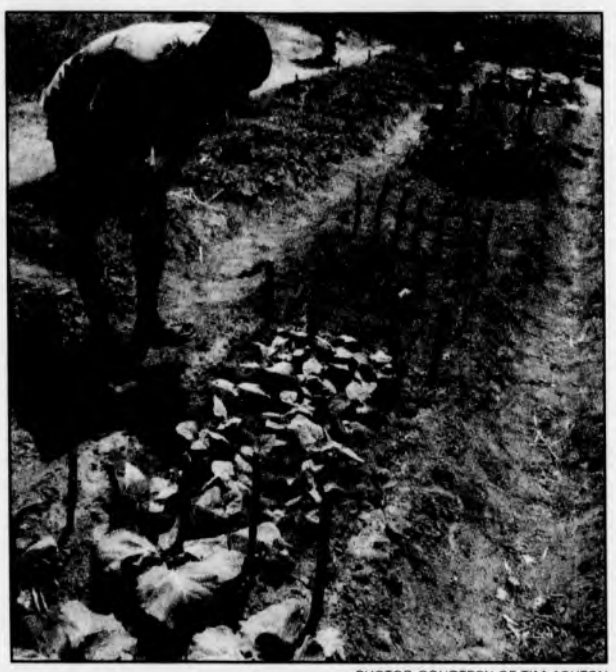
Jerusalem Road in Cohasset is arguably one of the most beautiful drives in Massachusetts, a windy road that weaves along the Atlantic Coast, while serving as home to some of the area's most beautiful — and expensive — homes. On one end of the road, seemingly out of place amongst its residential neighbors, is Holly Hill Farm. Similarly, on the farm and a long way from home, is Zimbabwe farmer Tim Ashton.

"The basic idea is to get the community to feed itself. There's a lot of hungry folk out there."
— Tim Ashton

For the past five years Ashton, who serves as Holly Hill's manager, has been studying and working in the field of organic farming in the United States, first on the West Coast, and now on the South Shore. Later this year, he plans to return to Africa, and bring with him the knowledge and methods he's learned here in the States. In Zimbabwe he plans to establish a training center where his fellow countrymen can be shown how to produce stronger harvests without overtaxing their land.

South Shore residents can learn more about Ashton and his organization, Gomango Trust, during a benefit that will be held at Norwell's Mount Blue Restaurant on Sunday, Oct. 3 from 5-9 p.m.

The event will feature a number of elements with an African theme including African music, a drum circle, and a menu that will include South African appetizers and wines. There will also be silent and live auctions featuring paintings, pottery and jewelry that have been donated to help bolster the fundraising, from South Shore artisans.



Ashton will present a slide show of images from Africa, and the work Gomango is doing there, and he will give a brief discussion on the crises facing Zimbabwean farmers.

As recently as five years ago, Ashton said Zimbabwe was considered "the breadbasket of Southern Africa," but because of political instability which has included some destructive land reform policies, today 70 percent of the nation's workers are unemployed, and inflation is out of control.

STAFF PHOTO/BERT LANE

Tim Ashton, the manager of Cohasset's Holly Hill Farm, discusses his plans to improve farming methods in Zimbabwe.

Viola Shayera examines bush beans at a demonstration garden in Guruve, Zimbabwe. By teaching farming methods which the land can more easily sustain, Tim Ashton says a family of six can grow enough food on a 100 square meter plot of land, to feed itself for an entire year.

The average farmer in Zimbabwe today has approximately two acres of arable land, said Ashton, but because of a shortage of fertilizer, their harvests decrease each year.

Add to this the region's minimal amount of annual rainfall, and numerous additional problems including the rampant spread of HIV/AIDS throughout the country, and the outlook for Zimbabwe and its farmers looks bleak.

But Ashton sees hope for his homeland.

"It's all about water there," said Ashton. "You can grow anything if you can get enough water."

If the farmers can be taught to employ water conservation methods including drip irrigation, foot-powered pumps, or even the use of solar energy, their harvests will grow.

By using more natural compost, and other farming methods that rely less on the use of fertilizers, including crop rotation and saving seeds, he added that farmers working on a plot of 100 square meters can feed a family of six for an entire year.

"The basic idea is to get the community to feed itself," said Ashton. "There's a lot of hungry folk out there."

Gomango has already established a handful of "demonstration gardens" in Africa, where local farmers can view first-hand how the alternative methods work, but they are also planning to establish the Gomango Agroecology and Sustainable Living Center in Mutorashanga, Zimbabwe.

Viola Shayera (front) and Kensie Matsikwa work at a demonstration garden that Gomango Trust has established in the Zimbabwean town of Guruve.

Ashton is planning to return to Zimbabwe after Thanksgiving.

"I've worked on a farm all my life," he said. "I feel a strong drawing to go back there."

The organizer of the Mt. Blue fundraiser, Scituate resident Debbie Roffo, met Ashton on the day she showed up to volunteer at Holly Hill.

After meeting Ashton and learning about his background and goal, Roffo said she was inspired to get involved on his behalf, and for the people of Zimbabwe.

"They need the basics, food, the necessities of life," said Roffo.

The following day, Roffo introduced Ashton to Jayne Bowe, co-owner of Mt. Blue.

Bowe, who's also a member of the North River Gardener's Club, said she was happy to get involved.

"I was really amazed at his story, and he's here on the South Shore," she said.

"It happened easily so it was meant to be," added Roffo.

Tickets for the event are $40 and can be purchased at the door, or reserved by calling Mount Blue at (781) 659-0050.

The first cut narrows field of candidates

résumés found in the pile which were put aside for future review, and the committee feels very optimistic about the process going forward.

"I think we've made a great first pass," said Spofford.

Pease suggested the next round of cuts — set for Monday — should break candidates down into three categories: those who have Massachusetts municipal experience; those who have the same experience but are from out-of-state; and anyone in the private sector who has relevant experience. Pease said he agrees with comments made by Selectman Ralph Dormitzer at a joint meeting of the two boards last week, that candidates do not necessarily have to come from strictly municipal backgrounds.

Dormitzer has been very vocal about his interest to push municipal experience aside as the most important quality for a new manager, and look for candidates with a strong business background, who can serve as the kind of leader the town needs. In his view, the perfect candidate would be someone with values who can energize others, is intelligent, ethical, and emotionally mature, and exercises self-control.

Pease said it will be a tough decision in weeding through the applications because "you won't get the softer stuff in the résumés," such as emotional qualities, but they will help guide the process. However, he said interviews will be more indicative of the kind of people the applicants really are.

The current staff has the knowledge to be able to help with the municipal aspects of the job in the beginning, said Pease, should the town decide to go with someone with a business background. Members of the committee agreed the current staff, especially acting Town Manager Michael Buckley and treasurer/tax collector DiVito, are doing and have done a wonderful job. However, without any municipal experience, committee members say it might be hard for the new candidate to hit the ground running, which is what the town needs. However, Pease said someone from the business world who has relevant experience for the position could do a great job with the town, with a little help. For instance, "Someone who had run an Internet company would not make sense, but someone who had run a transportation company would make sense," he said.

Pease said with the Special Town Meeting slated for Dec. 6, it would be "wonderful," to have a new Town Manager in place. However, he noted that after someone is hired, they will need time to close out their former job and should take some down time to clear their head before stepping into a new role. He said anyone hired in time for Town Meeting should absolutely be in attendance, as it will help them get a feel for the town and its governmental process, but not act in any sort of management role.

Committee member Nan Roth said in looking over all the résumés so far, she has only found two really solid candidates who would be just what the town is looking for. DiVito said of all the candidates, he had chosen two top contenders, but upon further scrutiny, one had moved around from job to job and hadn't held on to a position for very long. He then narrowed down his top choice to only one candidate. The majority of the committee said they felt there were probably two or three candidates at most that were really strong contenders for the position, but everyone will be equally considered.

DiVito said the sooner the group can come to a consensus on candidates it would like to interview the better because of the fierce competition for Town Manager positions. "We don't want to lose out," he said. Even with the small amount of potential contenders for the position, when Pease asked, "Is there a Town Manager in this group," of candidates, the consensus was, there is.

The day after the meeting, eight more résumés came in, and DiVito said there are some "really great candidates" in the latest group. He said usually the "heavy hitters," send their résumés in as the deadline approaches, which is what seems to be happening now. In addition, DiVito has been doing some behind-the-scenes recruiting of his own to help add to the pool.

A former co-worker and friend of DiVito's has been conducting a mini-search on behalf of the town, and has been proactively contacting candidates with the skills Cohasset is looking for, who might not otherwise hear of the opportunity.

"Out of the 12 e-mails she sent, the leading candidate responded," said DiVito. While the potential candidate has not yet sent in his résumé, DiVito said he has spoken with him on the phone and he asked a lot of great questions about the position. DiVito said the candidate is currently an Assistant Town Manager and is working in a town which is slightly larger than Cohasset, and that he would be willing to relocate for the position. Overall, "He seemed like a promising candidate," said DiVito.

However, the committee agreed because of the importance of the position and as Flynn put it, the "musical chairs," with town managers in the state and the need to fill vacancies, it would be a good idea to begin interviewing third party search firms, just in case one is needed in the future. While there are currently some very good candidates in the running, if in the end due to whatever reason, the town doesn't have five solid candidates to present to the Board of Selectmen, as it has requested, the committee may choose to use the services of a search firm to find additional candidates.

"We've been hired to find the top position in the community," said Spofford, adding hiring a search firm at some point might make sense.

Browne asked how the selectmen felt about paying for the consultants should they be needed. Spofford said he thought the general consensus of the board was that it is better not to be "Penny wise and pound foolish." Spofford also said he thinks the cost for a search firm could be between $25,000 and $30,000. "But it's the CEO of your company," that you're hiring, he said.

At the committee's next meeting, slated for Monday, at 7 p.m. at Town Hall, members will each come in with their top candidates, which will include résumés submitted this week. The deadline for applications is Sept. 28.

the society's legal counsel, have been contacted about the matter and neither one has been able to find anything in the town's bylaws that require a shade tree hearing for trees located on private property.

In addition, O'Malley said a recent property boundary survey of the two museums, conducted by Neil Murphy, states the trees are both located on Historical Society property — meaning the town has no jurisdiction over the matter.

The trees would be removed as part of a drainage project to help restore the buildings. Patrick Guthrie, the preservation architect the society is working with on the project, explained the maritime building was partially built on ledge, and water currently flows through the north wall, down through the south wall, and out. There will be some ledge removal necessary to re-route the water, and while that may not affect the tree, if it does at some point then the tree becomes too weak and falls. He said the building is the last remaining of its kind and is irreplaceable.

If the building is damaged, the collection inside will be damaged, which holds the key to many aspects of the town's history.

In addition, since one tree is very close to the Maritime Museum, its roots are disrupting the foundation as well as the front walkway, and would make it very difficult to construct an accessibility ramp at the main entrance to the building.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggesting creating a new entrance at the side of the building, away from the trees, but the Society feels that could harm the historical nature of the building. The tree also covers a good portion of the building, and is causing moisture damage because the sunlight cannot get through. Guthrie said he imagines the problem will only continue to worsen.

"It would be tragic if that building was compromised," he said.

But Dormitzer said he has never heard of a tree's roots ever severely impacting the foundation of a building. "There are reasons roots are a problem, and that's not one of them." He added in terms of moisture problems, if the gutters are cleaned out regularly, that can greatly help the problem and trimming branches to allow sunlight in could help as well.

Members of the society say while they are willing to work with the town, they reiterated there is nothing in the town's bylaws that says the town has any jurisdiction over the tree because the Society owns the land. However, the selectmen say there is a gray area in terms of whether the town can tell it not to remove the trees.

While the society is heading up the drainage project, it is being paid for with money from the Community Preservation Fund, which selectmen say is essentially taxpayer dollars. When accepting the funds, the Historical Society agreed to a deed restriction for the property, stating it will always be used for public purposes. "Yes, it is private property, but it's quasi town property," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan

O'Malley said the Historical Society is prepared to pay for the tree removal, but Sullivan said that is not the issue. "It's not the cost of taking it down, it's concern on the part of people who don't want to lose their trees," he said. Tree Warden Andy Swanson said both trees are healthy.

Dormitzer said the trees are the last remaining large trees on Elm Street, and once they're gone, "You never have a chance to replicate them." He said he didn't think it was fair of the society to take one of the trees down before it suffers any damage, when it is unknown whether the construction will harm the root structure or not. "They're both at least 75 feet tall and at least 2 feet in diameter," said Dormitzer, and should be seen as an asset to the town.

Jim Shipsky, 58 Doane St., is also in support of saving the trees. He said for years he has had his office in a 200-year-old carriage house next to a 275-year-old oak tree. He said the roots go under the foundation of the building, and have never done any damage. He said the tree next to the Maritime Museum is an "utterly magnificent tree. What an asset. It would be a great tragedy to destroy it."

However, Werner Diekmann of the society said at this point, the choice is either to "preserve the building or preserve the tree," and he would choose the former.

Sullivan said it doesn't sound like all the options have been considered as an arborist has not yet looked at the trees.

For now, the appointment to cut the trees down has been postponed and the Historical Society has agreed to have an arborist look at the trees this week. The Historical Society will come before the board again Tuesday, Sept. 28.

Team to raise money for autism research

The National Alliance of Autism Research (NAAR), founded in 1994, is the first organization in the country dedicated to funding and accelerating biomedical research to unlock the mysteries of autism spectrum disorders. To date, NAAR has committed more than $11 million of fund research projects and fellowships wordwide.

The H.I.K.E.R.S. (Hingham Inspires Knowledge, Education, Research and Support for autism) is a community group of friends and families for autism research. All proceeds from fund raisers benefit the national Alliance for autism Research (NAAR).

Autism is a complex brain disorder that often impairs a person's ability to communicate, respond to surroundings, or form relationships with others.

Autism spectrum disorders affect people of all racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic backgrounds and occur in an estimated one in every 250 births. Some studies place the prevalence of autism spectrum disorders even higher. Recent prevalence studies suggest that more than 1 million Americans are living with autism spectrum disorder. This makes autism spectrum disorders the second most common developmental disability after mental retardation.

Currently the causes of autism are unknown and there are no scientific medical treatments or cures. Physicians have no blood test or diagnostic scan to diagnose the disorder. The diagnosis of autism spectrum disorder is based solely on the observation of behaviors.

Despite increasing national interest in autism and strikingly high prevalence, autism research remains one for the lowest funded areas of research by both private and public sectors.

The primary fund raiser for the H.I.K.E.R.S. is the annual Walk Far for NAAR event held at Artesani Park in Brighton. Last September they raised more than $30,000 for NAAR through the generous donations of the community. This years event will be held on Sunday, Oct. 3, at Artesani Park, e.k. Designs Jewelry from Cohasset is sponsoring the H.I.K.E.R.S. this year. Elizabeth Kissick has designed an "Autism Awareness Bracelet." To view and purchase the bracelet go to www.ekdesignsjewelry.com and click on bracelets with a meaning. All proceeds will benefit N.A.A.R.

Anyone interested in joining the H.I.K.E.R.S. can call Amy Anderson at 781-749-7712, Wendy Griffin, 781-749-4436 or Karen Shusterman at 781-749-8568. All Tax-deductible donations to N.A.A.R. can be mailed to Paula Baldassini, 15 Liberty Rd., Hingham, MA 02043.

Help us make emergency care even better

Claudia Dolphin, Chair
Friends of Emergency Care

Nearly a year ago, I enthusiastically volunteered to organize a community group to advise South Shore Hospital's emergency department. The group's purpose would be to provide input from the patient's perspective. I viewed it as an opportunity to give back to an organization so vital to people of our region.

I was eager to support quality emergency care primarily because emergency services touch people in ways that few charitable causes do. We, or someone we love, will likely need South Shore Hospital's emergency care. Rather than hope or assume that what we expect will be available, shouldn't we all get involved to assure that it is?

I believe that the hospital's emergency department is an essential resource for our community. I was intrigued that even though the hospital had already invested millions to double the size and scope of its emergency care, it wanted to do even more. So I agreed to help.

After some planning, I convened the first meeting of the Friends of Emergency Care in January 2004. We started as a handful of people, some with emergency department experiences that didn't meet our expectations. Now, we have 70 members involved, with another 90 interested in joining us. Many are grateful patients or family members. We hope that many more will join us.

As volunteers, our first job was to learn about what's involved in providing emergency care. We discovered that at South Shore Hospital it takes a team of 350 people to care for as many as 200 patients a day. We learned that with 75,000 patient visits a year, South Shore Hospital has the second busiest emergency department in Eastern Massachusetts.

It has been rewarding to meet so many talented doctors, nurses, and other professionals who genuinely want to provide the best possible emergency care. We were candid when describing our personal emergency experiences. The staff welcomed our appreciative comments, but really wanted to hear about opportunities to improve. I, for one, was impressed.

Since our first meetings, we've already seen many positive changes. A nurse now greets each patient, so that the process of evaluating the seriousness of each emergency can begin right away. A concierge focuses on keeping patients and families informed about any delays in care. The waiting room has been made more comfortable, with a snack area nearby for the family and friends of those receiving emergency care.

The Friends of Emergency Care continues to provide input about how to enhance the emergency department experience. Eventually, we will help in other ways — some of us will continue as advisors, others will volunteer in the ED itself, some will help fund-raising that will support emergency care, while others will work at convincing public officials to more adequately fund the care.

You may have read a letter from Braintree resident Robert Walsh (who is not a member of our group) that was published in the Patriot Ledger. He wrote, in part, "I realize what has happened at South Shore Hospital. They have become the busiest ER because they are the best in the area."

I couldn't agree more with Mr. Walsh. People arrive in emergency rooms with all types of problems. Some could cause death in minutes, others are far less serious. How quickly patients receive care is determined by how sick they are, not by how long they've waited. Those who are in most urgent need of care receive it first — and experienced nurses and doctors continually assess new patients to assure that standard is met.

If you're like me and want your friends and neighbors to benefit from the expert emergency care that only South Shore Hospital offers, here's how you can help:

- Judge for yourself. Learn about what distinguishes South Shore Hospital. Visit southshorehospital.org and click on "There is a Difference" to see a video that will tell you more.
- Join our group. You are welcome whether or not you've ever visited South Shore Hospital's emergency department. Please call (781) 340-4170 for details.

South Shore Hospital has proven to me that it is constantly improving and that our feedback is valued. We are indeed fortunate to have such expertise close to our homes. I know the team at South Shore Hospital wants nothing more than to protect our health and well-being.

OPINION

Thinking outside of the box

The town manager search committee certainly has its work out for it.

From what we have seen in our dealings with numerous other municipalities on the South Shore and Cape Cod, finding an experienced individual to lead a town is a challenge at best. Add to that all the specific qualifications Cohasset is looking for in a candidate and you can see how the process may take some time.

In today's competitive market candidates for town manager or town executive roles are garnering top dollar and are being wooed by multiple towns who recognize they need the best in this changing and complex world. Cohasset's search is ongoing with applicants having until Sept. 28 to send in applications and currently, the town is not at a loss for interest in the position with more than 50 resumes received to date. But once those were whittled down this week, the search committee came up with a possible list of 19 applicants for the modest $100,000 a year job. Yes, modest is the term for the salary given today's standards. Just take a look at the Massachusetts Municipal Association's newsletter and you'll see all the openings and the salaries they generate.

At this week's meeting, the search committee began grouping candidates in the definite no category and one worth further exploration. Candidates remaining will be reviewed based on several fronts: someone first and foremost with Massachusetts municipal experience, whether it be operational such as a department head; a candidate with municipal experience who may be from out of state; and thirdly, a business person who has strong qualifications as a leader.

It seems like the town is looking for a lot in one individual. No one candidate has everything a search committee or hiring manager is looking for when a position opens up. We do, however, applaud the town for wanting it all, but it must be realistic.

That's why we think Selectman Ralph Dormitzer may be on to something when he said last week Cohasset leaders might be wise to look for someone with more business experience and focus less on municipal experience. We think he's right when he said Cohasset needs the kind of leader who has values, can energize others, is intelligent, ethical and emotionally mature. Someone from the business world who knows how to lead and direct a company, because Cohasset is a business after all.

We agree with the theory that there are many qualified people in town who have enough knowledge about municipal government to help a smart, savvy business person get up to speed pretty quick. The town is fortunate to have the likes of Michael Buckley as director of finance and Joe Divito as treasurer/tax collector who "get it" and seem open to share their experiences.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris is also right in that the town doesn't have time right now to provide "on the job training." But that may be underestimating a strong candidate's ability to limit the "learning curve."

We urge the committee and selectmen not to undervalue the role an experienced business leader can play, even if he or she has limited municipal experience.

Law of Inverse Proportion:

In spite of Cohasset's high per-pupil spending, SAT scores, teacher salary, student-teacher ratio and percentage of 4-year colleges attended, Boston Magazine ranked Cohasset 69th

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Spare the trees

TO THE EDITOR:

The Village Renaissance Committee strongly objects to the Cohasset Historical Society's decision to cut down the two beautiful, mature ash trees on the site of the Maritime Museum and the Captain John Wilson House on Elm Street. We are surprised and disappointed that an organization dedicated to preserving the historic character and beauty of Cohasset would consider such an action.

The argument that a handicap ramp might be built in 10 years does not justify removing the tree in front of the museum now. Nor is cutting down the other tree to avoid possible root damage a desirable solution. There must be a better way!

Leaving ugly stumps where once stood two tall trees that grace both the site and downtown Cohasset is not in the public interest. We hope that the Historical Society will reconsider its decision.

Jacqueline Dormitzer, Ann Whelan, and Anna Abbruzzese, for Village Renaissance
111 Atlantic Ave.

Cohasset mason helps cat shelter

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset mason Brendan St. John and his crew devoted the first third of their Labor Day weekend, a beautiful end of summer Saturday, to helping some less fortunate than themselves have a little light in their lives:

Thanks in great part to Brendan's hard work and generosity, the cats of Hull Seaside Animal Rescue have windows from which to view the world, an exciting one at that — one of the windows oversees the dumpster, and surely when we arrive in the morning to feed our guests and clean their rooms, the cats will look up bleary-eyed, exhausted from watching all the nightly activity.

Thanks to Brendan St. John and his crew that insisted upon doing all this work free of charge, the cats will have healthier air to breathe and a state of mind that comes from having a "room with a view." Thank you Brendan et al. You've done a service that will brighten the lives of so many for years to come.

TO THE EDITOR:

Allow me to add my kudos to Chief Hussey for his traffic management skills.

I too was delighted when I saw a uniformed officer directing traffic last Wednesday morning (Sept. 15) at the ever-congested-during-rush-hour intersection of King Street and Rte. 3A. I made sure to extend a special "thank you" as I drove by. Sorry to say, I never imagined it was the new chief waving traffic by.

When public service employees, especially those who lead and supervise over others, extend themselves above and beyond it sets an example for everyone, including the public at large.

Don't take the stones

TO THE EDITOR:

From time to time we see people helping themselves to stones from Cohasset's beaches and marine structures like the sea wall at Parker Avenue. Apparently, stones make good landscaping features.

There's no denying there's a lot of rocks in Cohasset, and many people see no harm in removing a few from a breakwater or beach. However, both the state Wetlands Protection Act and Cohasset's bylaws make it illegal to remove them, and for no good reason.

Coastal sites are very fragile and complex; subject to impact from nature and man. Stones are an integral part of the beach system, absorbing kinetic energy from waves during storm events. Their removal effects the beach's natural defense as the stones help dissipate the energy of wind and waves, thereby protecting our shoreline.

Similarly, removal of filler rocks from breakwaters and other marine structures allows waves to penetrate into the voids, which can eventually undermine the supporting ground and lead to structural failure.

Most of us begin our fascination with beach rocks when we're young, pocketing sea glass and those nice smooth white pebbles. I'm not suggesting that we empty children's pockets, but only want to point out that as adults, we bear the responsibility for educating ourselves and our children, and helping to conserve our sea coast as much as possible for future generations.

Saving old buildings is topic of Hingham lecture

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO JOURNAL

Jane Nylander has made it her goal to recognize and help preserve as many as possible of our historic buildings, objects and gardens.

She has done that through a multitude of positions she has held, from serving as president of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, to being senior curator at Old Sturbridge Village; by teaching American and New England Studies at Boston University, and history at the University of New Hampshire; by mounting exhibitions, publishing numerous articles, and by lecturing extensively on New England social history and domestic interiors, textiles and clothing, as well as on the significance, organization and management of collections for museums, historical societies, antique shows and collectors groups across the United States and in England.

It is as a lecturer that Nylander is coming to old Derby Academy in Hingham, on Sept. 30, at the invitation of the Hingham Historical Society.

On that occasion, she says, the subject will be "the history of interest in New England's past, from the 18th century, and I'll probably take it up to the early 20th century when many of the local historical societies were founded."

Speaking over the phone from her home in Portsmouth, N.H., Nylander went on to explain how important has been the role of antiquarians — such as she herself is — in the preservation of our collective past.

"I think they have expanded our understanding of the world in which we live, the historical influences that affect the way we perceive our environment and our material culture."

Through their efforts, much of the past has been saved, she continues. But, at the same time, much has been lost – through fire, urban renewal and the need of many people to develop any piece of land that can turn a profit. She cites as great losses the Old Indian House in Deerfield and John Hancock's house in Boston.

"But, then, every community has lost important buildings."

Nylander has been interested in historic buildings for as long as she can remember, "since I was a child." By the time she was in graduate school her expertise in antiquities and the interest in their preservation had grown to the point she was questioning what she was being taught

"They said that interest began with the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. But I knew that didn't make sense, because I knew that as far back as (the settling of) Plymouth (individuals) began paying attention to their history." That fascination increased, says Nylander, during Plymouth's bicentennial in 1820

In the face of wrong information being disseminated, Nylander "began collecting bits of information about this topic," a pursuit that gained focus and purpose in the early '70s, when historian Jonathan Fairbanks founded the department of American Decorative Arts and Sculpture at Boston's Museum of Fine Arts.

"He asked me to do a lecture on the history of collecting. I spent a couple of months doing research, and that began what's become a lifetime interest in the history of collecting and the history of people's interest in the past."

While collecting grew out of people's needs to hold on to their own family histories, it has become a way for a society to understand itself and learn where it has been. In her own endless odyssey to know our beginnings, Nylander will use this visit to Hingham to do some exploring.

"I haven't been to Hingham in about 15 years, but I remember it being very attractive and having lots of wonderful buildings. That's one of the reasons I'm excited to be coming.

"So, I've arranged to do some touring after the lecture."

"Relics of the Olden Time," a slide lecture, will begin at 10 a.m., Sept. 30 at Old Derby on Main Street following a half-hour refreshment period. Admission is $12 for members; $15 for non-members. To purchase tickets, mail a check for the number of tickets needed, payable to the Hingham Historical Society, and addressed to P. O. Box 434, Hingham, MA 02043. Reservations will be held at the door. One also may pay $15 at the door if seats are available. For more information, call 781-749-0144.

To everything, there is a season —

COMMON GROUND

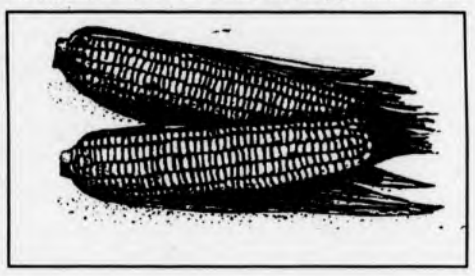
AMY WHORF MCGUIGGAN

To everything, turn, turn, turn
There is a season, turn, turn, turn
And a time for every purpose, under Heaven

Summer, we hardly knew you. Where did you go, you and your lazy, hazy days when doing nothing was doing everything. To be fair to summer, Mother Nature was not at her best this year and it was hard to get into a summer mood, but even if she were, we are a society that doesn't do summer very well. Remember when the days of summer would pay out, like a fishing line? You'd cast your line, sometime in late June, then sit back, let it slacken and drift where it would, let whatever might be out there take a nibble. Then, come September, you'd reel it back in, reluctantly, hoping that you had hooked a few memories, a few keepers to show for the summer.

These days, even if we wanted summer to unwind in a leisurely way, the world around us wont let it. We are hostages to clocks and calendars and everyone else's timetables. The outside world sets the pace. You know something's awry when a 12-year-old remarks that the summer flew by. When I was 12, the summers seemed endless, and happily so. I had no concept of time, but for the rising and setting sun that loosely defined the day. What can you say to that 12-year-old except that when you're pushing 50 the summers go even faster, and I'm guessing that at 70 they are faster still.

And so, the summer we hardly knew is winding down. The wheel of the year turns and behind us is Labor Day, an artificial date on the calendar that, for most folks, seems to stop summer dead in its tracks, even though summer officially ended at the autumnal equinox, when the sun crossed the equator on its way south just after midday on Sept. 22. We won't notice any real change at that moment, but knowing that there is that pivot point on the calendar reminds us of the passage of time. At the equator, day and night will be perfectly, though briefly, balanced — 12 hours of each. Here, a bit north, the night will be a smidgeon longer than the day. The sun will rise due east and set due west, and every day thereafter its light will grow meeker, its slanting rays lower, until Dec. 21 when the sun, at its weakest, will be reborn at the solstice.



For ancient peoples of many cultures, the autumnal equinox was a time of ritual and feast, an opportunity to give thanks, to deepen one's connection to the Earth, to celebrate her bounty. Then, the success or failure of the crops meant the difference between life and death over the long, harsh days of winter. We no longer depend on the harvest for our very survival — and through the miracle of modern agriculture and transportation, our larders are never really empty, even during the "off season," — and yet, while it seems we are disconnected from our agricultural past, we retain vestiges of those days when natural rhythms — the plumping of the fruits, the browning of the nuts, the falling of the leaves — defined the season.

We celebrate the bringing in of the crops with corn, pumpkin and harvest festivals. Some of us still freeze and can, a throw back to the days when it was impossible to get anything fresh during the winter months. Now, we "put food up" for sheer enjoyment and look forward to that dark, cold day in January or February when a scratch tomato sauce or dollop of beach plum jelly brings back a whiff of summer. We still know the September full moon by its Native American name, the Harvest moon (Sept. 28), and most of us are familiar with the old agricultural adage, "Make hay while the sun shines." Come November, when the very last of the harvest is in we, too, will sit down and give thanks.

And, everywhere, it seems, farmers" markets are sprouting up, reminding us of olden days and simple days, of vast rolling farmland and isolated villages, of self-sufficiency and human resourcefulness — things made by human hands. That the number of markets has increased dramatically in the past decade surely says something about our desire to hold onto our heritage, however tenuously. More than 3,000 markets now exist across the country, providing farm fresh produce and homemade goods direct to the public while helping to preserve agricultural enterprises and open space.

But there is, sadly, a whisper in the colorful farmer's market bounty of something coming to an end. Change is imminent and now is the time to appreciate what has come to fruition, and to plan for next year. If there was failure or disappointment this year, there is always next year to try again — or to begin something entirely new.

And so, with this year's harvest I, too, hear the whisper of something coming to an end. On Jan. 14, 1999, I debuted this nature column with a piece about the weather. I named the column, Common Ground, out of admiration for one of my favorite writers, Robert Finch, who wrote a book of eloquent essays with the same title, and also because I believed that nature was something we all had, or could have, in common. In 56 columns I have written about everything from jellyfish, butterflies, Button Island, coyotes, fire, road kill and club mosses to nature folklore, animal tracks, birds' nests, the Home Meadows, Stellwagon Bank, Newfoundland, snowflakes, wildflowers and Quests. There was never any rhyme or reason to my subjects except that they piqued my curiosity and I wanted to learn more. In choosing my subjects, my motives were selfish, but being a regular sort of person with no formal science or naturalist training, I figured that if I was interested, Mariner readers might be, too.

Over the years, I digested piles of information and met dozens of fascinating people who loved what they were doing out there in nature. The intellectual benefits were, however, only the beginning. What the column really provided was the opportunity for me to nurture my appreciation for the natural world and deepen my own connectedness to the Earth. So bountiful and fascinating is Mother Nature that I could easily write for five more years and never exhaust her potential or even begin to understand her mystery.

However, to everything there is a season. I have a new project that is begging for my undivided attention and I am certain that there is another voice out there that could use the space I have been occupying to teach us all about something new, to make us see the world in a different way. I owe Mary Ford my deepest thanks for all her encouragement and enthusiasm over the years. She provided whatever space I needed, frequently let me sneak a column in after the paper's deadline, and gave me the opportunity, every month, to communicate my love of the natural world with Journal readers. We should all be so fortunate to be able to do what we love and to have someone so supportive in our life. I looked forward, eagerly, every month, to researching and writing the column and I can only hope that I have opened a few eyes, as I have my own, to the extraordinary gifts that greet us every day when we step outdoors.

A time to gain, a time to lose
A time to rend, a time to sew
A time to love, a time to hate
A time for peace, I swear it's not too late

'You're fired' vs. 'wardrobe malfunction'

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The folks who have little to do but keep track of such things, in this case the Global Language Monitor people of Los Angeles, have determined that Donald Trump's favorite phrase "You're fired!" was the top television buzzword of the 2003-04 season.

As one who has heard the words a couple of times, although not from the Donald himself and certainly not in front of millions of viewers on the boob tube, let me be the first to protest the selection of this pedestrian phrase as the best of anything.

Myself, I prefer the simple but highly descriptive "wardrobe malfunction," which explains what happened to Janet Jackson between the halves of the Super Bowl, on CBS no less, an event that is usually confined to Cinemax after the kids have gone to bed.

As one who has heard the words a couple of times, although not from the Donald himself and certainly not in front of millions of viewers on the boob tube, let me be the first to protest the selection of this pedestrian phrase as the best of anything.

Or maybe the top buzzword should have been "girlie men," a phrase that still could propel Arnold (I can't spell his last name) into the White House, if only they can get those foolish restrictions on Austrian weight lifters out of the Constitution.

Television, and before that radio and the movies, have been fertile grounds for catchwords over the years.

Remember, "Where's the beef?" the angry demand of the old lady . . . oops, I mean senior citizen of the female persuasion in the Wendy's commercial which has become so much a part of the English language that I expect it to show up in the next edition of Bartlett's Quotations.

How many youngsters built a whole game of Cops and Robbers around the oft repeated Clint Eastwood challenge, "Go ahead! Make my day!" A generation before, kids playing Cowboys and Indians braced each other with "When you call me that, smile!" from The Virginian.

One of the Sopranos favorite phrases, "Fuhgedaboudit!" also caught the attention of researchers from Global Language Monitor but, as far as I'm concerned, it can't hold a candle to "sleeps with the fishes" from The Godfather, Part I.

Jerry Seinfeld gave the nonsense phrase "Yada, yada, yada" a life of its own, even though no one knew what it meant, and Arnold (the Kennedy/Shriver in-law) was known for years by the promise, "I'll be ba-a-a-ack!" He did, too.

Fifty or more years ago it was radio that contributed the catch words most often heard in the playgrounds and watering holes.

The droll humor of Bob Elliott and Ray Goulding, the Boston boys who made it big, originated the sign off phrase, "Write if you get work . . . and hang by your thumbs," and "This is Steve Bosco rounding third and being thrown out at home."

The old Bob Hope show had the comedian Jerry Colonna and his cockeyed salutation, "Greeting, gate!" and the street corner Santa Claus who kept insisting, "Put a little something in the pot, boy!"

Sgt. Joe Friday first used the phrase "Just the facts, m'am," on radio; so did Fred Allen's Sen. Claghorn when forced to explain, "That's a joke, son," and Ivory enticed listeners with the boast that its soap was "ninety nine and forty four/one hundredths per cent pure."

A tobacco company lured smokers with "LSMFT" (Lucky Strike Means Fine Tobacco) and described its product as "so round, so firm, so fully packed," which gave rise to a certain scatological parody that I would rather not go into at this time.

Joining forces to save beach access

COMMENTARY

TIMOTHY CRAWFORD WILSON

Hull will have 950 less parking spaces on Nantasket Beach by next summer because of an organization that wants to close down Hull Shore Drive and build massive skyscraper-like, 66-foot condominiums by the beach.

Who is planning to build these massive 66-foot skyscraper condominiums? And why are the parking spaces being shut off from the public? What's going on here anyway? And who is doing something about it, making sure this will not happen so that "We the People" will continue to have our constitutional rights to use a public beach?

Determined to develop the land is the Hull Redevelopment Authority (HRA). The HRA has already chosen a developer, a builder, and is meeting with various Hull boards. The HRA is submitting a request to the state to closedown Hull Shore Drive. The HRA has complete authority and autonomy to do what it wants with the land. The people of Hull don't even have the right to vote on it, and are forced taking legal action, scraping their dimes and nickels together.

"No Way HRA" has formed into a highly organized group. We are looking for a veteran environmental, litigation and eminent domain/constitutional lawyers to take on a good cause and fight. We have little money, but will give what we have.

Please don't be complacent; voice your opinion and do it now. Write your senators, congressman and representatives.

Beautiful, bucolic Cohasset

HEALTH NOTES

While we live in Cohasset, if we are to keep it the way people seem to feel they like, it's important for everyone to have some basic knowledge about the things which make us different from the way they are elsewhere and also about how to preserve some of those things we all love. First, we are a small community trying to keep our smallness in spite of being in a suburb near a growing and dynamic urban center. Some towns near the city have done so quite well, and others not. The towns that have succeeded seem to have several things in common, all dealing with the people who live in their respective localities:

First, there is a majority of well educated people who consider it a duty to become engaged in helping to operate the Town in some way. They don't just come here to sleep, put out the garbage, take in the newspaper, and complain how difficult it is to get into the city. In some way they give of their particular talents to help run the Town.

Second, they have enough humility to hesitate before they use their influence or money or powers of persuasiveness to try to change even the smallest detail without seeking counsel from those who have been around a while. That is, they listen to the townies.

Third, they try to understand a little about those natural trappings and features which make our town so different, and sometimes so achingly beautiful. They learn about how plants and trees react with brooks, ponds, and water; when it's right to cut and when not to cut and why. And what impact changing their little piece of town has on everybody else. It's not easy to think of others when you have a project and a timetable, but it's necessary if we're going to keep our town the way it is. And there are never enough rules and regulations to keep everyone from doing things which may have an unexpected impact. It really amounts to a collective town conscience.

It's not vital for everyone to come to Town Meeting, but it's important for those who get there to understand all the issues and have the Town's interest - and conscience - in mind.

And trash - how often have you seen walkers picking up bottles, etc? How often have you heard "that's not going to do any good."? Well, they're wrong. It goes back to collective town conscience. Which is going to have more effect on you: a sign saying "don't dump" or seeing a walker pick up a bottle, or a dog walker using a Mutt Mitt?

And lawn care – I'm surprised and gratified to see so many neighbors listening to the stuff we say about the harmful effects of pesticides and too much fertilizer. I say "keep it up gang; nobody's too important or busy not to help mother nature".

Everybody wants sewers; why don't we get sewers?. That's what they had when they came from Boston (or wherever) . After all, aren't sewers the most efficient way to treat wastewater? So they are — when you have 500 families in a block 1/20th of a mile long and 1/10th of a mile wide. In Cohasset they're a very expensive half fix to the real problem in Cohasset which is to get rid of rainwater and wastewater in a town full of ledge.

Still they come to bucolic Cohasset for fields, water views, and open vistas. Where they exchange open vistas for perfect lawns, and chlorinated water for pond water and complain of the taste so they buy bottles.

Too many people is not the problem. With the talent in Town, we can manage reasonable growth. The real problem is training. Maybe somebody should write an instruction manual for Cohasset.

Nov. 2 unlikely to yield many more GOP legislators

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Gov. Mitt Romney said the people wouldn't be well served, and he wouldn't like it, if the Legislature were all Republican.

For now, that fear resides in the same category as the sun's mighty nuclear fires failing. Could happen, but probably a good idea to focus one's anxieties a little closer to, well, this planet. And in fact, last week did give our state's own rising star some plausible material to fret about. Much has been made this year of the large crop of Republican legislative candidates. Romney's comments came as he began the process of making even more of it, for the general election. But the fact remains that 60 seats – 30 percent of the Legislature – are automatic Democratic victories, because there is no Republican in the general races. That's a little like one team forfeiting the first two games of the World Series.

The reality is that no one but the voters has made the Legislature 85 percent Democrats, with little change expected even if Nov. 2 is a good day for Romney and his party. For now, there is no reason to expect a violent shift in inclination; the governor advertises himself foremost as a change agent, but party power in legislatures shifts in increments over time. A successful election would consist of simply getting the voters to oust a few familiar names and used to the idea of a true Republican alternative.

But the press and public harbor doubts about Romney's commitment to focus on the state long term, and unhappiness over that phenomenon may have been reflected in polling data released by UMass-Lowell. The survey by the Center for Economic and Civic Opinion showed the governor's favorable rating at 55 percent, down about 10 points. The same poll found 44 percent of respondents thought the governor's recent drift from a Massachusetts focus – promoting his book, going to the Olympics, critiquing John Kerry, speechifying at the Republican National Convention – is bad for the state.

The usual caveat holds: a single poll is not meaningful; polls only work when viewed in groups over time, and then they are extremely reliable at gauging opinion. That said, it would hardly be shocking to find out Romney is indeed hurting himself by going national. For one thing, Massachusetts voters may be tired of governors doing this: it's been 10 years since a governor served out his term instead of angling for a federal posting. For another, citizens here are unambiguous in their preferences: they like electing Democrats to the Legislature and Republicans to the governorship, and they don't like Republican presidents much at all. So when Romney seems to be losing his focus on the role people elected him to play, and behaving as though he might be auditioning for one they like a Democratic to fill, it's not too shocking to learn Bay Staters find him less attractive.

But the fact remains that 60 seats – 30 percent of the Legislature – are automatic Democratic victories, because there is no Republican in the general races.

There's little doubt the governor gets it. Returning to the Corner Office after the hoopla in New York died down, he had his people start talking about new initiatives coming in education and health care delivery. He gathered reporters in front of the Paul Revere House in the North End to talk about ending the Democratic monopoly in the Legislature. And he spent extra time with journalists talking about his Bay State accomplishments. No one doubts Romney's aiming for something higher. The question is how soon he pulls the trigger. The new poll suggested the itchiness of his finger might help determine the success of his future endeavors, at least when it comes to his Massachusetts base.

• 384 Massachusetts schools found problematic by federal government — About a fifth of the schools in the state were put on the federal government's "watch list" because test scores for some or all students fell short of this year's "No Child Left Behind" standards. Some Massachusetts educators say the findings are too harsh and simplistic, but supporters of President Bush's approach say the substandard determination actually affirms a long-term push for greater accountability and academic success for all students.

• Central Artery tunnel springs leak —The much-maligned Central Artery project suffered more damage to its public perception when the northbound tunnel through Boston sprung a leak and traffic backed up for miles as lanes were shut down. Engineers said they think they've diagnosed the problem, and workers applied a temporary fix, but it was unclear when a permanent solution would be forthcoming, how much it would cost, or whether there are more leaks developing. Turnpike authority chairman Matthew Amorello made clear he expects Bechtel Parsons Brinkerhoff, the prime project contractor, to absorb the cost of the solution.

• Governor appoints Harshbarger-led council to oversee corrections — In response to the John Geoghan murder and a troubling rate of recidivism, Gov. Romney issued an executive order forming a 17-member panel to monitor the state's corrections system as it make changes in the way prisoners are classified and treated. He named as chairman Scott Harshbarger, the former Attorney General and gubernatorial candidate. "For too long, our system of corrections has operated in the shadows of government, with very little oversight and accountability," Romney said in a statement. "It's time to shine a light on how we can better improve the management of our prisons."

• Capuano complains over lack of transportation strategy — Continuing to raise his profile back home as he considers a run for governor, Congressman Michael Capuano complained the state is being ill-served by the Romney administration's approach to transportation planning. The former Somerville mayor said the Romney team has failed to form a coherent strategy for roads, rails, transit and airways, and therefore undermined the Congressional delegation's ability to win federal funding for transportation projects. Capuano said past governors have accomplished much more in the transportation realm. The governor's people responded that their "Fix it First" approach doesn't lend itself to the time-honored "megaproject" thinking. "It's unfair to say that we haven't been doing as much," said Transportation Secretary Daniel Grabauskas. "I'm not looking for one sexy project to go forward, I'm looking for 200 sexy projects."

• Boston region's rate of high-tech job loss twice the national average — Researchers at the Center for Urban Economic Development at the University of Illinois at Chicago studied the downturn in the high-tech industry since the dot-com bubble burst, and found Massachusetts was especially hard hit. "The nation as a whole has lost 236,000 high-tech jobs in the sector's recession, the scholars reported. That's about a 10 percent falloff, but the Massachusetts high-tech industry contracted by 20 percent, the research found. "These were jobs we were supposed to have in the future," Tim Costello of the North American Alliance for Fair Employment said during a State House press conference. "And they're now disappearing."

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen
beaconhill@aol.com
Sept. 17, 2004

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2120 Room 472

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 413F

QUESTIONS

	Bradley	Hedlund
ELECTRONIC PAC CONTRIBUTIONS (H 4850)	N	Y
SUBSTANCE ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT (H 4850)	N	Y
$400,000 FOR EXOTIC PLANTS PREVENTION (H 4850)	Y	Y

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Cohasset Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives and senators' votes on three roll calls from July sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

ELECTRONIC PAC CONTRIBUTIONS (H 4850)

House 133-22, Senate 33-5, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget provision allowing an employee to authorize his or her employer to make electronic contributions directly from the employee's wages to a political action committee (PAC). The provision expands a current law that allows employees to make the contributions directly from their bank accounts to a PAC. Override supporters said employees should have the right to set up this payroll deduction and use part of their wages to make regular contributions to a PAC of their choice. In his veto message, the governor said that it is inappropriate for employers to remit these political contributions on behalf of their employees. (A "Yea" vote is for allowing the payroll deduction to a PAC. A "Nay" vote is against allowing it).

SUBSTANCE ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT (H 4850)

House 134-22, Senate 33-5, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget provision requiring the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop a coordinated state policy for substance abuse services. The provision requires the secretary to gather information on all drug and alcohol addiction, prevention and treatment services in the state including their costs. The secretary would then issue a report to the Legislature including recommendations to effect a coordinated statewide policy to tackle the abuse problem. Override supporters said that it is time to take a harder look at the state's substance abuse services and to ensure that the most effective and coordinated effort is made to combat this growing problem. They noted that many young people are substance abusers and said the state must do more to combat this plague. In his veto message, the governor said the provision is unnecessary because the Department of Public Health is already conducting policy development initiatives for substance abuse services and support in the state. (A "Yea" vote is for requiring the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop a coordinated state policy for substance abuse services. A "Nay" vote is against the requirement).

$400,000 FOR EXOTIC PLANTS PREVENTION (H 4850)

House 157-0, Senate 35-3, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $400,000 in funding for a grant program to fund communities and lake associations' exotic plant prevention and research programs. Exotic plants, including milfoil and fanwort, are invasive plants that are unintentionally introduced into land or water where they are not native. Plant fragments stuck to boats and trailers are often the way these exotic plants spread between water bodies. These non-native exotic plants usually lack predators or other natural controls, tolerate a wide variety of environmental conditions and reproduce rapidly. Override supporters said the plants cause major problems across the state including clogging waters and waterways, replacing the habitats of native plants, disrupting the food chain, stunting fish growth and degrading wildlife habitat. In his veto message, Romney said he vetoed the funding because it is not consistent with his original fiscal 2005 budget recommendation. (A "Yea" vote is for the $400,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $400,000).

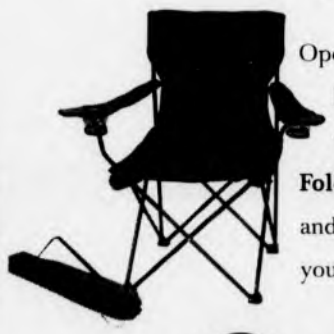
STUDENTS WITH DIABETES (S 2231)- The House gave initial approval to a Senate-approved bill allowing all public school students with diabetes to give themselves insulin shots and perform glucose monitoring tests while in school if certain conditions established by the Department of Public Health (DPH) are met. Current state policy gives school nurses the authority to allow students to self-administer medications in accordance with the same DPH regulations. The bill would bar schools from prohibiting these diabetic students from self-administration as long as the DPH regulations are met. A current state law already bars schools from prohibiting students with asthma from self administering their inhalers. A bill approved by the Legislature and awaiting Gov. Romney's signature would bar schools from prohibiting students with cystic fibrosis to do the same with their enzyme supplements.



WWII DAY (H 1201)- The Senate gave near final approval to a House-approved measure designating September 2 as World War II Commemoration Day to honor veterans who served in that war. The proposal provides for the ringing of church bells at 9:04 a.m. in recognition of the final surrender of Japan and the formal conclusion of the conflict. Only final House and Senate approval are necessary prior to the proposal going to the governor. Some supporters of the measure are disappointed that the bill has been languishing in the Legislature and was not signed into law in time for this year. The House gave near final approval to the measure in February but the Senate did not do so until last week.

letic, fun-loving man to a dialysis machine for the foreseeable future.

"Dialysis was awful for me — it was three times a week for four hours a day," recalls Berard, who explained the disease had atrophied his kidneys to the size of golf balls.

He received the diagnosis after feeling poorly during a business trip to Washington D.C. in 1999. He was continuing to work out with Hebert but just wasn't feeling up to par. Berard, who is a Weymouth native and 1974 Thayer Academy graduate, went in for tests and learned his kidneys were failing and that he had to go on dialysis or get a transplant.

Hebert was in the office the following day offering one of his kidneys. "I said, 'no'," Berard recalls. Still feeling strong enough that June, Berard raised $20,000 for the National Kidney Foundation in the "Escape from Alcatraz Triathlon."

Berard then learned his brother was not a good match and he'd have to go on a waiting list for a donor. Hebert –a veteran of six Iron Man Triathlons at that time — kept insisting, he was the guy. Hebert said he wasn't about to let his friend suffer when he could do something about it.

"I was told anything I did before the surgery, I could do after," Hebert says. "A year after the surgery, I had competed in two more Iron Man triathlons." Hebert underwent laparoscopic surgery (which is less invasive) to donate the kidney. "I wasn't going to watch my friend suffer when all I had to do is show up," he recalls.

Buddies and co-workers since they graduated from college roughly 25 years ago, Rich Berard and Chris Hebert would do anything for each other.

Berard, who experienced some rejection when he returned to competition too quickly, knows how to pace himself. "I'm perfectly fine and back to normal," he says. "I don't even think about it."

Although Hebert – who is fiercely competitive – jokes that losing a kidney has made him faster, he is grateful to have been able to help his buddy. With a quick wit and ready smile, he is also completely serious about encouraging others to be organ donors and the effort to raise money to fight another disease: lung cancer.

"Lung cancer in women is different than it is in men," Hebert says. "We need more research and more information about the type of treatment available."

As a transplant recipient, Berard points out that lung transplants are the toughest. They are extremely difficult because they are so prone to massive infection. Berard was out of the hospital a week after receiving a new kidney; lung transplant patients are in the hospital for months, he says.

This is the second year of the Jeni Fund Duathlon. Last year it was held in Plymouth. Both men say they are committed to help the charity get off the ground. Berard and Hebert work for a lumber wholesale business, Capital Forest Products in Hingham. Berard, his wife Annie, and son Aaron, live on Forest Avenue in Cohasset. Hebert (who is a Connecticut native), his wife, Joanne, and their two sons, Mike and Matt, live in Duxbury. Their favorite training ground is Marshfield Hills.

Cedarmere

When the project received Planning Board approval, one of the conditions was a redesign at the intersection of Norman Todd Road and Beechwood Street. "We have $15,000 we're committed to spend," for the redesign said Calhoun. A first draft of the redesign, completed by engineer Neil Murphy, was given to the Planning Board last Wednesday. The board and its engineer John Modzelewski will review the document and make comments, but ultimately, any redesign of the intersection will have to be approved by the Board of Selectmen because it is a public road.

But redesigning an intersection is relatively minor when compared to other conditions the project has had to meet. In order for any project to receive approval from the Planning Board, it must have a firm wastewater plan in place. The plans for the Cedarmere site have been drafted around the prospect of being tied in to the municipal sewer lines, but to date, the Sewer Commission will not allow the project to connect because of capacity issues and the fact that the project is located outside of the central sewer district.

Although Cedarmere developers say their engineers from Fay, Spofford and Thorndike, which is also the firm that designed the town's sewer treatment plant, have found there is sufficient capacity to hook up not only Cedarmere but other proposed projects and areas of town which are also looking to tie in, the commission's engineers from Tutela Engineering Associates say capacity does not exist. Developers submitted an application for a sewer connection and were denied, and they have since appealed that decision.

However, to meet the requirements set by the Planning Board, the developers have designed an on-site system which could serve as a viable wastewater solution, provided the municipal sewer connection does not work out. The on-site system would be an evaporating system, and Calhoun said the Department of Environmental Protection has given conceptual approval for the plans.

The first set of on-site wastewater plans submitted to DEP were for a complete, 100 percent evaporating system. Calhourt said because the Massachusetts DEP doesn't have much experience with the new technology, Cohasset's Zenon system uses air to force particles through membrane fibers. The membranes are located in two large tanks, and wastewater is constantly flowing into the tanks through a pipe. The membrane fibers look like long, thin, plastic tubes, which have a hole in the center, like a very thin straw. There are tiny holes along the outside walls of the fibers as well, which allow water to pass through. Pumps act as a little vacuum in the tank, which help push air through fibers in the membrane filters, sucking water from the outside of the membrane, in, filtering solids out in the process. Cedarmere's wastewater would be filtered and pumped into the ground.

Calhoun said he has been working with a hydrologist from DEP to make sure the system is the best on-site solution for the site, but said the preferred method of wastewater discharge for the site is still a municipal sewer hook-up, which they will continue to pursue, although he expects to have permits in hand for the on-site system soon. "DEP is disappointed because they know there's capacity" at the town's wastewater treatment plant, said Calhoun.

At the local level, Calhoun said the permitting process for the project is progressing along smoothly, and has received approval from the Conservation Commission, which was the last board needed to move ahead for final approval.

Calhoun said in the coming weeks, he hopes to schedule a preconstruction conference with the Planning Board, which will need to sign off on the final plans for the site. Calhoun said construction should begin between Nov. 1 and Nov. 15. "It's getting close," he said.

There have also been numerous rumors circulating around about Cedarmere being sold off. Calhoun confirmed the property is and has been listed with a broker and is being professionally marketed by CB Ellis and Gallery 360. Calhoun said if it is sold, the property will be sold as a project, according to plans approved by the town.

A tie that binds

Things start to come together for boys soccer team in 2-2 draw with Carver

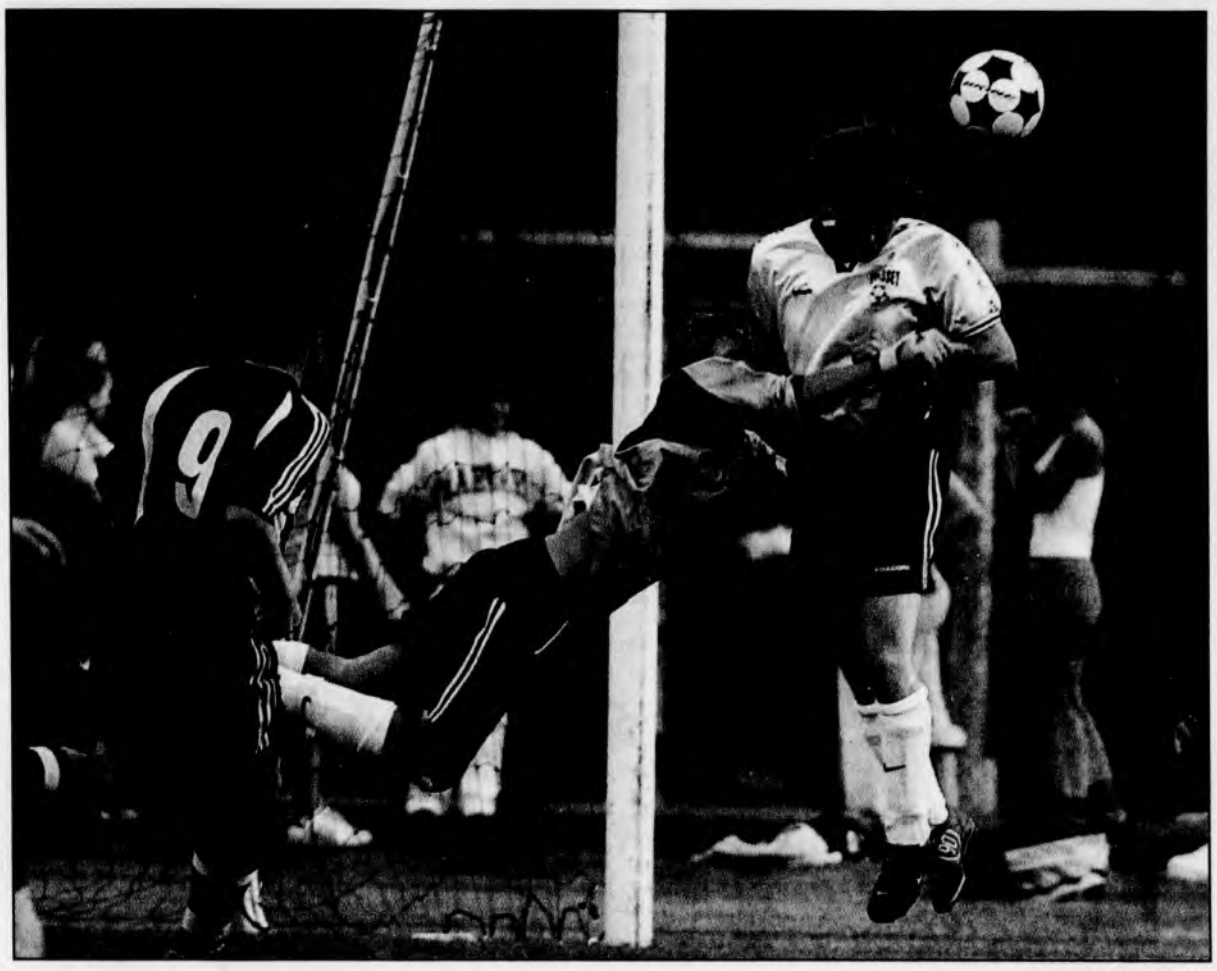
By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

When is a tie a win?

Simple: when progress is made.

Cohasset boys soccer coach Rob Leary certainly sounded as if his team had won after it twice came from behind to earn a hard fought tie on the road with a fast and physical Carver team Tuesday night.

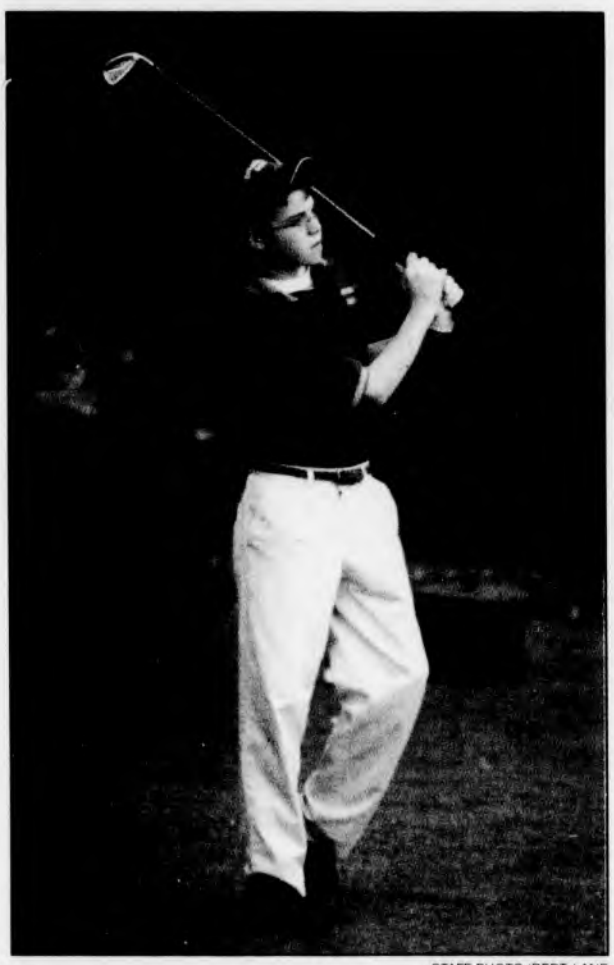
"That was by far the best game we've played all year," declared the second year head coach, who saw his team go to 1-2-1 with the draw, 1-1-1 in South Shore League play.



"We outplayed them, I thought, and dominated for long stretches, but Carver's goalie made some big stops. We made two mistakes and the ycasjhed in on them both times. But, all in all, I was pleased. This is definitely one we can build on."

Carver captain David Wadsworth opened the scoring midway through the first half after Cohasset had failed to cash in on a couple of golden opportunities at the opposite end, including one where junior Ben Libby was flat out stoned by the Carver keeper on a deflected shot.

Libby got the Crusaders keeper back, however, as he one-touched a cross from senior Jon Grimm inside the far post from eight yards out with five minutes left in the first half.



Carver's other captain, Bryce Spencer, put his team back out in front 10 minutes into the second half, but Cohasset junior

Girls soccer team focuses on positives after two tough losses

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

You'd think that two straight losses in games she deemed "very winnable" would get Deb Beal down, but the Cohasset High girls soccer coach remains convinced the glass is half full.

Losses to South Shore League rivals Carver and Abington over the last week have dropped Beal's Lady Skippers to 2-2-1 on the season with three more big league games on the horizon.

"If winning were easy, everyone would do it," noted the unwaveringly upbeat Beal.

"I think it will all come together and it will just happen," she continued. "(The Cohasset girls) have the fundamentals and they certainly have the desire, so I think it is only a matter of time before the scoring gates open and the kinks get ironed out."

The 2-1 loss to Carver (2-2-2) Tuesday night, though, proved particularly tough to swallow. Cohasset sophomore Lindsay

Cohasset gridders slip past Archbishop Williams, 14-6

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Visiting Cohasset was able to escape Memorial Field with a thrilling 14-6 win on Sunday against a scrappy and determined Archbishop Williams football team that was out to avenge last years loss.

Defensively, the host Bishops were well prepared, playing a tough 4-4 stunting defense that disrupted Cohasset's blocking most of the afternoon. The fired-up Bishops were able to capitalize on several early Cohasset mistakes and took a 6-0 lead early in the first quarter.

The Skippers were able to eventually adjust, however, as the coaching staff called for more plays to the outside and utilizing senior quarterback Crandon Leahy's strong right arm. The win improved the Skippers to 2-0 heading into Saturday night's home game with Cardinal Spellman (8 p.m. kickoff).

It was a 50-yard pass hookup from Leahy to senior fullback Ted Straughn that tied the game early in the second quarter, and another 11-yard hookup between the pair that set up the game winning one-yard plunge by Leahy with 9:25 to go in the game.

The rest was then left up to the defense, and that unit, to the sur-

Cavicchi's 36 the difference in battle for first place in SSL golf

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Things have gotten real interesting all of a sudden in the battle for the South Shore League golf crown.

By handing Cohasset its first loss of the season on Tuesday at the Scituate Country Club, 28.5-25.5, the Norwell High golfers find themselves in a tie for first place in the SSL with a 4-1 record. But it's tight...not to mention very interesting.

This looks to be shaping up as a three horse race between Cohasset (3-1-1), Harwich (3-1) and the Clippers.

Harwich, the team that handed Norwell it's lone loss, is technically in first by virtue of the head-to-head tiebreaker, but still has to face Norwell on it home Scituate Country Club Course. Cohasset, the team that handed Harwich it's lone loss, is a half game behind Harwich and Norwell because of a tie on Monday with Mashpee, a team Norwell and Harwich have

Progress abounds in scoreless tie with Carver

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Last Wednesday, the Skippers traveled down to Carver territory to battle the notoriously fast Crusaders. Going into the game with a 0-2 record, Cohasset's chances didn't look good. Despite their previous games, the Skippers marched out onto the field with their sails full of wind. A 0-0 score doesn't begin to demonstrate the dominance and improvement of the Blue and White team.

The Skippers' solid defensive line seemed to be the instigators of their Durkin matched Carver's first goal. The difference turned out to be the 15th tally of the season from Crusaders sophomore sensation Tina Gillen. What made it most difficult for Beal to bare was the fact her team played some of its best soccer to date.

"We came out slow and got beat to 50-50 balls and did not make sharp enough passes," reported the veteran coach. " We caught on and started to dominate most of the play. We outplayed them, we out-shot them and we out-passed them, but we just didn't outscore them. Are we discouraged? No, I think we are at a point right now where emotions and desire are going to prevail."

The loss to Abington, unbeaten heading into Tuesday night's showdown with Norwell, also had its highlights. The lowlight was watching another underclass overachiever go off. Green Wave freshman Becky DeSieno scored both of the game's goals.

"We struggled to get the simple tasks done, like scoring," noted Beal. "Our game pace and fitness levels are good, better than they have ever been but we can't put it all together. I was not all that discouraged against Abington, I know we can play better, but we never quit."

The Skippers get back into action today against Harwich (4:30 p.m. start) after making the annual miserably long sojourn over the Sagamore Bridge, and will host Hull on Monday (5:15 p.m. start, Alumni Field).

"If we can regroup and pull it together for two wins, that puts us at 4-2-1 going into Norwell (Wednesday), hopefully with all engines running," said Beal. "Norwell will be tough, no matter how you look at it."

Indeed, the defending South Shore League champion and South Sectional finalist Lady Clippers returned most of their key players and were 6-0 at the time of this writing.

Still, Beal sounds confident her girls are capable of giving the vaunted Lady Clippers a game.

"I am seeing the girls do things that I never thought I would see three years ago," said the coach. "They are buying into the system I am trying to sell. They pass and move off the ball very well. I continually drive the point home that more passing and efficient ball movement will lessen the load for everyone. We are doing an outstanding job moving the ball through about three or four passes."

It's when they get close to the net, though, that the discipline seems to unravel.

"...But then it falls apart and they just get rid of the ball," Beal continued. "All that work to give the ball away... senseless. We will work on it more and more everyday until it becomes automatic."

If not for the defense the Lady Skippers have been getting, the team would likely be facing an uphill climb right now.

"I must applaud my defense for they take the brunt of it," said Beal. We rely so heavily on them and they pull us through every time. Christine Lovallo is a wall. Danielle Hajjar is really stepping up as a defensive leader; she is teaching and directing the younger players, and I think that she is doing an outstanding job.

"The midfield is under the direction of Nicole Whitney and she has a tough job. She plays the most demanding position on the field. She runs the most and has to support the most. She is working hard to set up the play and then works harder support it. Rachel and Carin Garber are playing well as are Molly Kirk and Emily Coggins."

And it's not just the veterans who are catching the coach's eye.

"The desire of the younger players is exciting to watch," Beal continued. "I don't think they are that used to losing and they don't really like it.

"Lauren Rizzotti (sprained knee) is back to playing form. She and seniors Casey Anderson and Lindsey Kennedy are working with Lindsay Durkin, Emilie Shea, and Christina Pinkus to form a goal scoring attack. Mackenzie Holway and Lara Novak are working hard to support the defense and also the offense from the stopper position."

And it sounds like some of those younger players may be on the verge of seeing an increase in their roles.

"I believe that in order to play well you must practice well," said Beal. "Attendance is an issue and those who practice hard are those who play. Academics obviously come first and foremost, but we need to buckle down and work hard at practice because it reflects in our game performance.

"There are eleven positions on the field and the best eleven are going to start and play. Just because an athlete is older, doesn't give them the right to play a varsity position. Hard work and desire dictate playing time."

Cohasset 4, CCA 0

Of course, there was a non-league sandwiched between these two setbacks on Friday.

Cape Cod Academy fell victims to the Skippers for the second time this year, but this tiem it was after the Skippers made the long bus ride.

Junior Emilie Shea put the Skippers up 19:55 in. Lindsey Kennedy gave the visiting Skippers a cushion with a tally five minutes into the second half and then Jen Dinger, who played half JV-half varsity on the day, scored goals at 59:50 and 62:00 to put the game out of reach.

Cecellia Chapman and Melissa Crowley-Buck split the time in net to share the shutout, and both played well, according to Beal, who actually lauded the entire defensive effort.

FROM BOYS SOCCER, PAGE 17

Aidan Buick got the equalizer 10 minutes after that off of a cross from Kevin Dinsmore and then a nice chip pass from Libby to the far post.

Of course, the coach gave junior Chris Ofsthun as much credit as anyone for this goal, as his 70 yard flat out sprint up field on the far wing forced a Carver defender to choose a mark, allowing Buick to sneak open near the open half of the net.

"That was the type of unselfish, smart play I've been looking for," lauded Leary. It seems like more and more of the kids are starting to get that. If they hustle, it might not always be an individual reward, but it's a team reward."

And it wasn't just the hustle that had the coach gushing. He was also impressed with the smarts on display.

"We did a great job passing and switching fields, and that kind of negated Carver's speed," he said. "Really, you could put the name of every kid who played in the paper. It was a real team effort."

The coach did single out, though, his three man defensive backfield of Sam MacDonald, Jonathan Littauer and Trevor Brady. The steady play of this trio— as well as the solid marking of middies Dinsmore, Ofsthun and Brandon Smith— has allowed Leary to switch from the traditional 2-4-4 alignment to a 3-4-3, adding an extra attacker to jump start the offense.

That extra attacker for much of the game was freshman Mike Grimm (Jon's little brother), a recent JV call-up.

"Mike didn't look out of place at all out there," lauded Leary. "He played very well with Aidan and Ben, especially considering he'd never played with either of these guys before. He showed a lot of toughness too. He got plowed over a few times by the keeper, but he got right back up."

This upbeat version of Leary was in stark contrast to the guy this typist spoke with following the first three games of the season, and he was at an all time low following last Wednesday's 3-2 loss to Abington. In that one, the host Skippers built a 2-0 first half lead only to see Abington senior captain Alex Hill put three unanswered second half goals to turn the tables.

"And that was the worst game of the year, no doubt about it," said Leary following the Carver tie. "Obviously, it was quite a turnaround from one game to the next."

The Skippers will get back into action today when they host South Shore League rival Harwich (5:30 p.m. start @ Alumni Field). Next week, they'll host Hull on Monday (3:45 @ Alumni) and then hit the road to take on unbeaten SSL rival Norwell (6-0) Wednesday (5 p.m. start).

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Youth Baseball Major League Tryouts

The try-outs for the 2005 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Saturday, October 2nd at Barnes Field at 1:00 PM. All boys and girls turning 10, 11 or 12 prior to July 31, 2004 wishing to play Little League major league division baseball and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. Although all eligible 12 year olds are automatically assigned to major league team, their attendance is mandatory at this try-out. Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 12:30 PM. This will be the only opportunity to try-out. The rain date will be Saturday, October 16th. Questions regarding may be directed to either Liam O'Connell at 781-383-9538 or Nancy Froio at 781-383-1897.

MaxLax Athletic Center grand opening

ProShots Athletic Center - Grand Opening Saturday/October 2nd - MaxLax Lacrosse, provider of NE's premier boys and girls lacrosse programs, announces the GRAND OPENING of the 1st dedicated lacrosse facility in Massachusetts. Located in Pembroke just off Rt 3 at Exit 12 (just down the street from the X-mas tree shop and SkiMarket), the ProShots Athletic Center will provide the ultimate experience in indoor athletics and family fun.

With the largest non-boarded FieldTurf playing field, two full sized basketball courts, in-house athletic training and sports conditioning, baseball/softball, soccer and basketball leagues for all ages, a family fun arcade, and a full menu of daily kids activity programs (pre-school thru middles school); this new addition to the South Shore will be the place to play for many years to come.

Meet the top MLL Lacrosse stars, check out the speed of your shots, take home a free t-shirt, or see if you can beat a MLL Goalie with your best shot, there will be fun for everyone to celebrate this exciting new opening, or just stop by to see the future of indoor fun and maybe you'll take home one of the many Grand Prizes being given away throughout the day. For more information and directions, please visit our website at www.maxlax.net or give us a call at 781/383-2725 and we look forward to seeing you out on the field.

The defense doesn't rest

prise of no one whose been paying attention the last few years, did not disappoint.

"Our strngth is our defense," noted coach Tony Rolfe. "That's where we have seven guys back. That'll be our strength all year."

Archbishop Williams won the coin toss and elected to kick off with the wind at their backs. Cohasset's receiver fumbled failed to handle the boot cleanly and the Bishops recovered the elusive ball on the Cohasset 32-yard line.

Fortunately, the Cohasset defense was nonplussed. On third-and-five, Cohasset's Dave McKinnon broke into the backfield and dropped Bishops star tailback Khori Witter for a five yard loss. The defense held on fourth down as well, and the Skippers took the ball over on downs at their own 31 yard line.

Cohasset's first possession got off to a disastrous start. Before even the first snap of the ball, the Skippers were whistled for offsides and five yards. Then, on first and 15, Cohasset fumbled the ball and the Bishops recovered on the 29 yard line of Cohasset.

The hosts were quick to take advantage of this gift, as Witter ran the ball down to the 11-yard line. Quarterback Chris Costello scored off a rollout to the right, scrambling into the end zone with all receivers covered. The extra point attempt failed when a high snap forced the holder to run. He was immediately smothered by several Cohasset defenders.

The Skippers returned the ensuing kickoff to their 27. After two short running plays, Cohasset gained its first first down on a four-yard pass completion to Dan McCarthy at the 38. They failed to move the ball on the next series, however, and punted from their 39-yard line.

Archbishop Williams took over on their 36. A 10 yard gain was negated by a holding penalty, making it first and 20 at the 26. Witter, who rushed for almost 1,000 yards as a sophomore last year, then went to work, gaining 27 yards on a sweep and then another nine up the gut, moving the Bishops to Cohasset's 44-yard line.

The Cohasset defense dug in, however, as Kelvin Ferriera stopped a sweep to the left for a four yard loss. Scott Wakefield and Matt Casey combined to hand the Bishops another loss, forcing a punting situation. After a short punt and a seven-yard return, the Skippers took over on their 39 nine yard line.

Joe Durkin broke loose for an 11-yard gain to midfield. Cohasset then capitalized on the tight Bishop defense, sending Straughn through the line on a down and out pattern as Leahy rolled to his right with good protection. The senior signalcaller led the receiver nicely as Straughn pulled in the pass with a one hand stretching grab at the 27, then outran the defenders down the right sideline for a touchdown. A two point pass conversion attempt was intercepted, however, leaving it a 6-6 game.

The Bishops seemed determined to answer back, however. After getting pinned at their nine-yard line on the kickoff, the hosts gained five quick first downs on running plays, marching all the way to Cohasset's 28 yard line. Nick Arment and Joe Durkin then combined to sack Costello for a four yard loss putting the ball on the 32. A Cohasset off side penalty got that right back, but the defense held and the Bishops turned the ball over on downs as an errant pass sailed out of bounds on a down and out sideline pass attempt.

Cohasset took over on downs at their own 20 yard line with 1:05 left in the second quarter and ran the clock out to end the first half.

The two teams traded punts to cap of their first possessions of the second half, and Ferreira came up with a huge stop for a two yard loss on third down to kill the Bishops second try of the half. A nice return from Straughn set the Skippers up at midfield.

They couldn't get anythign going on first and second downs, but senior tailback Joe Durkin gained 10 yards on a third-and-eight sweep call to pick up a first down to the Bishops' 37. Running the ball outside to counter the tight Bishop defense, Durkin then gained another 11 yards on a sweep to the left, giving the Skippers a first down on the 28.

On third-and-9, Leahy rolled to his right and completed a clutch first down pass to Straughn to the 12-yard line. A fullback dive to the left gained two yards on first down, and Durkin picked up another three over the right side of the line to end the third quarter with the ball just outside the Bishops' five yard line and the Skippers facing a third-and-five.

Leahy failed to gain any yardage on a keeper to the left, bringing up a fourth-and-five and a tough decision for Rolfe and staff.

The coaches decided to put the ball back in the hands of their senior QB, and this time he came through. He ran a keeper to the right and attempted to dive over the corner goal line marker. He came up just short of th egoal line, but a chain measurement gave Cohasset a first down by the length of the ball inside the 1-yard line.

On first and goal, Leahy dove over center for the score. He then completed a two-point conversion pass to tight end Dan McCarthy on a short down and out, giving Cohasset the 14-6 lead with 9:25 left to play.

Cohasset's defense seemed to stiffen on the ensuing Bishop possession. Justin Wood stopped a sweep for no gain and a 10-yard holding call against the Bishops put the ball back on the Cohasset 16.

Costello was able to complete a 20-yard pass to pick up a first down, but Cohasset's D held there, forcing the Bishops to bring out the punt team. Senior Matt Baroudi then bulled his way through the middle to block the punt, and Anthony Dipaulo pounced on it at the 25-yard line of Bishop.

Cohasset kept the ball on the ground, looking to run out the clock, but couldn't gain a first down. The Skippers went for the short punt on fourth down, but the ball made it to the end zone, resulting in a touchback and letting the Bishops start at their 20-yard line with over four minutes to play.

The hosts marched the ball down to the Cohasset 30, but the drive stalled as the Skippers defense held and they took over on downs at their own 30.

The Skippers were again unable to move the ball, however, and had to punt it away with 1:53 left.

The defense answered the call once again, though. Junior Dave McKenna stuffed Witter for a two-yard loss and, on fourth-and-three, Durkin stopped him for another loss, giving Cohasset back the ball on the Bishops' 32-yard line with 22 seconds to play. Leahy took a knee and time expired.

Cohasset's strong defensive play carried the day for the 2 and 0 Skippers. The offense scored when they had the opportunity but struggled with the aggressive Bishop defense. The young offensive line had difficulty adjusting to the Bishops defense but did the job when it counted led by the strong blocking of Nick Arment. The Skippers will get back into action with a rare Saturday night game at home (8 p.m. kickoff), with Cardinal Spellman the opponent.

aggressiveness. Kathrine Whoriskey, Remy Lee, and Ellen Tarpey presented an outstanding performance in defending the Crusaders. Also, captain Allison Dean managed to stop all nine of Carver's offensive corners. Goalie Aaron Bigley managed to freeze all 15 of Carver's shots. He even managed to keep Carver's Lindsay Hobbs, Sarah Pooler, and Stacey Burns from scoring.

"Carver has always given us a physical and tough game," reflected head coach Deb Bostwick. "I am very proud of my team for working hard, being strong on defense, and not backing down."

Starting Sweeper Ellen Tarpey also felt content with the Skipper's performance.

"This was the first game we really came together as a team," she said. "If only we had capitalized on our scoring opportunities, we would have gotten the win."

Going into Friday's game against Norwell, the Skippers felt confident. And rightfully so. Brooke Allen came out and scored early on the Clippers, attempting to set a tone for the game. The Clippers, however, had a different plan.

Norwell quickly came back and scored on the celebrating Cohasset team, tying the game. Another Norwell goal in the second half disheartened the Skippers. The final score:2-1 Norwell.

Despite the loss, the Skippers felt they dominated the game. Their enthusiasm in the second half almost earned them another goal, this time by Katie James.

"Everyone thought it was a goal," stated halfback Colby Durant. "The ball was in the net!"

Unfortunately, the refs saw the play differently.

Though the Skippers got a tough break, they recognize they must move on. On Tuesday, the Skippers faced off with a ruthless Harwich team, closely followed by a Thursday showdown with the Mashpee Falcons. Coach Bostwick plans to focus on her defensive coverage inside the circle. This will prove key in protecting her goalie.

Clippers drive past Skippers

already beaten. These four teams must all play one another again, and the tiebreaker possibilities are all over the map.

"This league is as tough to call as it's ever been right now," said Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney. We're all beating one another. On any given day, you just don't know who is going to be the better team."

The other two teams in the league, Carver and Abington, without league wins, are well on the outside looking in.

Norwell freshman Cody Cavicchi was the difference in Tuesday's huge win, as he shot an even par 36 on the Clippers home course to win his head-to-head match in the second spot, 8-1.

"Man, that kid played a great round," said Sweeney. "He was a one man wrecking crew for us. We just couldn't dig out of the hole he put us in."

Cavicchi had shot in the high 40s the day before at Widow's Walk in a win over Abington, but he and senior captain Mike Dempsey went to a driving range that evening and hit a few buckets of balls.

"Mike and Cody took it upon themselves to work on their swings," lauded Norwell coach Ken Camerota. "I don't know how big a factor that played (Tuesday), but they both played much better than they had the day before."

Dempsey also shaved close to 10 strokes off his score to match Cohasset sophomore Kevin Barber in the top spot with a 40. However, the Cohasset player won one more hole to take a 5-4 decision. That knocked Norwell's advantage down a point to 12-6 with the first foursome in the clubhouse.

Cohasset golfers also won three of the remaining four head-to-head matches, but did not gain back enough holes to wipe out the huge edge provided by Cavvichi.

Norwell senior Brian Shannon won five holes out of the number four spot in the rotation, shooting a matching 44 with Cohasset counterpart Chris Simms.

Cohasset senior Colin Magruder hit a 41 out of the third spot, edging Norwell sophomore Brendan Gilligan in shots (43) and holes, 5-4.

Norwell sophomore Ryan Sweeney, making his varsity debut, did a commendable job of sticking with Cohasset senior Ricky Lordan in the fifth spot, taking four holes.

Another Norwell underclassman, freshman Mike White (47), hung tough with another CHS upperclassman, junior Dave Bouchard (45), out of the sixth and final spot, earning 3.5 hole points.

"I really felt going in we'd have to play just about a perfect game to beat Cohasset," said Camerota. "And we had several players respond and come up big. Cody was just immense, and Dempsey and Gilligan played great as well. We're getting some great play from our younger players right now. Cavicchi, Gilligan and White are playing well, and Ryan Sweeney made a nice debut. It's exciting not only for this year, but the future."

Of course, there's still that date at Cohasset Country Club this coming Wednesday looming.

"Yeah, we had a huge home course advantage (Tuesday)," conceded Camerota. "Scituate Country Club is not an easy course if you're not used to it. It'll obviously be a lot tougher when we go to (Cohasset's) place."

Skippers 29, Harwich 25

Last Wednesday's 29-25 win at Cranberry Valley was not only the Skippers first ever win on Harwich's home course, but the first ever win over Harwich, period.

Sophomore Kevin Barber shot a team best 39 out of the top spot to pull out a 6-3 decision, and senior Ricky Lordan shot a solid 42 to pull out a critical 5-4 decision out of the fourth spot.

Senior Colin Magruder and Chris Simms both shot 45. The result was a 4.5 to 4.5 split and a 6-3 win, respectively.

Junior Mark Bouchard shot a 46 out of the sixth spot to take 5.5 of nine available points.

"This was a huge win for our team and this program," said Sweeney. "We got some clutch play when we needed it."

Skippers 27, Mashpee 27

The Skippers were a shot away from winning or losing a few times in this match, played Monday at the Cohasset Country Club, but they missed and made just enough, and the match ended in a tie.

Sweeney looked back on a number of missed opportunities that might have kept his team perfect on the season, but then noted "we could have missed one we made too and then this would be a loss."

"You can't think about the misses after a match like this," he concluded. "It does not good."

Barber was again low man. He again shot a 39 and again pulled out the 6-3 decision.

Magruder came up with a 42 to take five holes.

Simms also shot a 42 to earn a 4.5-4.5 split.

Lordan also took five of nine points, hitting a 45.

Bouchard shot a 48, but still managed to win four holes.

Senior captain Tim Pilczak was matched up against some extremely tough competition in the second for both matches.

Coastal Stars report

Mike Carbone led the offensive charge with three goals and an assist, and goalie Connor Maher anchored a suffocating defense, as the Squirt A Coastal Stars opened the season with a 9-0 win over the South Shore Eagles. The Stars gained the early momentum with strong skating and unselfish passing, but it looked to be a frustrating afternoon, especially when Patrick Burchill and Jake Durkin were denied in front. But then Carbone rifled a shot to the top of the net from in close at 7:54 of the first. The Stars' defensive corps of E.J. Culhane, Dan LeBlanc, Kevin McDougall, and D.J. Evans kept the puck out of their own end, and the Stars held the 1-0 lead after one.

Johnny Ryan made it 2-0 at :09 of the second when he rebounded a Jonathan Spitz shot into the right side. Mike Carbone, with assists from D.J. Evans and Dan LeBlanc, picked up his second goal about a minute later. Trevor Salmon and Johnny Ryan assisted Carbone when he tucked his hat trick goal into the left side at the 9:30 mark. Two minutes later, Neil Conway ripped the face-off to Jonathan Spitz in the slot. Spitz' one-time backhander quickly found the five hole, and the Stars were up 5-0 after two.

Conway scored thirty-nine seconds into the third when he picked up the puck in the neutral zone, laid a deadly fake on the defense, and potted a backhander. Johnny Ryan was on the spot again two minutes later, this time rebounding a Chris Carpenter shot into the right side. Patrick Burchill's hard work out front paid off when he scored at 3:39, with assists to Evans and McDougall. Jonathan Spitz closed out the scoring with a rebound of Chris Carpenter's shot at 7:06. The Eagles tested Connor Maher with a flurry in front of the net, but Maher was too quick with the pads and glove, and the shutout was saved.

OBITUARIES

Joseph D. White

Joseph D. White

Joseph D. White of Cohas set and Wareham, a retired supervisor of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority and a former officer of an electrical contracting firm, died unexpectedly on Sept. 16, 2004. He was 81.

Mr. White was born in Jamaica Plain, one of 11 children of Margaret (O'Connell) and Louis A. White. Following his 1941 graduation from Jamaica Plain High School where he was president of his Senior Class, he enlisted with the Coast Guard Auxiliary for the duration of World War II. He became an apprentice electrician, joined the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW 103) and was a proud union member for 22 years. He subsequently rose to be a manager of Anderson Coffey, a large electrical contracting firm. Ultimately, as Vice President and Treasurer of the firm, he helped win the contract to design the electrical systems of the lighting, including the scoreboard, at Fenway Park. During this period, he became friends with several of the Boston Red Sox team members.

In 1976, John Driscoll, Chairman of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, recruited Mr. White to be a Supervisor of the Turnpike, responsible for all the installation, maintenance and repairs of the electrical systems and buildings along the entire length of the Turnpike. He retired in 1990.

Mr. White was diagnosed with Parkinson's Disease in 1975 but he never gave in, and he courageously continued his fight with the difficulties presented by his ever-advancing illness. He never missed a day of work and maintained his warm, caring and friendly manner. "My father was truly a wonderful and unique man, someone whom I wish to emulate", said his daughter Deborah. He was a very talented engineer, a motivating leader to the people who served under and around him and an inspiration to others handicapped by Parkinson's. He was a loving and dedicated husband and devoted father right up to the end.

He leaves Estelle Marie (nee Howard), his dearly loved wife of 58 years, four children — Robert of Mansfield and Wareham; Joseph Jr. of Durham, NH; David of Rochester, Mass.; and Deborah of Boston and Wareham. He also leaves eight grandchildren, one great-grandchild and his two sisters, Kathleen Murphy and Elizabeth Murphy.

Friends may call between 9 a.m. and 10:15 a.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 21 at the Lawlor Funeral Home in West Roxbury. A celebration mass of Mr. White's life will be held at 11 a.m. at the Holy Name Church in West Roxbury with burial to follow at St. Joseph's Cemetery in West Roxbury.

Donations in Joseph White's memory may be made to: American Parkinson's Disease Association (APDA) 720 Harrison Avenue, Suite 707 Boston, MA 02118

Barbara K. Rinkavage

Barbara K. Rinkavage, 82, of Bristol, Conn., died on Sept. 9, 2004, at Shady Oaks.

Mr. Rinkavage was born in Cohasset, the daughter of the late Thomas and Helen (Daly) Keating.

She retired from SNET after 44 years and was a past Women's Champion for Pequabuck Golf Club and was very active within the club.

She leaves her husband Willis A. Rinkavage; her stepsons and their wives, William and Gayle Rinkavage of Wolcott, Conn. and Robert and Bettie Rinkavage of Bristol, Conn.; her sisters, Pauline Keating and Mary Keating of Cohasset; a step granddaughter, Tiffany Jajack and seven nieces and nephews.

She was predeceased by her first husband Paul Dickau and her brother T. Gerard Keating.

A Mass of Christian burial was held Sept. 9, at St. Matthew Church.

Arrangements were handled by O'Brien Funeral Home, Forestville, Conn.

Interment was held in St. Joseph Cemetery, Bristol, Conn.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to: American Heart Association, 5 Brookside Dr, Wallingford, CT 06492.

Marion C. Smith

Marion C. Smith, 87, a resident of Cohasset for 30 years, died Sept. 19, 2004, at the Life Care Center in Scituate following a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Smith was a self-employed housekeeper for more than 20 years, retiring in the late '70s.

Born in Marshfield, daughter of the late Emerson and Cora Burleigh, she was raised in Scituate and graduated from Scituate High School. After graduation she worked at the Hingham and Quincy shipyards in the payroll department.

Mrs. Smith was past president of the 60-Plus Club in Cohasset.

She leaves a son, Charles H. Smith of Bowie, Md.; a daughter, Jean Phippen of Bettendorf, Iowa; a brother, Howard Burleigh of West Bridgewater; five grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; and several nieces. She was sister of the late Wilson Burleigh and Priscilla DeMello, formerly of Scituate.

A funeral service was held at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset. Interment was in Mt. Hope Cemetery, Scituate.

In lieu of flowers, , memorial gifts may be made to South Shore Hospice, 100 Baystate Drive, Braintree.

Marie P. Donovan

Marie P. (Burke) Donovan, 81, of N. Scituate, died Sept. 20, 2004, at South Shore Hospital after a long illness.

She was born, raised and educated in the South End of Boston, where she was a graduate of Cathedral High School. She lived in N. Scituate for 35 years and spent winters in Boynton Beach, Fla., for more than 20 years.

Mrs. Donovan worked in the financial industry and The Welch Co., in Scituate. She enjoyed her family, traveling and spending winters in Florida.

She leaves her husband, William M. Donovan Sr. of N. Scituate; a son, William M. Donovan Jr. and his wife, Eileen of Scituate, a daughter Patricia M. Nixon and her husband John of Reston, Va.; and six grandchildren, William M. Donovan III and Sarah H Donovan, Mark Nixon, Sean Nixon, Timothy Nixon, Brain Nixon.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. on Friday, Sept. 24, at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Interment will be in new St. Mary's Cemetery in Scituate.

Visiting hours will be Thursday, Sept. 23, at McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.

Changes in store for Hanover Mall

Wal-Mart expected to boost business

By Ed Baker
EBAKER@CNC.COM

Preparations for a new Wal-Mart store at the Hanover Mall are in full swing.

Hanover Mall officials expect business to pick up even more when Wal-Mart opens its doors in late October.

"We expect Wal-Mart to do triple the amount of business Ames did when it was here," said mall general manager Ed Callahan.

Ames closed in October, 2002 as a cost cutting move when the store's corporate managers filed for bankruptcy.

The opening of Wal-Mart comes at a time when competition for shoppers is fierce, with South Shore Plaza to the north in Braintree and Independence Mall to the south in Kingston. There is also a 460,000 square foot upscale shopping center under construction in Hingham off Derby Street that will challenge these malls for business. The Derby Street Shoppes will include Talbots, Barnes & Noble, William Sonoma and REI Sports.

Callahan said the proximity of the complexes indicates there is high consumer demand on the South Shore. He also said Wal-Mart and the addition of various businesses at the mall during the past few years, including the opening of Patriot Cinemas in December 2001, is a boon to profits.

Callahan said the mall's ability to generate a profit factored into its purchase by Gregory Greenfield & Associates LTD, an Atlanta firm. Greenfield paid $67 million to buy the mall from TA Realty of Boston in early November.

"They (Greenfield) have spent over $2 million to replace the mall's roof," said Callahan. "They've also made significant upgrades to the mall's parking and landscaping."

Greenfield Associates owns 14 shopping centers around the nation. The firms operates the Sears Town Mall in Leominister, a mall on Long Island, N.Y, and a shopping complex in Syracuse.

Patriot Cinemas provides viewers with stadium style seating and the latest sound system, and is looking to expand.

"We've filed a request with the [Hanover] planning board to expand Patriot Cinemas from six movie screens to 10 screens," said Callahan.

The proposal could be difficult to achieve because the state's River Protection Act forbids enlarging an existing structure within 200 feet near a wetlands site. Exceptions to this law can be allowed by the conservation commission if a proponent submits plans that provide the latest septic system mechanisms and storm drainage controls.

Board members will meet with mall officials on Oct. 4 at 7:15 p.m. to hear details about the proposed theater expansion.

Other boons to the mall's profits include the opening of Trader Joe's, in November, says Callahan. Trader Joe's offers traditional food staples such as milk, eggs, bread and hard to find items like Macedonia pinger or lamb from New Zealand at affordable prices.

"Trader Joe's is doing great business," added Callahan.

The profitability of Trader Joe's is encouraging Panera Bread to construct a shop next door. Panera will offer buyers a variety of bread flavors that contain sharp cheeses, rich pecans or piquant Greek olives.

"It's a nice store," said mall marketing director Lisa Washburne. "They play classical music inside."

Panera Bread [which recently opened at the Derby Street Shoppes] is expected to open sometime during the fall.

"Grand Wireless opened this year and Victoria's Secret is being remodeled," said Callahan. "We're expecting to re-open Victoria's by Sept. 23."

Washburne said the malls profits has also been boosted by the installation of a 75-foot pylon sign near Route 3 in May.

"We've used the sign for an amber alert a few weeks ago," said Washburne. "It's a fabulous addition to the mall. We've used it to advertise sales. We've heard great customer stories about the sign. We've used it to advertise Trader Joe's."

Callahan said the marquee gives the mall much needed exposure to potential customers. "It gives us the exposure we need for people who are driving south on Route 3 and especially if they are driving north," said Callahan.

He said recent state traffic studies indicate about 100,000 motorists drive on the highway each day.

The large traffic volumes on Route 3 has mall officials concerned about congestion at the expressway's northbound exit ramp. Drivers and customers going to the mall sometimes have lengthy waiting periods at the off ramp during peak travel periods.

Gov. Mitt Romney recently approved a $2.5 billion bond bill that authorizes more than $1 billion for various roadway construction and traffic signals in the state. The bill includes approximately $300,000 for a proposed traffic signal near the exit ramp and $1.5 million to widen a nearby overpass. Critics of the bill say it has a large number of requests to fund various road projects that are unaffordable.

Romney says his administration will review the various proposals and decide which projects merit approval.

"From a business standpoint we need to get that signal light installed," said Callahan. "It will benefit all the businesses along Route 53."

Washburne said the ability of customers to get to a mall is vital for a community's commerce. "We have a lot of people who live in Weymouth who say they shop at the Hanover Mall because it's easy to get to," said Washburne.

She also said the complex has personal appeal for families. "We cater to moms with kids," said Wasburne. "We have a play center the kids can use when their mothers are here."

Cohasset retreat featured in Rosary series on BCTV

Boston Catholic Television (BCTV) will hold its 13th annual telethon on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 24 & 25, from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. both days. The event features entertainment from local musicians and interviews with the personalities from BCTV's religious, prayerful, and educational programs. The telethon is one of the few cable TV fundraisers that doubles as a showcase for top-notch local talent. The station is entirely viewer supported and relies on the telethon to boost funding for production the following year. BCTV Director Monsignor Paul McInerny will co-host the telethon with the station's General Manager Jay Fadden.

The Rosary episodes filmed here will show footage of the oceanfront grounds and buildings of the property and the coastline.

Monsignor Paul McInerny on the grounds of the Sisters of Saint Joseph Retreat on Jerusalem Road for an episode of "The Rosary" series filmed in Cohasset last month.

The spectacular view from the Sisters of Saint Joseph Retreat on Jerusalem Road provides the perfect backdrop for Monsignor Paul McInerny, who is co-hosting the telethon on Boston Catholic Television. The Rosary episode filmed in Cohasset is one of the highlights of this year's telethon.

One of the highlights of this year's telethon will be the debut of two new episodes of one of BCTV's flagship series, The Rosary, which was filmed last month at the retreat house of the Sisters of Saint Joseph in Cohasset. The Rosary is one of the most watched programs on BCTV, as Monsignor McInerny travels to sites throughout New England to pray the mysteries of the rosary honoring Jesus and his mother. The Rosary episodes filmed here will show footage of the oceanfront grounds and buildings of the property and the coastline. The Rosary can be seen as part of the telethon at 10a.m.. and 7p.m. on Sept. 24 & 25.

Boston Catholic Television is carried in Cohasset by Comcast on cable channel 56 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays, 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.. However, Comcast has extended BCTV's hours for the telethon weekend so viewers can tune in the event in its entirety. Internet users can tune in the telethon via BCTV's all-new home page, www.catholictv.org, where a complete list of all the communities BCTV is available also can be found. At any time, viewers can watch the station's cable broadcast on the web site by clicking BCTV LIVE. During the telethon, viewers can call (617) 332-8655 to make a pledge or share their feedback.

Renowned storyteller at First Parish Nov. 7

Jay O'Callahan, the renowned storyteller, returns from an around-the-world tour to his home in Marshfield and a magical performance of his "Pill Hill Stores" at the First Parish Unitarian Meeting House on Sunday, Nov. 7 at 4 p.m.

Tickets are $20 – the show is appropriate for adults and children 12 and older. Advanced ticket sales are available at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 No. Main St., or by calling 781 – 383-1100 (wait for the prompt to Jay O'Callahan).

O'Callahan grew up in a section of Brookline, called "Pill Hill" because so many doctors resided there. The magical house and grounds of his parents were the perfect setting for parties filled with singing, drama, and conversation — a great atmosphere for a child's imagination to blossom. Jay started telling stories to his siblings to entertain them, and now it is his way of life.

The "Pill Hill" stories to be told in Cohasset are playlets of his growing up. From his office in Marshfield, O'Callahan describes his work as "parachuting into a community". He creates memorable characters and speaks in their voices. He enlivens characters with a puppeteer's face, a painter's hands, and a musician's voice and transforms a simple stage into a dynamic, sensitive world with compelling characters.

Tickets are available for Jay O'Callahan's Nov. 7 performance at the First Parish Unitarian Meeting House.

O'Callahan has been awarded the National Endowment Fellowship for solo performance excellence, and has performed his "Pill Hill Stories" at the Lincoln Center in New York City, the National Fine Arts Complex in London, and at the Abbey Theatre in Dublin. He is a longtime favorite on National Public Radio and has performed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and at the Winter Olympics.

Hurry - this event will sell out quickly!!! See his website http://www.ocallahan.com, and meet Jay at the reception with refreshments following his storytelling.

Barbara Dillon, member of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, is planting some of the tulip and narcissus bulbs from the club's fall bulb sale now underway.

Abbey yard sale is on Sept. 25

Food will be supplied by "frankie's" maker of the world's best hotdog

Glastonbury Abbey of Hingham's annual fall yard sale will be held this year on Saturday, Sept. 25, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

There will be an array of trash to treasure items from glassware to furniture. Also included will be a book sale, home baked goods sale, and a raffle of donated items from friends of the abbey and merchants in the area.

Food will be supplied by "frankie's" maker of the world's best hotdog.

So bring your family and friends and enjoy a fall outing. Join everyone on the great lawn of Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Route 228, Hingham.

Community Garden Club of Cohasset hosts bulb sale

This year the Community Garden Club of Cohasset is sponsoring a Bulb Sale as one of its fund raising events. A special collection of top size tulip, narcissus, and muscari bulbs is offered for sale between now and Oct. 15. Photographs of the blooms can be seen at the Cohasset Public Library or online at www.webwriteservices.com/bulbsale.htm. To place phone orders call 781-383-0998.

The following varieties are available: Tulips at $1 each include T. 'Black Parrot', 'Flaming Parrot', 'Hermione', 'Monsella', and a Rembrandt Tulip Mixture reminiscent of old Dutch paintings. Narcissus selections at $1.50 each include a Double Narcissus Mixture of hardy fragrant varieties, N. 'Manly', 'Lemon Beauty', and the old favorite 'Barrett Browning'. Little bright blue grape hyacinths, Muscari armeniacum, are the perfect accent for yellow daffodils and colorful tulips. They are sold in bags of 20 for $5.

All of the bulbs offered are hardy through cold New England winters when planted 6 or 8 inches deep in well-drained soil. With protection from freezing they are also very effective in pots. Garden Club horticulturists offer some suggestions to prevent your spring dreams from becoming gourmet treats for furry garden prowlers. To discourage squirrels from digging up newly planted tulips (and crocus), anchor pieces of nearly invisible black bird netting over the clusters of bulbs. The plastic netting or other wire mesh will deter furry paws, and the netting can also be loosely draped over emerging foliage and flower buds in the spring. It is a good idea to incorporate a balanced fertilizer into the soil at planting time, but avoid blood and bone meal because the scent attracts critters. Be sure to pick up any papery bulb tunics or skins left on top of the bed because they signal buried treasure. Avoid using hazardous deterrents like mothballs in the garden, but remember that narcissus are naturally toxic, so daffodils can be used as a beautiful barrier against hungry deer and rabbits.

Proceeds from the sale of bulbs will be used to support the many educational, environmental and historical projects undertaken by the Community Garden Club.

Chinese exercise classes offered

Lin Lin will be teaching the Dao Yin Ba Duan Jin - The Eight Pieces of Brocade, a Chinese health preservation exercise at the South Shore Community Center in two three hour workshops.

The workshop will be held on Oct. 14, from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and Oct. 28, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

On Oct. 14, from 10 to 10:30 a.m. , there will be a complimentary class for students to try. Students need to pre-register for this class.

The Eight Pieces of Brocade originated in the Southern Sung Dynasty in China approximately 800 years ago. It is considered to be the root of all Qigong forms. Every movement has a health purpose. These exercises are elegant, graceful and easy to learn. They consist of gentle stretching that lengthen the muscles and tendons and stimulate the meridians and internal organs.

Ammunition Depot reunion set for Sept. 25

A reunion for the former employees and military personnel of the U.S. Naval Hingham Ammunition Depot will be held Saturday, Sept. 25 at 1 p.m. in Wompatuck State Park Visitor's Center (formerly the Annex). Former employees and military personnel are encouraged to bring pertinent photos, "Shot and Shell" newsletters and other memorabilia. The center is the first building on the right after the park gate.

The ammunition depot provided ordnance for the U.S. military during World War I, World War II and the Korean War. Parts for the atomic bomb were also stored there. During the close of World War II almost 5,000 civilian and military people worked at the depot. The complex comprised four towns: Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell. It shut down in 1962.

Fire Department hosts open house

October is National Fire Prevention Month with "Fire Prevention Week" taking place from Oct. 3 to 9. Papa Gino's, in conjunction with the National Fire Protection Association, is teaming up with local fire departments to help educate the community on fire prevention. For the past 11 years, New England Fire Departments and Papa Gino's have helped educate more than 1 million people by supplying educational materials and free pizza at fire safety open houses. The Cohasset Fire Department is holding an open house at 44 Elm St., on Saturday, Oct. 2, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Dance at the Garage

There will be a dance at the Garage on Friday, Sept. 24, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone from grades 6 through 8 is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

The Teen Garage is open to grades 6 and over every Friday evening, from 4 to 10 p.m. and the first and third Saturdays of the month from 5 to 10 p.m.

Harvest supper at Beechwood Church

The Annual Harvest Supper and Auction, an autumn tradition, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church St. in Cohasset. The public is invited to get together for dinner on Thursday evening, Sept. 30, at 6:30 p.m. Dinner will include ham, string beans, Harvard beets, mashed potatoes, dessert as well as beverages. The harvest auction will take place following supper. Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for children. Reserve your tickets by calling 781-383-1298.

Full Day of Festivities for the South Shore

A full day of festivities for the entire South Shore is taking place on Oct. 2. Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum is celebrating the dedication of the Brooks Thomsen Singer Performance Center and the opening of our toddler play space.

This daylong event includes performances by the Tale Spinners, Inca Son Music & Dance, Gary the Silent Clown from Ringling Bros. Circus and Ryanhood along with face painting and arts and crafts activities for the kids. A dedication and a specially choreographed dance piece performed by the Meredith Butulis Dance Ensemble will be a couple of the special highlights of the day. The celebration begins at 10 a.m., admission is $4 for adults, $2 for children and $10 for families up to six members. Rain or shine. Parking is free. Call 781-383-3198 for more information.

Music by the Sea: Classic Cohasset meets Hingham Symphony

This weekend, step through the gate and back in time to the classical elegance of a Sunday afternoon by the sea in Cohasset. On Sunday, Sept. 26, from 3 to 6 p.m., the Board of Directors of Hingham Symphony Orchestra invites you to join them for an afternoon of music, light fare, and wine tasting, all to benefit the HSO.

The Roy family has generously offered to hold this event on the grounds of their family home on Jerusalem Road, with its breathtaking views of the Atlantic Ocean from every vantage point.

Marsh's Wine and Spirits in Norwell will provide a variety of wines to complement Arthur Roebuck's classic lawn party fare and a selection of international cheeses and condiments contributed by the new Whole Foods market in Hingham.

At 4:30 p.m., the Hingham Symphony Brass Quintet will perform a lively musical interlude, led by conductor Jin Kim. Rain or shine.

A limited number of tickets at $100 per person are available by calling the HSO at 781-740-5694. Reservations are required. For information about the HSO, visit www.hinghamsymphony.org, or call for a season brochure.

"This is Whoopi's chance to get her sea legs back in front of a live audience," explains Steven Maler who will present Goldberg in Boston, Chicago and Washington, D.C., as part of Wilde Nites, a new performance series aimed at the burgeoning gay and lesbian market.

"We're thrilled to be launching this new series with Whoopi. This is an exciting time for her and for us. It is a real coup for Wilde Nites to be able to present Whoopi. She is extraordinary. Whoopi is fearless, she always has something to say."

Maler, vice president for artistic programming for the Wang Center, founding artistic director of the Commonwealth Shakespeare Company and an award-winning independent filmmaker, is enthusiastic about his latest venture.

"This is a way for gays, lesbians and their friends to congregate as a community. If 40,000 people can show up for Gay Pride each year, then I know there is a definite market for this project. I'm really excited about the possibilities ahead of us," explains Maler who is talking with artists like Melissa Etheridge, Lily Tomlin and Nathan Lane about future Wilde Nites.

"An Evening with Whoopi Goldberg" will be presented Friday, Sept. 24 at the Wang Theatre, 260 Tremont Street, Boston. For tickets and information, visit the Wang box office or call 1-800-447-7400. VIP packages are available by calling (617) 266-0025.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

WOULD YOU LIKE SOME ASSISTANCE?

There are certain listening situations in which those with hearing impairments may avail themselves of helpful devices that can help them hear a great deal better than with hearing instruments alone. Assistive Listening Devices (ALDs) are amplification instruments that are designed to amplify sounds, such as movie dialogue in theatres and the speech of speakers in public places, and deliver it directly to the listener's ears. Unlike a hearing instrument that houses the microphone, amplifier, and loudspeaker in the body of the instrument, the microphone of an ALD is separated from the body of the instrument and is placed at the sound source. Thus, it is more adept at picking up the desired signal with minimum interference from background noise.

In fact, the ability to selectively amplify signal and not background noise is the biggest advantage of ALDs. If you are having difficulty hearing in a specific situation, ask us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER for information about what is available in an ALD system that may help you. At 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, we provide complete hearing aid services to clients with hearing problems, including education and training so they can optimally benefit from amplification and communication devices. Have you had your hearing tested lately? Today is a good day to call 781-337-1144 to arrange a free hearing test.

P.S. Assistive Listening Devices send sound signals from the microphone (transmitter) to receiver via hard-wired or FM radio signal, an infrared light signal, or electromagnetic energy (loop).

Worker charged with stealing museum funds

Cohasset plans review of its own

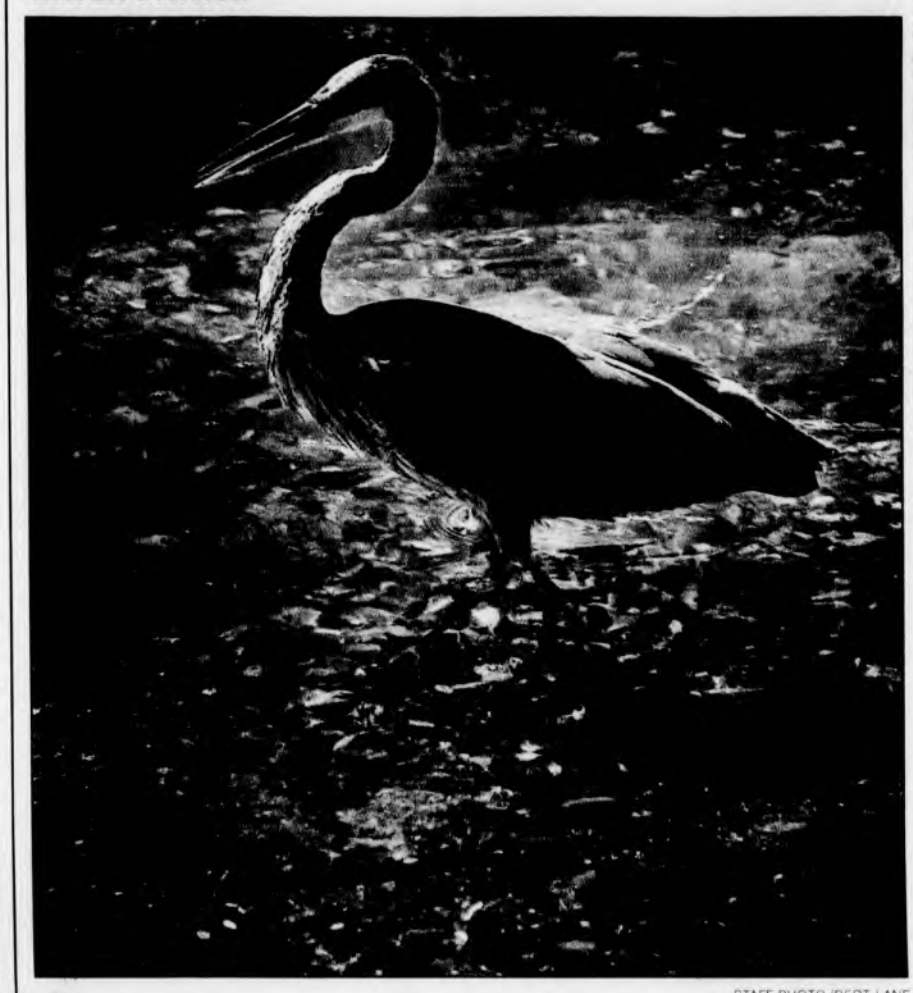
By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is conducting its own investigation of payroll records as charges have surfaced alleging former administrative assistant Nicole N. Bartlett stole more than $200,000 from her previous employer, the Boston Children's Museum.

Bartlett, 43, of Marshfield, is being accused of forging signatures on unauthorized checks she issued from museum accounts and depositing them in her personal accounts. Allegedly, she wrote more than 440 checks to accounts she controlled between October 1998 and March 2003, and could face a maximum of 10 years in prison.

Bartlett was hired by former Town Manager Mark Haddad and had worked in Cohasset since May 12, 2003. As the administrative assistant to the town manager, she was responsible for assisting both the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen, and took meeting minutes. In addition, Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said she was responsible for doing the payroll and benefits for the town and the school.

Buckley said upon hearing the allegations, he was concerned about the possibility of Cohasset's payroll having been affected. "That's why I accepted her resignation," he said. Buckley said Bartlett offered her resignation Thursday, and he accepted it Monday morning. Repeated attempts to contact Bartlett were unsuccessful.



Buckley is the director of finance for the town, and with the resignation of Haddad this May, has stepped up to assume town Manager duties. In light of his position, Buckley has a fair amount of oversight over the town's funds, and said he feels the town has an air-tight system, as checks are generated off site and pre-printed. However, "The auditors are on the way," said Buckley, and an audit will be conducted dating back to May 13, 2003.

Buckley said the bank the town deals with for payroll will be participating with the auditing process as well, just to make sure all the bases are covered. "We're dealing with the public's money, so we have to be sure," he said.

In a press release issued Wednesday morning, the Board of Selectmen said Bartlett is the subject of a fed-

Girl Scout Aisling Guinee loves reading to children

Scout's project is one for the books

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Aisling Guinee is used to being around children. With 11 aunts and uncles on her father's side alone, cousins are abundant — not to mention her two younger brothers and younger sister. With all that experience, she has a natural ability to connect with children, which has given her the qualities to one day become a wonderful teacher.

And she has already taken the first step in that direction.

Aisling hosted a reading program for preschool children this summer at the Kids Connection day care and preschool in Quincy. The program, which she coordinated and carried out on her own, qualified her to receive a Silver Award for Girl Scouting.

Aisling has been a Girl Scout since she was in second grade, and the lessons she has learned

Burns challenges Bradley for rep seat

Fellow Democrat will run write-in campaign

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Hingham resident Laura Burns is taking on Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, in the state representative race for the 3rd Plymouth District, which includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and the 3rd precinct of Scituate.

Burns, a registered Democrat who also chairs the Hingham Advisory Committee, announced her plans to challenge Bradley's legislative seat this week. Bradley is not being challenged by a Republican contender as he seeks his third term in office.

Because the primary election has passed, Burns is asking voters to write in her name on the ballot. "I have spoken with many voters who are ready to send Garrett a message," Burns said. "Though he has been very popular in the district, he disappointed a large portion of his base by voting to restrict marriage rights at the Constitutional Convention last spring."

At the 2004 Constitutional Convention, Bradley voted in favor of a constitutional

Town disputes ranking in Hub magazine article

Cohasset officials say wrong data used

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Residents may have been shocked to learn the September issue of Boston Magazine ranked Cohasset High School 69th out of roughly 150 public high schools in the state. For a school system which prides itself on being able to provide outstanding public education services, the rank came not only as a surprise, but didn't make sense.

"We knew, based on our numbers, the rank had to be wrong," said Supt. Denise Walsh, and after a little investigating, the school came to find out, it was. Incorrect data was used to compile the list, and Cohasset's mark was way under par. "Boston Magazine did not have the correct information," said Walsh.

Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey contacted Boston Magazine Senior Editor Katherine Ozment for an explanation on the ranking. Ozment replied the figures had been double-checked and the magazine has determined they are accurate. Ozment also said the fact that the data showed Cohasset did not send any students to four-year private colleges could have impacted the town's ranking. However, that statistic couldn't be farther from the truth.

"It is inaccurate and they did us a disservice," said Walsh, adding the magazine, "never checked the data." In fact, roughly 50 percent of students who graduate from Cohasset go on to private four-year colleges.

Guidance Counselor Ed Leonard said the ranking was based on statistics from the class of 2003. Those students were accepted to some very prestigious private schools and are now sophomores at Harvard University, Yale University, Boston College,

Correction is noted

The Warrant for the Special Town Meeting will open Oct. 12 and close Oct. 19. Residents submitting articles must collect 100 signatures to submit an article. Residents submitting articles for the Annual Town Meeting are required to collect 10 signatures. The Mariner regrets the error.

Haddad seeks Abington job

As the town of Cohasset conducts its search for a new Town Manager to replace Mark Haddad, who abruptly resigned from the position May 5, it seems Haddad has found a potential new employer in the town of Abington. Abington Selectmen have narrowed down their field of 46 candidates to three, and Haddad is rumored to be the top choice for the position.

School Committee technical problems

The Sept. 23 School Committee meeting was not televised due to technical difficulties. It is anticipated the problem will be fixed in time for the next meeting scheduled for Oct. 7. School Committee meetings are now held in the new community meeting room, located near the superintendent's office in the high school. All are welcome to attend.

At the Oct. 7 meeting the School Committee is slated to hear a presentation from Guidance Counselor Ed Leonard regarding the changes to the SAT, students who participated in the Summer Institute at the Center for Student Coastal Research will present their findings, and there will be a presentation on the Camp Marist and Camp Bournedale outings.

Selectmen cancelled

For those who tuned in to the Tuesday, Sept. 28, meeting of the Board of Selectmen and found dead air, there is nothing wrong with the cable. The meeting was cancelled. Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said the only issue on the agenda was the tree removal at the Historical Society buildings, and its members were not able to attend the meeting. The next scheduled meeting is Tuesday, Oct. 5, at 7 p.m. in the Selectmen's meeting room.

School open house

Cohasset Middle School will hold its back to school open house tonight, Thursday, Sept. 30, from 7 to 9 p.m. The High School hosted its open house yesterday from 7 to 8:50 p.m.

Boat removal

Harbormaster John Muncey asks that all boat owners please remove their boats from the docks before Oct. 17. For more information, please call the harbormaster's office at (781) 383-0863.

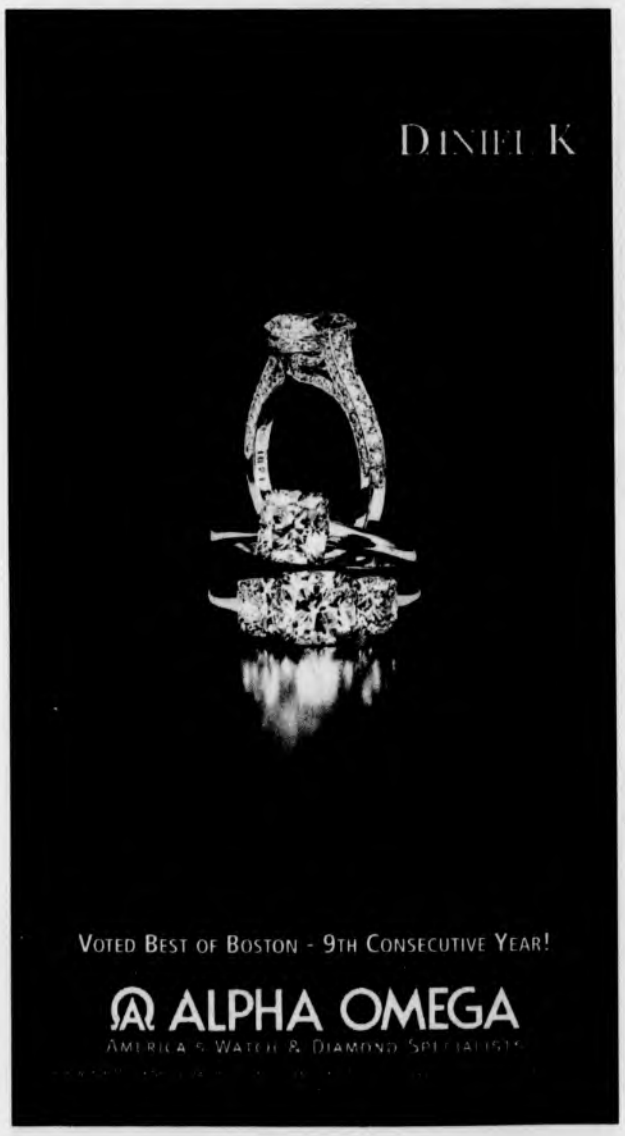
Hedlund announces municipal aid grant



State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, has announced that Governor Romney has signed into law a supplemental budget bill that includes $75 million in additional municipal aid grants for the Commonwealth's 352 cities and towns. The Town of Cohasset will receive $29,132 from this bill in the form of a one-time grant to be used as local officials see fit for this fiscal year. This additional funding was made possible due to the Commonwealth's current $725 million revenue surplus.

"After years of reductions to local aid, this funding couldn't come at a better time for our communities," said Hedlund. "The local officials in my district have done a tremendous job of weathering the latest recession, and now that the state is running a surplus our local communities should be the first ones to see their budgets restored."

The idea for supplemental municipal aid originated from the Governor, who proposed one-time grants totaling $150 million in a supplemental budget bill he filed last July. The Senate then proposed its own supplemental budget with a similar proposal for $150 million in additional municipal aid at the end of Legislative formal sessions. Ultimately, the House of Representatives and the Senate compromised on $75 million in a $649 million supplemental budget that was passed in early September.

"I appreciate Governor Romney's leadership in recommending this appropriation," said Hedlund. "Cohasset officials may now utilize the funds for anything from eliminating user fees to one-time capital improvements."

Sewer Commission approves hookups in central district

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After years of hearing there is no available capacity to tie-in additional lots to the central sewer district, some landowners were given hope Monday when the Sewer Commission said capacity has been found to tie in roughly 23 vacant lots.

However, Tara Tradd, administrative assistant to the commission, said residents have been warned not to get their hopes up, as the commission still has a lot of work to do before ruling on individual lots.

Tradd said every central district sewer connection request submitted, "From the beginning of time," will be pulled from the files and compiled for the commission in the order it was received. The commissioners will then go through the applications one by one, ruling on whether the lot meets the criteria the board has set, such as directly abutting an existing sewer line, and will then grant the first 23 applications which qualify.

"People are assuming they're approved," said Tradd, but in fact, the commission has only ruled on the central district hookups as a group. Individual cases will be decided at the commission's next meeting, slated for Monday, Oct. 4 at 6 p.m.

Tradd said once the word was out that lots in the central district were eligible for hookups, her Town Hall office was inundated with new applications from hopeful residents. There could be more of the same after Monday's meeting when the commission will likely rule on a similar tie-in plans for the North Cohasset Sewer District. Residents there have also been looking to hook up to municipal sewer, and Tradd said the commission needed a little more time to speak with counsel before acting, as there is a pending lawsuit in place from the Jerusalem Road Estates that could be affected if sewer connections are granted in that district.

Jerusalem Road Estates, the proposed 25-home subdivision across from Straits Pond, was denied town sewer access, and was also denied access to Hull's capacity. The developers had negotiated with Hull to purchase sewer capacity at a hefty price, and the Sewer Commission denied that request, stating it could create a bidding war for capacity between the town and a private property owners. The land does not yet have a wastewater solution, and the law suit is still pending.

But Tradd said capacity has now been found in the North Cohasset District for roughly 23 lots.

While residents living in homes in both districts have been able to tie-in their primary residences, hooking up vacant lots has been a different story. With a connection, vacant lots can be sold and developed, meaning the town could be sitting on roughly 46 soon-to-be-built, single-family homes between the two districts.

Adding 46 homes to the town's housing roster will increase the need for affordable housing. The town is trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state, and the increase in homes will require building five more units of affordable housing. In addition, those homes will potentially add more children to the school system.

Search closes in on next town leader

Committee expresses confidence in town administrator pool

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The candidates for the Town Manager position are down to what the search committee calls "a very impressive group" of 12. Members of the group are certain there is a new leader for Cohasset in the mix.

Members of the committee met Monday night to whittle down the pile of 76 résumés to a number closer to 10. Those individuals will be contacted to ensure they are still interested in the position. From there, interested candidates will be interviewed by the committee, and a group of roughly five will be selected to proceed to the final round of interviews, to be conducted by the Board of Selectmen — the ultimate hiring authority.

Preliminary interviews are allowed to be conducted in private, to protect the identities of the potential candidates. Interviews with finalists conducted by the Board of Selectmen will be an open process.

"We've got some serious players," said Search Committee Chairman Rob Spofford, adding last week, with the Sept. 28 application deadline fast approaching, many candidates sent in their résumés at the last minute.

In that last wave of applications, "A number of good candidates came in," said Spofford. "We should be pleased."

Even though the deadline has passed, the committee says it will accept résumés until the position is filled, as there has been some additional interest expressed by potential candidates that did not receive word about the position until just before the deadline. Town Treasurer/Tax Collector Joe DiVito, who is on the committee, sent out 350 notices about the position over the weekend to Town Managers and Assistant Town Managers throughout the state to make sure they all know about the opportunity. Committee member Sam Pease had expressed his interest in spreading the word about the opening to qualified individuals who might currently be very content in the position they hold, but might also consider a transfer if the right opportunity came along.

> "We've got some serious players. A number of good candidates came in. We should be pleased."
> Search Committee Chairman Rob Spofford

"I think it's fabulous," Pease said of DiVito's efforts.

Although the committee feels confident the next Town Manager is in the mix of résumés they currently hold, it asked a representative from a third-party search firm to meet with them to discuss the benefits hiring an independent company can bring. With the number of towns who are currently seeking Town Mangers, there is always the possibility the search will progress and there might not be a sufficient pool of candidates to choose from in the end. As a back up plan, the committee said it might be a good idea to have a company with expertise waiting in the wings, and asked Dick Bennett from Bennett Yarger Associates in Scituate to come in and participate in the meeting.

Marathon meeting ends in KoKo Island hearing extension

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In what could have possibly been the longest Planning Board meeting ever on record, the board and developers for the KoKo Island and Hair Affair site finally agreed at 12:30 a.m. to continue the hearing until October.

Clearly a hot topic in town, residents on both sides of the issue packed the Town Hall basement meeting room last week, almost resulting in a change of venue, and many stayed until the very end.

From the meeting's outset, there was confusion as to whether the presentation should even take place. As a resident of Fairoaks Lane, which abuts the site, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore recused himself from the discussion to be fair, leaving only three members of the board. Legally, the board didn't know what the vote would have to be to pass the project with only three members, and it was decided Town Counsel should be contacted on the matter.

But the developers had planned on giving a presentation, and that is just what they did.

At the July 14 meeting of the board, which is when the last KoKo Island public hearing took place, Michael Tack of the Nauset Group — the company looking to turn the current KoKo Island and Hair Affair buildings into a combined Asian restaurant and Dunkin' Donuts with a drive-up window — said it was his understanding the only concerns left for the site were traffic safety issues. With a drive-up window, traffic will be more prevalent in the lot, and abutters as well as the board were concerned about noise and air pollution, as well as the additional traffic.

"I'm very confident and happy to say that we've taken everything into consideration over the last few months, we've listened very carefully, and I think in a very good way, we've made changes," said Tack, adding he has "taken off his developers' rose-colored glasses," and has taken a good look at the site, and feels it is superior to other similar sites both in town, and in the state.

Changes to the plans include reducing the points of egress from two down to one. Engineer John Cavanaro of John Cavanaro Consulting said he had spoken with Mass Highway and representatives there said they "would prefer something like this configuration, with one entrance and exit point." In addition, dedicated fire lanes have been added, a fire hydrant has been added to the front lot, and the parking has been redirected in front. With the closure of the egress, Cavanaro said additional green space has been added to the site.

"We have to make it work for us. We are looking for good plans, which they (developers) have, and we're asking these people to go a lot of hoops."
Susan Turgiss, Jerusalem Road resident

Rick Bryant of Rizzo Assiciates provided a traffic report regarding the site and said in his opinion, "This is a very good site." He said from a traffic standpoint, this new configuration works, and because the lot is on the right side of the road, it will provide easy access for those traveling north to swing in, purchase their morning coffee, and get right back on the road. "We love the site from that perspective," he said. In addition, because the lot is so large, he said it will help keep vehicles off the street while in the queue, and provides a large amount of parking.

The new plans feature 59 parking spaces, and room for 16 cars in the drive-up line. With that in mind, the site can actually accommodate 75 cars, Bryant said. He said because the restaurant will only use the parking at night and the Dunkin' Donuts will use the majority of its spaces during the morning and afternoon hours, the two businesses will be able to share the space. "There's one a.m. operation and one p.m. operation, and that means less pavement. It serves two different uses on one site."

While Bryant said it is impossible to be able to tell the exact amount of traffic the site will generate, it will not add to the amount of traffic Cohasset sees. He said most likely only locals and people who already travel the road will stop to get coffee, and the site will not generate any more traffic than already passes by.

But some abutters said traffic is already a problem in that area and adding this attraction will make matters worse. Trying to make a left-hand turn out of Sohier Street onto Route 3A is close to impossible, and some even said they will turn right to make a left turn or bypass the street entirely because the traffic is so bad. In addition, with Hingham Lumber already operating, the train on its way, and the proposed Avalon development and proposed Cook Estate development all in close proximity to the site, in addition to the preschool and Spanish learning center next to the site, they worry traffic will be too much to bear, especially during the commuting hours.

Some also noted traffic does not just flow in a north-bound direction, and those commuters who travel south and wish to make a left-turn into the site will further complicate the traffic issue.

However, Susan Turgiss, 96 Jerusalem Road, said the town has a limited amount of business zoning and "We have to make it work for us. We are looking for good plans, which they (developers) have, and we're asking these people to go a lot of hoops." She said the town needs thriving businesses and the plans for this site will provide just that. Turgiss' comments resulted in a round of applause.

Peter Goldberg from Tech Environmental conducted the air and noise studies on the property and found the air quality will meet air standards even with every parking space and the queue full to capacity. In addition, he said tests have concluded abutters will not be able to hear patrons ordering from the menu board. However, abutters who say they can currently hear noise from the parking lot, with foliage at its peak, without the additional traffic moving through, weren't thoroughly convinced.

At roughly 11:15 p.m., the board began asking the development team if it would be willing to come back before the board at the next possible date, and continue the hearing process. After much back-and-forth discussion, the development team agreed to come back Oct. 6 for a final hearing, and extend the application until Oct. 14 to allow the board time to file the proper paperwork, should the plans pass muster.

The Planning Board will make its final decision on the KoKo Island and Hair Affair site plans at its Oct. 6 meeting, to be held in the basement meeting room of Town Hall. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. and all are welcome to attend. For more information, please contact the Planning Board office at (781) 383-3517.

Cohasset MCAS scores make the grade

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The scores for the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System, or MCAS test, are in, and Supt. Denise Walsh said the town has a lot to be proud of.

Released Sept. 23, the scores show that passing rates have continued to rise annually across the state, and Walsh said officials would like to see students striving toward not only achieving a passing grade, but obtaining proficient and advances scores across the board.

"The bar is about to be raised again," she said, and she has no doubt Cohasset students are up for the challenge.

Walsh said this year's scores reflect a very positive trend, as a good portion of students have scored in the proficient and advanced categories. "That's where we want to be," she said.

In grade 10 mathematics, there has been significant improvement as 57 percent scored in the advanced category, which is up from 43 percent in 2003. In addition, 33 percent scored proficient, which is up from 25 percent in 2003. In total, 90 percent of the students in grade 10 scored in either the advanced or proficient categories in math.

In the grade 10 English language arts MCAS test, 41 percent scored advanced, which is up from 39 percent in 2003, and 48 percent scored proficient. In total, 99 percent of grade 10 students passed both tests.

"The bar is about to be raised again."
School Supt. Denise Walsh

The grade eight mathematics scores also show a 10 percent increase from 25 percent of the students scoring in the advanced or proficient categories in 2003, to 35 percent in 2004.

In grade six, mathematics scores were fairly evenly distributed between advanced, proficient, and needs improvement, at 38 percent, 33 percent, and 26 percent, respectively.

In grade seven, the number of students at the advanced level in English language arts has increased from 6 percent in 2003, to 10 percent this year. The number of students at the proficient level has dropped slightly, as 84 percent scored proficient in 2003, and 71 percent were found proficient this year.

Grade four students have experienced a slow but steady increase in the advanced English Language Arts scores over the past two years from 10 percent in 2002 to 17 percent in 2003, up to 21 percent scoring in the advanced category this year.

Walsh said the MCAS scores are as much a test of the school system, its curriculum and its teachers, as it is a test of the students' abilities. She said district-wide, everyone will be working together to help ensure students are continually moving over into the advanced and proficient scoring range, and one full professional development day will be dedicated to building up the schools' MCAS programs. Any areas of improvement will be identified and the district will continue to work toward having every student in the proficient and advanced categories.

"We need to shift away from the bare minimum," and continue to encourage the students to achieve a higher level, she said.

Further analysis of MCAS data will be done by teachers and administrators in the days and weeks ahead, and Walsh said a more complete MCAS presentation will be given at the next School Committee meeting, slated for Thursday, Oct. 7 in the new Community Meeting Room, located near the superintendent's office. All are welcome to attend, and the meeting will be televised.

Students acknowledged for 'Outstanding' mark

There are some Cohasset Middle High School students who deserve recognition for receiving outstanding scores for the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System, or MCAS test. In grade seven, Alyssa Mullin received a score of 70 out of 72 in the English language arts portion of the test. In grade 10 for English language arts, Kelsey Bell, Amanda Daley, and Emily Savage all scored 70 out of 72.

In the math portion of the test, grade 10 students Amanda Daley and Nile Sceery received perfect scores of 60 and Emily Nash received 59 out of 60.

In grade 10, all students passed the English portion of the test and 89.5 percent obtained proficient or advanced status. In math, only one student in grade 10 failed to pass with a score of 218. A score of 220 is required to pass.

In addition, there were some students who excelled in their Advanced Placement tests. AP tests are scored on a scale of one to five with five as the highest. A score of three is required to pass.

In US History, 23 students passed with scores of three or higher, with 10 receiving fives, and eight receiving fours. In chemistry, 15 students took the test and 10 received a passing score of three, and seven received fours. In European History, 18 out of 20 students received scores of three or higher, with eight receiving fives, and seven receiving fours.

In Spanish, 17 students took the test and eight received passing scores of three or higher. In AP biology, three received fives, and five received fours. In English, 13 students took the test and everyone passed, with four receiving fours, and three receiving fives. In English literature and composition, 25 students took the test with 23 receiving threes or higher. In calculus, 18 students took the test and nine received threes, while seven received fours.

Principal Jack DeLorenzo extends his congratulations to all the students and their parents. "They're very proud of you, and so are we."

Derby Academy would like to welcome the South Shore community to its annual Fall Fair on Saturday, Oct. 2 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Rain or shine, there will be carnival games for all ages, a haunted graveyard and spooky storytelling, pony rides, live music, art activities and face painting. Thrill seekers can navigate the "Extreme Adrenaline" obstacle course, ride the giant slide, climb the rock wall and go bungee jumping. "Gourmet Galley" in the dining hall will offer a full lunch menu of fresh salads, wraps and pastas, or you can feast on grilled hotdogs, ice cream and cotton candy on the fairgrounds. There will also be a table of home-baked goods. Vendors will be selling jewelry, used books, fossils and other specialty items. Derby will also be holding its "Swap-It" mega yard sale in Hersey gym at the edge of the fairgrounds, selling clothes, sports equipment, household items and more. The Derby campus is located at 56 Burditt Avenue, at the corner of Burditt and Fearing Avenues in Hingham. For directions to the school, please refer to www.derbyacademy.org

BASEBALL TRYOUTS

The try-outs for the 2005 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Saturday, Oct. 2 at Barnes Field at 1:00 PM. All boys and girls turning 10, 11 or 12 prior to July 31, 2004 wishing to play Little League major league division baseball and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try-out. Although all eligible 12 year olds are automatically assigned to major league team, the attendance is mandatory at this try-out. Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 12:30 p.m. This will be the only opportunity to try-out. The rain date will be Saturday, October 16th. Questions regarding may be directed to either Liam O'Connell at 781-383-9538 or Nancy Froio at 781-383-1897.

That is all for this week. If anyone has any news, event information or item they wish to share, please make sure that it arrives to me no later than 5 p.m. on Mondays. Anything received by me after this date will be in the following weeks column. If you are submitting any photos, please send them directly to Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com or drop a copy in an envelope marked, "Cohasset Mariner Around Town" at Cohasset News on Brook Street in the Village. DiNero's gets OK to begin expansion

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After months of hearings before the Planning Board, DiNero's has been given conditional approval to go ahead with plans to expand its facilities and reconfigure its parking lot to better accommodate guests.

Last week, before granting approval, the Planning Board discussed some last-minute concerns it had with the applicant, many of which had been remedied.

One of the main conditions the Planning Board wanted to see met, was a compromise found between the restaurant's owner and the abutters to the site regarding a fence located between the property lines. Although the restaurant had installed a chain-link fence between the properties, as a buffer, the Planning Board said it would like to see a more solid buffer between the two. The restaurant agreed to keep the black vinyl chain-link fence and install another white cedar fence as well on the abutters' side, for a double-buffer.

The Planning Board had previously asked for the chain-link fence to be removed and replaced, but when the restaurant explained it would be more expensive to have the 318 feet of chain-link fence taken down rather than solely adding another fence, the board agreed to let the fence stay.

Planning Board member Michael Westcott said he was surprised to see the same property line landscaping plans in place in addition to the new cedar fence. He had thought the landscaping, which would have served as a buffer with the chain link fence, would have been altered in light of the compromise. However, Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey said, "I think they should have both. It's the maximum amount of softening we can do to protect the residential zone from the commercial. I don't think it's that onerous to put in a few extra plantings."

But the abutters' said as long as a solid fence is in place, negotiating the plantings is fine, and the board agreed.

There had been a condition in the plans that would have required the applicant to come back before the board a second time for an additional site plan review, if a Keno license is ever granted.

Gregory Sullivan, attorney for the restaurant, said because the restaurant is currently involved in a suit with the town over the license, the language would suggest the restaurant should drop the suit. "I see (the condition) as a back door way for this board to help the Board of Selectmen," said Sullivan.

Sullivan said at the time DiNero's applied for the Keno license, the Board of Selectmen said if the parking and seating were increased, it would be happy to revisit the issue. With the current wording in the conditions, "We can't even talk to the selectmen," said Sullivan.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt said he would like to see Town Counsel and Sullivan try to work the matter out, but added he feels his board has "an obligation to support another board."

However, Chairman Al Moore said he did not agree with Pratt and that it "sets a bad precedent to set conditions based on what might happen." He added the applicants have submitted a site plan, not a use plan, and to him, applying for a Keno license is no different from applying from any other license. "It gives me the shivers as to what we might be opening ourselves up for," he said.

Ivimey said, however, that if the restaurant is going to have gaming, that is something the applicant should disclose. In response, Sullivan said, "If I may, that's no secret," as it has been public knowledge that the site is pursuing a license for some time. He said if the restaurant receives a Keno license, it does not equal a change of use, and should not require special additional approval. "Some restaurants have Keno, some don't. We've made such progress on the other issues, it would be a shame to have the law suit going on with two boards instead of one, and I don't mean that as a threat," Sullivan said.

The Planning Board agreed a Keno license is the same as any other license, and removed the condition.

Members of the development team agreed to come back before the board in six months, if necessary, to discuss any light, noise, or landscaping problems abutters might face, but it will be left up to the abutters to decide if that meeting is necessary.

Search closes in on next town leader

agencies since 1981. Bennett said all of his recruiters have local government experience, and understand the differences between the public and private sectors.

"What clients really hire us for is the process. It's a process that gets to a final product — a successful hire," he said.

Bennett said his company is used to working with search groups and would be comfortable working with the process Cohasset has already begun. He also said any fees charged by the company could be negotiated, as charges typically accrue from the beginning of a search, but Cohasset has already done much of the leg work.

When finding a new candidate, Bennett said there are four things his company considers:

the history of the community and the important issues of the day including what needs to be accomplished in the next three to five years;

what will the new hire need to accomplish in order for the community to consider the match a success;

even though many candidates will have good "tool boxes" every town needs those tools used a certain way, and the hire will need to be able to carry that objective out; and anyone you hire is going to have an impact and change the community, so it makes sense to outline the town's goals and pick the person who fits those goals the best.

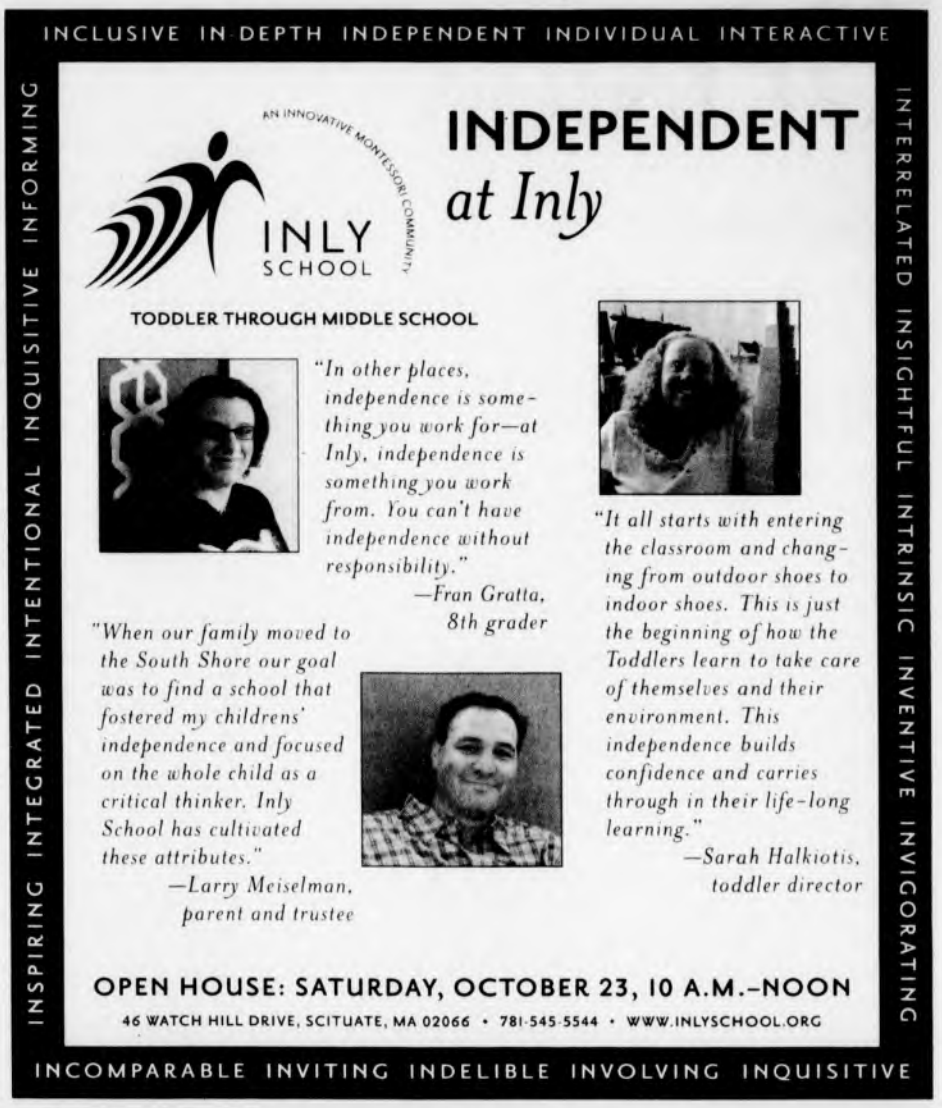
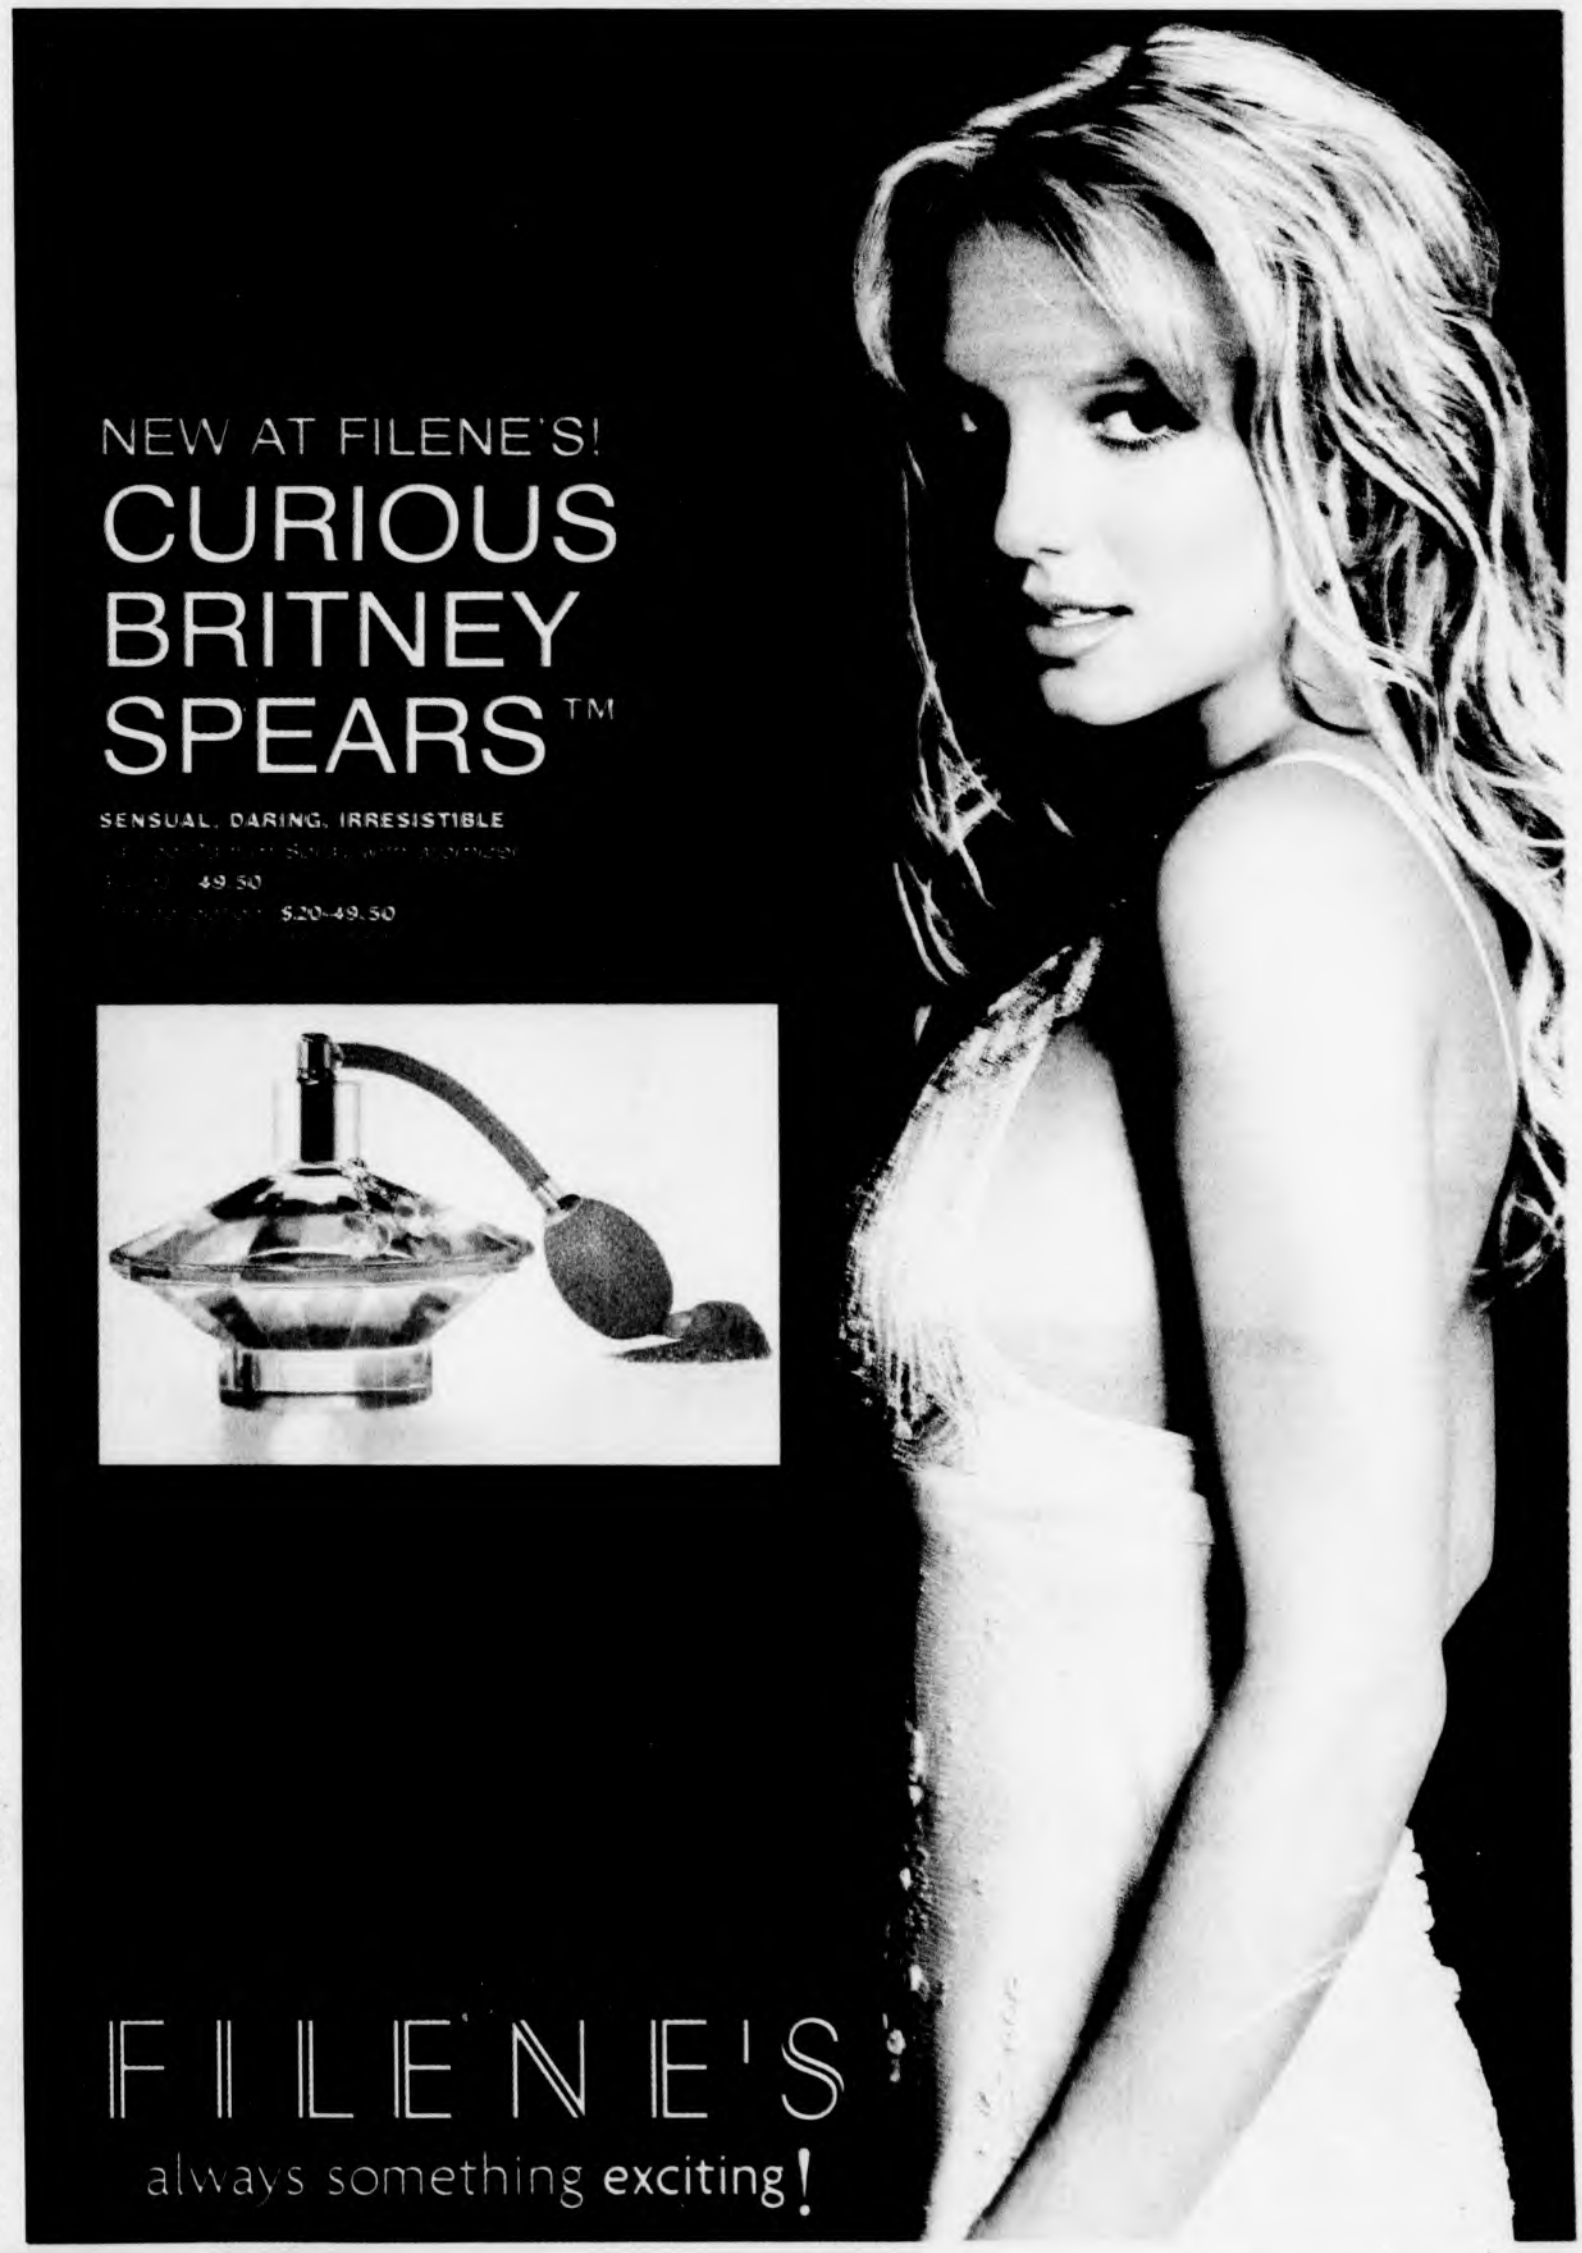
Bennett suggested the town make a weekend of the interviewing process. Prospective candidates can be brought to Cohasset, get a tour and go out to dinner on a Friday night. Saturday, the committee would spend one hour with each candidate and would then pick finalists to go on to the Board of Selectmen. Sunday, the board would conduct its interviews, and the process would be complete in one weekend.

While he said it's a lot of work, it saves time because it happens so fast, and it helps keep the candidates private. From the time the finalists are chosen, which allows their names to become public, to the appointment of the new manager is 24 hours. Bennett advised whether the committee chooses to participate in a weekend interviewing process or not, "Don't let a month lapse between picking finalists and the next step. Make the schedule as tight as you can," he said.



Bennett wished the committee well in its decision-making and said as Cohasset resident until this past December he knows all too well, "This is a small town, but it's not a simple one." He added even if the board does not choose his firm to help with the search, "I hope I've been of service to you."



The committee was impressed with Bennett's suggestions and said it would get in touch with him to see if his company would be willing to participate in the late stages of the selection process. The committee felt comfortable bringing the candidates down to five on its own, and from there, discussed the possibility of asking Bennett if he would be willing to come into the equation to serve as a facilitator, to be paid on an hourly basis. Spofford said he would be in touch with Bennett.

The next meeting of the Town Manager Search Committee is scheduled for Monday, Oct. 4, at 7 p.m. in the Selectmen's meeting room at Town Hall. All are welcome to attend.

Taking it on the chin

Last week's Sept. 23 Cohasset Mariner published a cartoon I created about Boston Magazine's ranking our school system 69th compared to all Massachusetts public schools.

This Monday, I belatedly received an E-mail from Katherine Ozment, senior editor of Boston Magazine, answering my Sept. 21 E-mail inquiring why Cohasset's rankings were so low relative to our better-than-average statistics of cost per pupil, SAT's, teacher-student ratio and high percentage of students attending 4-year colleges.

The magazine had used incorrect data from the state Department of Education that dropped Cohasset into the middle of the pack rather than ranking it possibly among the top 20 school systems.

If I'd waited a week to get the correct data rather than submitting the cartoon for last week's deadline, I wouldn't be writing this apology for representing our school system unfavorably, particularly since Cohasset has just received credit for ranking high in state MCAS scores. No one is perfect, and certainly we all get it wrong sometime. But I'm owning up to that error now, having relied on faulty data from a magazine.

A cartoonist sometimes exaggerates to make a point, but does not intentionally misrepresent the facts. In the future, especially when school statistics are involved, I'll call the school before publishing anything that could be construed as misrepresenting the position of our school system.

It is always my quest, and that of the newspapers, to get it write the first time. We are big enough, however, to recognize when sometimes we take it on the chin.

- Jim Hamilton

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't spare that tree!

TO THE EDITOR:

A weed is a plant in the wrong place; a tree in the wrong place is but a giant weed. If its disadvantages outweigh its attractiveness or other benefits, then it should be removed.

The aging giant beside the Historical Society's Maritime Museum should never have been allowed to grow there, only about 3 feet from the building, and should have been removed long ago before its roots grew monstrous enough to shift the steps, and before it grew ancient enough to become a threat by falling or dropping a huge branch on an irreplaceable historic building. Because tree roots can split rocks, threatening a foundation doesn't seem improbable, even though some elderly structures have survived being adjacent to large trees. It is not the only surviving elm on the street, as some have claimed. It's an ash (a notoriously "dirty" tree), not an elm. There are numerous other trees in the vicinity, so its removal is not going to be an aesthetic disaster.

The tree stands in the way of the only acceptable way to provide handicapped access to the Maritime Museum and the adjacent Wilson House. Aside from the ethical consideration of providing access for our handicapped fellow citizens, there is the important pragmatic consideration that most grants for maintenance and operation of such facilities require that the facility be handicapped accessible. Clearly, there is no tree trimming that could resolve the access issue; the tree stands firmly in the way of the only realistic way of providing handicapped access. An arborist's opinion of the health of the tree is not relevant.

As to the suggestion that a new access be constructed, not only is that a Philistinic dismissal of historic preservation, but would not provide handicapped access to the other building without further butchery of both buildings.

Even though the tree is located on the private property of the Historical Society and not on town property, the selectmen expressed interest in a public hearing. Admittedly that would provide a forum for impassioned opinion. The facts of the case might be challenged or confused, as they were at the Selectmen's meeting, but that wouldn't change the relevant facts and considerations, which seem pretty clear and simple. A public hearing may be useful political cover, but wouldn't reveal any magic answer that preserves the giant weed while serving the twin issues of protecting the irreplaceable building and permitting handicapped access.

Although the Historical Society apparently is willing to use its own funds for tree removal, at least one of the selectmen hinted that Community Preservation Funding might be withheld if the Historical Society persisted with its plan of tree removal. Such implied threats must be a temptation when frustrated, but are unworthy of our fine representatives, who know full well that the members of the Historical Society are responsible and honorable citizens. (I don't happen to be a member, but appreciate their need to make a difficult decision).

Article was incorrect

TO THE EDITOR:

The humor of Mr. Hamilton's editorial cartoon regarding Boston Magazine's article ranking public schools is subjective, but the facts are not: The article ranking Cohasset Public Schools 69th in the state was based on incorrect data.

As anyone who went on-line to review the data could see, it was incorrectly reported that 91 percent of the 2003 graduating class went on to a four-year public college and that 0 percent went on to a four-year private college. In fact, while 87 percent of our seniors went on to a four-year college, (a statistic that is higher than three of Boston's top 10 ranked schools and that is equal to or higher than 10 of the top 20 ranked schools) 58 percent went on to a four-year private college and 29 percent went on to a 4 year Public College. Comparing our correct data to 20th ranked Marblehead, Cohasset fares better in all but two categories. Marblehead's Math MCAS was one point higher than Cohasset's and Marblehead's average teacher salary was $5,890 higher than ours. Based on this comparison, I believe it is safe to assume that if Boston Magazine had based its ranking on the correct data, Cohasset Public Schools would have been ranked in the top 20. I am greatly disappointed that our local paper, rather than questioning the integrity of the ranking or even picking up the phone to discuss the matter with our Superintendent, instead chose to perpetuate a falsehood.

The damage done by the Boston Magazine article, and now the Mariner, is to people's perception of our schools, but neither incorrect data, nor irresponsible reporting can alter reality. At last Thursday's School Committee meeting, Middle/ High School Principal Jack DeLorenzo recognized a number of our students for their MCAS achievements. As the meeting was not televised, I'd like to pass along the good news:

- Two students scored a perfect score on the math portion of MCAS and one student scored a 59 out of the possible 60
- Four students scored 70 out of a possible 72 on the English portion of MCAS
- 100 percent of the 10th grade students passed the English portion of MCAS
- 99 percent of the 10th grade students passed the math portion of MCAS
- 90 percent of the 10th grade scored in the advanced or proficient category on the Math portion and 89 percent scored in the advanced or proficient category on the English portion of MCAS, an increase over last year.

Moreover, in an article appearing in the Sept. 24 Boston Globe, Cohasset was ranked 10th in the state based on its MCAS passing rates over the past three years.

While MCAS is but one measure of the quality of a school system, as these numbers reveal, we have a school system of which the town should be proud. In spite of diminishing budgets and diminishing state aid, the Cohasset Public Schools not only continue to excel, but also continue to improve. Perhaps this is just another example of the Law of Inverse Proportions.

Don't cut trees

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset is enriched by the beautiful old building that houses the Maritime Museum and by the lovely old tree that shades it. To cut the tree would, I believe, detract not just from the elegance of the street but also from the graceful character of the building. The tree grounds the house in time and place so that it seems one with the history it fosters. To cut the tree would be to make the museum more precious, less an organic part of the town. Surely it is possible to preserve the wider heritage of Cohasset and to protect both building and tree.

Thanks, guardian angel

TO THE EDITOR:

The South Shore Community Center would like to express our thanks and gratitude for the new set of steps recently installed at the North Main Street entrance. Thanks to a "guardian angel" that set the project in motion, and the talents of Brendan St. John Landscaping, the new granite steps are all finished. The previously sloping ground will now be safer during winter and in wet weather. The granite steps also enhance the front of our building and the brick walkway.

We at The South Shore Community Center are fortunate to have such wonderful support from our "guardian angel" and Brendan St. John.

HEALTH NOTES

The Work at Hand

By: S.N.Bobo

Last week we talked about how it was incumbent on everyone to have some basic knowledge about the way nature works in rocky Cohasset, and how we can help our town accommodate to the changes which are sure to come as we grow in this century. This week, we'll talk about some of the systems we are trying to put in place to assure that change can be accommodated gracefully. About two years ago, Merle Brown as Selectman proposed that a new committee, the Wastewater Committee, be established for the purpose of providing information to the Selectmen about the how to plan the needs of the Town to get rid of its wastes safely and find an equitable system to distribute the necessary costs of doing so. This at about the same time the State was beginning to become feisty about continuing our sewer planning and developers were claiming the right to existing sewer capacity to build some four hundred new dwellings in Town. Well, the Committee quietly got to work, and a few weeks ago submitted a draft report to the Selectmen. Among other things, it called for three initial changes in the way the Town handles septic and wastewater issues: First the Committee perceived that since both the Board of Health and the Sewer Commission were essentially providing the same service: getting rid of dirty water; water which mostly originated as a pristine product supplied by the Water Commission, somehow the process was connected and would have to be worked out mutually.

Accordingly, the first recommendation was that the three organizations which deal with our water supply, clean or dirty, begin to talk to each other. Novel concept, since it had never happened before. The lords of our sewers seldom talked to anyone, and the keepers of the water supply worked successfully to straighten out a sadly neglected Town asset while the Board of Health tried to deal with an increasing amount of dirty water as best they could. The Wastewater Committee recommended that the three respective organizations: Water, Sewer, and Health hold meetings quarterly to discuss their mutual problems.

Secondly, the Wastewater Committee, perceived that the Board of Health wastewater plan, while a perfectly fine plan, had the principal defect that nobody was using it, since it would be very costly to join. So the committee called for a revision of the plan which would make it equitable and in which the burden of paying for wastewater management was somehow shared equitably. Since the chairmen of the Sewer Commission and the Board of Health were both on the Committee, they had to talk to each other, and one excellent result of this was that the Sewer Commission came up with a plan to initiate a home rule petition to control the allocation of sewer capacity to the Town at Town Meeting rather than to relinquish such authority to the State or to developers.

The third recommendation was effectively to analyze the facts relating to wastewater disposal and present them to those needing them so that decisions of cost, equitability and environmental impact could be worked out by the one who would be affected: the homeowner/taxpayer.

So, at the Town Meeting this fall, you will see several Warrant articles related to wastewater, and probably a few relating to the water supply. The first from the Sewer Commission is the home rule petition which is designed to ensure that the Town, by vote of Town Meeting, has control of the allocation of sewer capacity within districts established to do so. A simple concept, but very complex and difficult to implement, and therefore, many words will be spoken on the subject. Remember my warning last week that if you go to Town meeting you should be informed about the topics; only a few understand the complexities and vagaries of a home rule petition.

The second, a petition by the Board of Health, will be to approve a revised Wastewater Management Plan. Since this is a Board of Health regulation already approved, a Town Meeting vote merely gives everyone an opportunity to learn how they will be affected by it and to comment on its provisions. Next week, we will describe the provisions of the plan and how the issue of equitable treatment has been addressed.

LIBRARY CORNER

Film series

Upcoming dates for the monthly Independent Film series are: Oct. 14 "The Republic of Love," Nov. 18 "Carol's Journey," and Dec. 9 "The Rage in Placid Lake." Films will be shown in the library's meeting room at 7 p.m. Admission and refreshments are free.

Author events

Authors Bernard Corbett and Paul Simpson will discuss their book "The Harvard/Yale Rivalry: The Only Game That Matters," on Thursday November 4th at 7:00 p.m. in the library's Meeting Room. The event is sponsored by Buttonwood Books. Author Bill Nowlin will talk about his book on Ted Williams and the Red Sox on Monday Nov. 8, at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room. Refreshments will be served.

Booking ahead

Bestseller preview. Reserve your copy in advance of publication by placing a hold on any of the following new titles on order at the library: "London Bridges," by James Patterson; "A Christmas Visitor," by Anne Perry; "Red Leaves," by Belva Plain; "The Rottweiler," by Ruth Rendell; and "Echoes," by Danielle Steel.

To Place A Hold from home, start at our website HYPERLINK "http://www.cohassetlibrary.org" www.cohassetlibrary.org. Go to "catalog" and search for the item you want. Click on "hold." Enter your user ID from your library card (no spaces), your PIN (OCL) and specify "pickup location" as Cohasset. Press "hold." You will be notified when the book is available.

Bird presentation

Thursday Sept. 30, from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Sally Avery, an avid gardener and bird watcher, will present a free slide show and lecture at the library. A Bird Walk will be held on Saturday, Oct. 2 from 8 to 10 a.m. in the woods at Holly Hill Farm. To sign up for the two events and for information on the cost of the Bird Walk, contact Jon Belber at Holly Hill Farm, 781 383-1455.

Artist exhibit

Landscape paintings of Lisa Marder will be on display at the library from Sept. 10, until the end of October.

Prepare tender plants for the chilly days ahead

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

With the passing of the autumnal equinox, the days grow shorter prompting our landscapes and Mother Nature's little creatures to begin to make preparations for the chilly days ahead. Throughout the fall season, plants and animals gather and store food to sustain them during the winter months.

Squirrels and chipmunks scurry about our landscapes gathering food, their cheek pouches filled with nuts and seeds or precious spring-flowering bulbs uprooted from our flowerbeds. Perhaps even more irritating this season is the annoying habit of these little varmints to pilfer or bite holes in tomatoes. Nearly every day I chase fluffy tailed bandits from my deck, each carrying a cherry tomato in their mouths.

Rodent populations seem to have soared this season. Vole damage is particularly alarming this year. Numerous daylilies and hostas have suddenly wilted or turned yellow in my landscape and when scrutinized more closely, it becomes evident that their roots have been devoured by these devastating pests that look like chunky, short-tailed, overstuffed field mice. A couple of good mousing cats are often the most effective solution to eliminating many of these destructive vermin. Inverting a large heavy clay pot over a mouse trap baited with peanut butter or cheese that has been placed next to their quarter-sized holes will often reduce their numbers. A thorough clipping and cleanup of perennial borders following several killing frosts is strongly urged to minimize further damage later in the season.

Skunks and raccoons are beginning to leave telltale holes in our lawns and gardens as they forage for grubs and other soil borne bugs. Although their scavenging may give the lawn the appearance of having been rotor tilled, these primarily nocturnal animals are providing a valuable, environmentally friendly means of insect control. Occasionally, however, they may raid our trash in their instinctive quest for food and midnight encounters in the garage with either of these intruders are often less than pleasurable.

Wise gardeners take their cues from nature. The escalating activity of our wildlife visitors reinforces the sense of urgency to begin making preparations for the advent of killing frosts. To prevent a random, haphazard approach to your fall projects, take time to critically view and analyze your landscape, with notebook in hand, and prepare a prioritized list. List changes to be made and open spaces that may need to be filled in this fall or next spring. Jot down attractive plant combinations in your containers and borders and do headcounts on successful plantings of annuals you may wish to repeat next season. Should time be an issue, take photos to document your container gardens and plantings.

Tropical plants and tender annuals have provided glorious, colorful garden accents throughout the season. Before temperatures drop consistently into the forties, take cuttings of tender plants to root indoors for next season. Many of these plants are easily propagated, especially if the stems are dipped in a rooting powder and inserted into pots of perlite or vermiculite. Coleus plants are particularly sensitive to cooler temperatures and tip cuttings should be taken soon to ensure successful rooting. Transplant rooted cuttings in a few weeks into containers filled with sterile potting medium and grow in a warm, bright location throughout the winter months. Coleus cuttings can be trained to produce sensational topiaries for next season.

Smaller plants from both decorative containers and gardens can be lifted and transplanted into pots filled with sterile soil. Geraniums and begonias will flower all winter on a sunny windowsill, a welcome reminder of the season past and a new growing season to come.

Now is also the time to begin gradually acclimating houseplants that enjoyed a summer vacation outdoors to the lower light conditions they will encounter in your home environment. Even houseplants that spent the summer in the shade received much brighter light than they are likely to find indoors. If these plants can be moved into a sunroom or porch first, the gradual reduction in light will be less of a shock. Although nearly all plants experience some leaf-drop or dieback as they adjust to lower light and humidity in our dry, heated indoor spaces, fewer leaves will turn yellow and drop.

Closely inspect all plants that were outdoors for unwanted pests that may be lurking among their leaves. Somehow, all the little beasties seem to know which plants are destined for a warm, cozy winter indoors and manage to secretly hitch a ride into our homes. Many often go unnoticed for weeks while sucking the vitality out of our plants. Although no insects may be readily observed, eggs are often laid on the foliage and hatch once the plants are brought into warmer environments. Applications of a light horticultural oil spray, which is essentially odorless and non-toxic except to bugs, will eliminate a large percentage of the typical intruders including aphids, scale, mealy bugs, white flies, and spider mites. For a month-long systemic insect control, consider spraying with Bayer Rose and Flower insect killer that contains Merit. Be sure to check the drainage holes of the containers for sow bugs, worms, slugs and snails or you may discover them crawling across the floors of your home.

Following a week of truly glorious weather, it seems difficult to imagine that the end of the growing season will soon be upon us. Early preparations will enable dedicated gardeners to enjoy many of their colorful tender treasures indoors throughout the winter season.

Butternut squash soup

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Butternut squash soup is the quintessential fall dish but it can also be watery, bitter, flavorless, and difficult to make. The squash itself is often roasted, cut into small pieces and sautéed, steamed, or boiled — a step that can involve a lot of additional preparation time. Finally, trying to coax the essence of butternut squash into the liquid can be challenging. The soup looks great but the taste is disappointing.

The first step was to determine the proper cooking method. Roasted squash has a rough texture, not nearly as nice as squash cooked with wet heat. It can also take on a burned flavor if over-roasted. Sautéed squash requires small peeled pieces and the process, once again, is arduous. The best methods involve liquid. Steaming is fine, but the easiest method was to simply add large unpeeled (peeling raw butternut squash is no fun) pieces of squash to water and then cook it submerged. This adds flavor to the liquid and avoids the peeling step since the flesh is easily scraped away from the skin once cooked and cooled. By using this wet cooking method, the squash was smooth and silky.

A recipe in Cook's Illustrated suggested sautéing the squash scrapings as a key method for developing flavor. Although an odd suggestion, we did find that this step resulted in a more flavorful soup. So, we began our recipe with butter and onion (we also tested leeks and shallots, which also worked well) which are cooked for five minutes. The scrapings are added and sautéed for five minutes and then we added liquid along with the large squash pieces. Water won out over chicken stock, which seemed out of place in this simple recipe. We also limited the total liquid to three cups in an effort to avoid diluting the intense flavor of the squash. As the squash cooks in the water it becomes richly infused with flavor.

Other ingredients include a mere 1/3 cup of cream (light cream and half and half didn't quite make the grade), salt, a tablespoon of brown sugar, and small amounts of ground ginger and cinnamon. Carrots, red pepper, sage, thyme, and bay leaf were all tested and rejected. It turns out that butternut squash soup requires a delicate hand to avoid disguising its simple, elegant flavor.

BUTTERNUT SQUASH SOUP

This soup can be made up to a couple of days ahead of time and reheated over medium-low heat until hot. If doing so, omit the cream and tablespoon of butter during the initial preparation and add them as the soup is readied for serving.

4 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 small onion cut into 1/2-inch dice, about 1 cup
1-1/2 teaspoons salt
1 large butternut squash (about 3 pounds) unpeeled, halved, seeds and fibers removed with a spoon and reserved and each half cut into quarters
1/3 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger

1. Heat three tablespoons butter in a large soup pot or Dutch oven over medium heat until foaming. Add the onion and cook, stirring often, until softened and translucent, about five minutes. Add the squash scrapings and continue to cook until fragrant and the butter is bright orange, about five minutes more. Add three cups of water, salt and the squash pieces with the skin side facing up. Bring to a boil; adjust heat to maintain a lively simmer, cover and cook until squash pieces are tender, about 30 minutes. You can check the doneness of the squash by inserting a paring knife or skewer. Remove squash pieces using a large slotted spoon or tongs and set aside to cool.

2. Strain the liquid and return to the pot. Once the squash pieces are cool enough to handle, scrape flesh into the bowl of a food processor using a large spoon. Add a cup of the strained liquid to the processor bowl and puree until smooth. Transfer puree to the pot, add the remaining tablespoon of butter, cream, sugar, cinnamon and ginger and stir to combine well. Taste for seasoning adding salt if necessary. Heat over medium-low heat and serve immediately.

Serves 4 to 6 as a starter.

It's a long time between drinks

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It's been a long time between drinks in Rockport.

After 148 years of frisking visitors for adult beverages at Checkpoint Barley on the Gloucester town line, the town meeting in the little North Shore tourist trap finally decided to let them buy a drink in selected restaurants within the town limits.

The town has been dry since 1856 when, as the quaint little story goes, a 75-year-old seamstress named Hannah Jumper and 200 friends, angered by the thought that a fisherman might enjoy a quiet beer after a couple of months at sea, took axes to the local watering holes.

There's nothing like a good debate, with or without axes, over alcohol to raise the hackles on a Puritan's back. It's easy to do. You know the definition of Puritanism, don't you? It's the haunting fear that someone, somewhere is enjoying himself.

And there's nothing like the convolution of laws that have grown up around one man's desire to see that another man lives his life according to the first man's idea of living.

I can recall in the 1950s, a Massachusetts law that permitted a man to drink on Sunday. But he couldn't belly up to the bar. He had to sit at a table. The law was promoted by the waiters' union, I was told, to give drinkers more opportunity to tip them.

I remember a trip across the country by train and a waiter snatching drinks from our table in the club car as we crossed the state line into Oklahoma, then a dry state. Later, when we had safely crossed the border into Texas (or was it New Mexico) he was back taking our order.

Nearly 60 years ago, enjoying my first taste of freedom after years of going to school and working for my uncle, I remained for a time in North Carolina and worked as a bartender in a roadhouse called The Diamond Club in a town called Havelock.

Under the law, patrons had to bring their own booze and we would sell them a glass of soda, ginger ale or coca cola at inflated prices to chase it. On rare occasions, we would mix drinks for them, too, but they were not big sellers in the backwoods of Carolina.

We sold them bottled beer, too, for that was legal in North Carolina at the time, only apparently the alcoholic content was not specified. Our biggest seller was a Mexican import called "Carta Blanca" in a clear bottle. The alcoholic content was three times a normal beer.

Another time, en route home from Fort Smith in Canada's Northwest Territories, I landed in Edmonton and found that I had a five hour wait for the plane to Toronto. I looked for the airport bar. There was none. But, I was told, I could get a drink at a hotel about five miles away.

I got there in time to find the bar closed and a swamper sweeping up and it was only six o'clock. Don't worry, I was told. It's an old English law. They close at six to encourage the working man to go home without blowing his paycheck on booze. They open again at seven.

And don't go rushing off to hustle a drink in Rockport. Town fathers still have to petition the state legislature for permission to put the question to the voters in an April election. And then the individual restaurants have to apply for licenses.

Like I say, it's a long time between drinks in Rockport.

Republicans hope to cash in on election day

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

The give and take over giving and taking – the campaign variety – grew more vigorous this week, reflecting the unusual intensity of the statewide struggle over party power in the Legislature.

Recent developments have proven beyond question that the Republicans are serious this year about making inroads on the long-held Democratic dominance of the Legislature.

It has been a long time since such efforts were really taken seriously by non-partisans, and even sometimes by the players themselves. Despite biennial posturing and promise-making, leaders of the GOP – including the Republicans who've held the Corner Office of the State House for more than 13 years – have managed to actually lose ground in terms of electing reps and senators.

Never mind sustaining a veto – the Republican caucus in the Senate has been too small to field a softball team for several sessions. Massachusetts Republicans are doing a lot of grumbling about John Kerry this fall, but apparently didn't find him objectionable enough to actually try and defeat two years ago; the party wasn't up to running anyone against Kerry for Senate in 2002.

All that has changed, at least on the state level. Unlike its predecessors, the Romney team has national assistance, a coherent strategy and capable organizers to support the crop of recruits it assembled last winter and spring.

The Boston Globe documented this week how Romney has been capitalizing, so to speak, on his ties to the business community, generating large volumes of contributions to the state Republican Party's two main campaign accounts. That tactic circumvents limits on contributions from individuals to specific candidates, though the party has been soliciting those too. The GOP has raised and spent $1 million for legislative races since Romney began his party-building in 2003, with $1 million ready to go in October.

The effect of these resources – and the Democratic defense – can't be measured until the night of Nov. 2, but early signs were favorable for the GOP, in the form of Scott Brown's special-election victory this spring. Ultimately, it comes down to getting people to the polls, and Republicans sound confident about mechanisms they've set up to turn people out. The GOP is planning on a media campaign, overseen by successful veteran consultant Michael Murphy, to link Romney's image as a reformer to the local candidates seeking to unseat incumbents in the House and Senate.

Never mind sustaining a veto – the Republican caucus in the Senate has been too small to field a softball team for several sessions.

Certainly the Republicans are doing what they need to do in the cash department – and that brought some of the most vigorous politicking of the week. The Democratic State Committee lambasted the corporate solicitations and the use of party committees as funnels. Such practices belie the governor's claim to want to "clean up the mess," said Democratic State Committee Chairman Philip Johnston. The Republicans counter that they expect to be outspent about 3 to 1 in legislative races this fall, much of the incumbents' money raised from special-interest awareness of the powerful positions many Democrats hold. Romney suggested the Democrats are "whining."

Johnston this week challenged the Republicans to limit their party's spending to $210,000 during the legislative cycle. GOP Chairman Darrell Crate pronounced the suggestion "just bananas," declared it the product of anxiety, not virtue, and told reporters: ""Phil Johnston ought to take a look at his own fundraising records."

Democrats also suggested the governor made his vetoes in the supplemental budget selectively – based on how much they might hurt a Democratic incumbent facing a Republican challenger. Peabody's flood war and Worcester's memorial to its fallen firefighters were prime examples, the Democrats said; Romney replied that no one had contacted his office to make the case for the projects. The governor wasn't bashful about trumpeting the spending he did approve, stopping in Somerville and Dorchester and Plymouth to sing the joys of football stadiums and subway stations and rail trails. The Dorchester event produced the photo moment of the year, if not the decade: House Speaker Finneran kneeling in jestful tribute before the bounty-bestowing chief executive.

All of this made the hurricanes swirling about the headlines a convenient metaphor. The building itself is rather quiet – an area of calm at the center of a statewide storm that in a few weeks may well change the face and feel of the legislative branch.

The party won't use the death penalty in its statewide legislative campaign, but a tough-on-crime maneuver did lead the policy headlines this week.

• Finneran job hunting disclosed in public documents — The noise around a potential change in the leadership of the House got a lot louder Friday, when the Boston Herald reported Friday morning that House Speaker Thomas Finneran had reported on his ethics disclosure form that he has had discussions about potential employment with the Massachusetts Biotechnology Council. The House will elect a speaker in January. Finneran is running for re-election and says he will seek another term as speaker, but the situation is fluid, to say the least. Several leading House Democrats are already lobbying behind the scenes for the speaker's post, should Finneran resign. Finneran spokeswoman Kimberly Haberlin on Friday shot down rumors that the Mattapan Democrat was about to step down. "There's no press conference, no availability, no resignation," Haberlin said.

• State to fit Level Three offenders with GPS devices — "We're working together to make sure that dangerous sexual predators know they do not want to live in Massachusetts," said Gov. Romney, as he announced the Department of Correction will be using $1 million in the recent supplemental budget to fit all Level Three sex offenders with GPS monitoring bracelets. Advocates for civil liberties said it's not clear public safety will be served by the tactic.

• Wall that leaks incorrectly poured, experts tell turnpike — At a press briefing Monday, Turnpike Authority vice chairman Jordan Levy told reporters that analysts have found the section of slurry wall where water leaked into the new I-93 north tunnel earlier this month was incorrectly poured. The experts don't know if the same defect exists in other sections, but are studying all parts of the tunnel. Amorello says it has not been determined whether the leak was due to a design flaw, construction flaw, or both.

• Romney, Kennedy lobby for Hanscom research expansion — The governor and the senator he sought to unseat in 1994 were on the same team in Washington this week, urging Air Force Secretary James Roche to back a $410 million initiative to expand military research capabilities at Hanscom Air Base. The effort would create an estimated 5,000 jobs and decrease the odds that Hanscom would fall victim to a future round of base closings.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives and senators' votes on three roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$2.3 MILLION FOR WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT GRANTS (H 4850)

House 154-2, Senate 36-2, overrode Gov. Romney's $2.3 million veto reduction (from $4.3 million to $2 million) in funding for workforce development grants. The governor also vetoed some of the earmarking of the grants. The funds come from the Workforce Training Fund that was established in 1998 and is financed by Massachusetts employers. Override supporters said the full funding is necessary to fund these grants that provide resources to Massachusetts businesses to train employees and improve their skills. Override opponents said the earmarking of the funds is unfair because it favors employers in specific areas across the state. They argued that none of the funds should be earmarked but should instead be available equally for all employers across the state. (A "Yea" vote is for the $2.3 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $2.3 million).

$500,000 FOR MASS BIOMEDICAL INITIATIVES (H 4850)

House 146-11, Senate 30-7, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $500,000 in funding for the Massachusetts Biomedical Initiatives (MBI)—an independent, tax-exempt corporation that supports the growth and expansion of biotechnology and medical device companies throughout the region. Override supporters said MBI works with and invests money in start-up companies by providing them with venture capital, workspace and technical and consulting services. They argued that these companies help the state's economic growth by creating jobs and generating tax revenue and noted that MBI often receives a substantial return on its investment and uses that revenue to invest in additional companies. In his veto message, Romney said he vetoed the funding because it is not consistent with his original fiscal 2005 budget recommendation. (A "Yea" vote is for the $500,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $500,000).

$1000 DEDUCTION IF REPORT IS NOT FILED (H 4850)

House 134-23, Senate 30-7, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget provision including language providing that $1000 be deducted from any budget item in which the agency or program is required to file a report and fails to do so within ten days of the due date. The $1000 would be deposited into the state's General Fund. Override supporters said this fine would put some teeth into provisions that often require agencies and programs to file a report with the Legislature and noted that the state can currently do little or nothing if these reports are not filed. They argued that the reports are important in order for the state to receive information about the spending practices and effectiveness of various programs. In his veto message, the governor said the provision is not a valid restriction on these appropriations. (A "Yea" vote is for the $1000 deduction. A "Nay" vote is against the $1000 deduction).

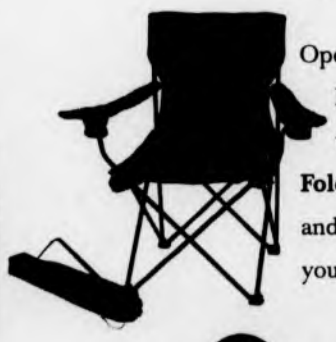
ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

MINOR'S NAME CHANGE (H 4798)- The House gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate legislation requiring the written consent of each parent or legal guardian in order to change the name of their minor child. Supporters said that current law includes no legal requirement for changing a minor's name. They noted that this loophole allows non-custodial parents who abduct their children to evade authorities by unilaterally changing their children's names and enrolling them in schools without official documentation of a true and accurate identity. They argued that the bill would protect children by safeguarding their identity and perhaps lead to the solving of more cases of missing children when one parent abducts the child during a custody dispute.

STUDENTS WITH CYSTIC FIBROSIS (S 2231)- Gov. Romney signed into law a bill allowing all public school students with cystic fibrosis to self-administer their enzyme supplement while in school if certain conditions established by the Department of Public Health (DPH) are met. Current state policy gives school nurses the authority to allow students to self-administer any medications in accordance with the same DPH regulations. The bill would bar schools from prohibiting these students with cystic fibrosis from self-administration as long as the DPH regulations are met. A current state law already bars schools from prohibiting students with asthma from self administering their inhalers. The governor also attached an emergency preamble to the bill in order to make the law effective immediately instead of in 90 days.



TAX BREAK FOR COMMUTERS (H 5076)- A little-noticed provision in the supplemental budget signed by Gov. Romney provides a one-time 2004 tax break for commuters who pay for tolls through a Massachusetts Turnpike Authority Fast Lane account and for individuals who use weekly or monthly MBTA or commuter rail passes. It allows taxpayers a tax deduction for any amount paid above the first $150 up to a maximum of $600 for individuals and $1200 for married couples. The deduction is not allowed if an employer reimbursed the money to an employee. Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey has filed a bill that she said would clarify ambiguous language in the new law and allow the Department of Revenue to begin printing the necessary forms for taxpayers to receive the deduction.

Cook Estate's fate tied into wastewater solution

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If a wastewater solution cannot be found for the Cook property, the proposed senior housing project slated to be built on the site will not move forward, the town will have to back out of the deal, and it will have spent and lost roughly $151,000. However, if a solution can be found, the town will be 95-units closer to meeting the state's affordability threshold, seniors in town will have another option for housing, and the town will stand to make at least a $750,000 profit on the transaction.

Developers for the site say they will exhaust every possible options to make their plans for the project a reality.

The course for the Cook Estate will essentially be charted by the town as voters at the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting will decide whether or not the project should be given a sewer connection. The soils on site cannot support an on-site wastewater disposal system, as was thought during the bidding process. Developers applied for a sewer connection on April 14 and were denied, and they have not appealed that decision. If residents cast an affirmative vote, the project can immediately begin making the rounds to various town boards for approval.

Project developers will file for a special permit under the town's Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District bylaw, and will undergo a site plan review process with the planning board.

"It's likely to take between four and six months," to get through the permitting process, said Jack Dawley of Northland, the company the town is working with to build on the site, adding he expects to have all permits in hand and be able to close on the deal next summer.

However, Cedarmere developers were the first to file a project under the town's bylaw, and if their experience is any indication, six months might be optimistic. Dawley said he has come before the planning board once already to give its members an overview of the project, which planning board members have said was helpful and beneficial. However, Cedarmere developers came before the board for three or four informal discussions prior to their formal submission, and it took that project eight months to gain planning board approval.

The Cook developers will need to go through the same public hearing process the Cedarmere developers went through. During the Cedarmere public hearing process, traffic studies were presented, as well as reports on potential noise pollution, light pollution, landscape design, and public safety vehicle access. Abutters to the project were invited to attend all public hearings, and provided feedback for the plans, which was incorporated into the final design.

Dawley said he does not have plans to come before the planning board again prior to finding a wastewater solution because a change in wastewater disposal could impact planning for the site. "We're taking it one step at a time," he said, adding his company has until the end of the year to find a solution.

Dave Fulton of GLC Consulting, which has been working with the town on the project, said the town has successfully negotiated with the Cook heirs to extend the closing date on the Purchase and Sale, without needing to put down any additional funding, until Aug. 15, 2005. At that time, should it become necessary, the town can request three 30-day extensions, which will cost the town $20,000 each time. The money spent will go toward the purchase price of the land. In the event the project falls apart after one of the extensions has already been granted, the $20,000 would not be refundable, but Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said at that point, an extension will only be sought if the project is going to move forward.

The town has put down a $200,000 deposit, which is refundable, as is the $100,000 the developers have put down. Developers were slated to put down a second $100,000 deposit when signing the Land Disposition Agreement with the town, which is similar to a Purchase and Sale agreement, but Fulton said it will soon be determined whether the developer puts down the second $100,000 at the signing or not. The signing was slated for this week.

Town Manager Michael Buckley said the town has borrowed $200,000, of which roughly $151,000 has been spent on Cook-related items so far, including consulting, engineering, and legal fees. There is an additional $44,000 which the town owes for work done, for which payment has not yet been sent, meaning the town has really spent roughly $195,000. In the event a wastewater solution cannot be found, the town will lose that money.

But, if the development acquires a sewer connection, or an off-site solution can be found, none of that will be a concern. "All along we've looked at sewer as something that should be at least discussed," although it is considered a political hornet's nest, said Fulton. He said at one point, GLC considered taking in two bids from each developer, one with an on-site system, and one should town sewer become available. However, Sullivan said that was not the route the town wanted to take.

Sullivan said the board of selectmen will most likely present either one or two articles at Town Meeting which will decide whether the project can hook up to municipal sewer. He said he is not sure if there would be two articles – one which would allow the property into the central district, and a second which would assign the project capacity. Sullivan said the article or articles will be presented according to Town Meeting rules, and will most likely dovetail with the articles being brought forth by the sewer commission.

The sewer commission has been working on two articles. One is a Home Rule Petition, which, if passed at Town Meeting, would amend the Cohasset Sewer Act to allow the commission to expand the sewer district, to encompass areas that would not otherwise be allowed to tie-in. The Home Rule Petition is similar to one that was adopted by Provincetown, and allows for "checker-boarding" of sewer districts in areas where the sewer commission deems it is necessary.

The second article would amend Article 9 of the current General Bylaws to give the board the final say over constructing sewers in public roads. This bylaw would prohibit anyone outside the central district from tying in because the sewer commission would control public roads.

If the Home Rule Petition passes, the commission would be able to make exceptions at its discretion and allow property into the central district if it would like. It is not clear whether the Home Rule Petition, which would need to be approved by the Legislature, would overrule a Town Meeting vote. The sewer commission is slated to discuss the articles at its next meeting, Monday Oct. 4 at 6 p.m.

If the town votes to allow the Cook Estate to tie into municipal sewer, Dawley said he has a $1 million budget which was set aside for the on-site system, but could pay for all the costs associated with a municipal connection. Although Sullivan said he thinks the town could get more than $1 million for a connection, Dawley said at this point, he is planning to spend $1 million for wastewater disposal.

However, the sewer commission decided Monday to allow empty lots in the central district to tie in to the sewer for a $15,000 fee. If that same fee is imposed on the Cook site, with 95 units, Dawley could be looking at a $1.425 million fee just for the right to connect.

Sullivan said with the money collected from connection fees, the town could potentially fix the infiltration and inflow problems with the town's sewer pipes. Infiltration and inflow means the pipes are taking in water from the outside, which in turn takes up capacity in the town's water treatment plant.

Sullivan said in addition, if a deal could be made to tie-in Cedarmere as well, the town could potentially have $2 million to work with to both fix the problem pipes and hook up areas of town that need it.

If the project moves forward, Fulton said it could potentially generate $478,000 in tax revenues per year, after it is fully built in 2008.

Ovarian Cancer. Get the facts that could save your life.

Ovarian cancer can strike a woman at any age.
In the early stages its symptoms are often subtle and easily confused with other ailments. Many women with ovarian cancer don't seek help until the disease has already begun to spread. If detected at its earliest stage, the five-year survival rate is over 90%. Recent research suggests that together the 3 symptoms of swollen abdomen, a bloated feeling and urinary urgency may be associated with ovarian cancer.
Ovarian cancer symptoms include: bloating, a feeling of fullness in pelvic or abdominal region, gas, frequent or urgent urination, nausea, indigestion, constipation, diarrhea, menstrual disorders, pain during intercourse, fatigue, backaches. Talk to your doctor if symptoms last more than 2–3 weeks.
Get the facts. Be informed. Recognize the signs.

Magazine used wrong data

Boston University, Villanova University, Tufts University, Dartmouth College, Brown University, and numerous other top-notch learning institutions around the country. In total, students were sent off to more than 75 different private schools in 2003.

Ozment said last spring, when the magazine began compiling the information, it requested information from each individual high school. She said the magazine received so few responses that in the end, it had to rely on data provided by the Massachusetts Department of Education. Although Cohasset had faxed information to the magazine last May, and the DOE information was slightly older than the information used, Ozment said it was only fair to all the schools that DOE data from a given year be used across the board.

Walsh said if the DOE's records show Cohasset has not sent any students off to four-year private colleges, there has obviously been a mistake. Leonard said it was a technological glitch, as the school was in the process of changing software and the new system didn't work well with the old system, and the proper information didn't get out to the DOE.

"This matter is a result of a combination of circumstances," said Walsh, adding the magazine was sympathetic to the situation Cohasset has been put in. Walsh added the data will need to be corrected with the DOE for future use, but for now, the school is taking the ranking in stride, and not using it to compare itself with other schools or letting it diminish the great work the students and staff are doing.

The magazine used a set of 28 criteria to rank the schools including: median home price, rate per $1,000 assessed valuation, enrollment, cost per pupil, SAT verbal/math, Sat Participation 2002, dropout rate percent 2003, average teacher salary 2003, percent classrooms with Internet 2002-2003, students per computer, grade 10 MCAS math/English, student/teacher ratio, four-year public post-grad, two-year public post-grad, four-year private post-grad, two-year private post-grad, other, work, military.

For a complete listing of how the schools measured up, without ranking, visit bostonmagazine.com. A complete list of the rankings can be found in the print version of the magazine, available at newsstands and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Hazardous waste collection

Household Hazardous Product collections include resident mercury thermometer swaps

Five more household hazardous product collections will be held this fall in South Shore Recycling Cooperative member towns. Residents may attend their own town's collection at no charge. Visitors from the following member towns may also attend at no charge with the permission of their own town's Hazardous Waste Coordinator: Abington, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Norwell, Plymouth, Rockland, Scituate, Weymouth and Whitman. Permission authorizes disposal at the expense of the resident's town; proof of residency is required. Some towns may limit subsidized quantities.

Since Marshfield's collection ended early Saturday due to extreme weather conditions, Marshfield residents may attend any collection with just proof of residency.

Visitors without permission may attend for a fee of $40/15 gal or 30 lbs of waste. Commercial "Small Quantity Generators" may also call ahead to 978-683-1002 to arrange disposal and payment.

Collections are scheduled as follows:

OCT.

2 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Abington Highway Dept., 225 Central St., with Whitman and Holbrook

9 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Plymouth DPW, 159 Camelot Dr.

16 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Weymouth DPW, 120 Winter St.

30 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Hanover Transfer Station, Rt. 139, with Rockland.

Pool chemicals, acids and bases, thermometers, thermostats and poisons.

Materials not accepted include commercial and industrial waste, radioactive materials, pathological and medical waste, pressurized gas cylinders, auto batteries and explosives.

Paint, motor oil, fluorescent lamps and NiCd (rechargeable) batteries are collected regularly by many towns and may not be accepted at some collections.

Latex paint is non-hazardous, and may be dried and disposed with trash.

Bring chemicals in their original containers or labeled clearly as to their contents, if known. Clean Harbors will conduct the collections.

Residents who turn in a toxic mercury thermometer may swap it for a digital one. Visitors' thermometers and other mercury waste may be disposed but not swapped. Sponsored by American Ref-Fuel and Mass. Dept. of Environmental Protection.

Help us make emergency care even better

Claudia Dolphin, Chair
Friends of Emergency Care

Nearly a year ago, I enthusiastically volunteered to organize a community group to advise South Shore Hospital's emergency department. The group's purpose would be to provide input from the patient's perspective. I viewed it as an opportunity to give back to an organization so vital to people of our region.

I was eager to support quality emergency care primarily because emergency services touch people in ways that few charitable causes do. We, or someone we love, will likely need South Shore Hospital's emergency care. Rather than hope or assume that what we expect will be available, shouldn't we all get involved to assure that it is?

I believe that the hospital's emergency department is an essential resource for our community. I was intrigued that even though the hospital had already invested millions to double the size and scope of its emergency care, it wanted to do even more. So I agreed to help.

After some planning, I convened the first meeting of the Friends of Emergency Care in January 2004. We started as a handful of people, some with emergency department experiences that didn't meet our expectations. Now, we have 70 members involved, with another 90 interested in joining us. Many are grateful patients or family members. We hope that many more will join us.

As volunteers, our first job was to learn about what's involved in providing emergency care. We discovered that at South Shore Hospital it takes a team of 350 people to care for as many as 200 patients a day. We learned that with 75,000 patient visits a year, South Shore Hospital has the second busiest emergency department in Eastern Massachusetts.

It has been rewarding to meet so many talented doctors, nurses, and other professionals who genuinely want to provide the best possible emergency care. We were candid when describing our personal emergency experiences. The staff welcomed our appreciative comments, but really wanted to hear about opportunities to improve. I, for one, was impressed.

Since our first meetings, we've already seen many positive changes. A nurse now greets each patient, so that the process of evaluating the seriousness of each emergency can begin right away. A concierge focuses on keeping patients and families informed about any delays in care. The waiting room has been made more comfortable, with a snack area nearby for the family and friends of those receiving emergency care.

The Friends of Emergency Care continues to provide input about how to enhance the emergency department experience. Eventually, we will help in other ways — some of us will continue as advisors, others will volunteer in the ED itself, some will help fund-raising that will support emergency care, while others will work at convincing public officials to more adequately fund the care.

You may have read a letter from Braintree resident Robert Walsh (who is not a member of our group) that was published in the Patriot Ledger. He wrote, in part, "I realize what has happened at South Shore Hospital. They have become the busiest ER because they are the best in the area."

I couldn't agree more with Mr. Walsh. People arrive in emergency rooms with all types of problems. Some could cause death in minutes, others are far less serious. How quickly patients receive care is determined by how sick they are, not by how long they've waited. Those who are in most urgent need of care receive it first — and experienced nurses and doctors continually assess new patients to assure that standard is met.

If you're like me and want your friends and neighbors to benefit from the expert emergency care that only South Shore Hospital offers, here's how you can help:

- Judge for yourself. Learn about what distinguishes South Shore Hospital. Visit southshorehospital.org and click on "There is a Difference" to see a video that will tell you more.
- Join our group. You are welcome whether or not you've ever visited South Shore Hospital's emergency department. Please call (781) 340-4170 for details.

South Shore Hospital has proven to me that it is constantly improving and that our feedback is valued. We are indeed fortunate to have such expertise close to our homes. I know the team at South Shore Hospital wants nothing more than to protect our health and well-being.

Fellow Democrat will run write-in campaign

amendment banning same-sex civil marriage, which is permitted under the Massachusetts Constitution. "Garrett works hard taking care of our district," said Burns. "But we should demand more of our legislators. They should be able to see the big picture too – and civil rights for all Americans is the big picture here."

Bradley noted that Burns has been a "great supporter" of his in the past and that he's "sorry she's upset" with him. "However, as state representative I take hundreds of votes, and every time I do there are people who agree with me and people who don't. I hope to be judged on the totality of my record advocating for this district and not by a single issue, no matter how important that issue is."

In addition to her position on civil marriage for all, Burns favors funding and implementation of Clean Elections and improved state support for education in all communities.

"Writing in a candidate is not an easy thing to ask people to do," Burns said. "But it's important to make ourselves heard now. Our legislators will vote again in two years on the same measure to roll back rights, before it can go to the ballot. Being willing to write in someone else's name will send a powerful message that we expect Garrett to take a strong stand for individual rights for all."

In response to the marriage rights issue, Bradley said he heard from both sides and felt the best course of action is to let the public have a vote on the issue. My job as a state representative is to make decisions, and I make them everyday and stand by them."

"As state representative I take hundreds of votes, and every time I do there are people who agree with me and people who don't. I hope to be judged on the totality of my record advocating for this district and not by a single issue, no matter how important that issue is."

education programs for welfare recipients to break the cycle of welfare dependence); state support for education for all communities and all children; and increased funding for local affordable housing initiatives.

"Garrett works hard taking care of our district. But we should demand more of our legislators. They should be able to see the big picture too – and civil rights for all Americans is the big picture here."

Challenger Laura Burns

Burns noted that she agrees with Bradley on a number of key issues, such as the goal of Clean Elections, the need for a single-payer health care system, and opposition to the death penalty.

Burns is also concerned about corporate responsibility (making sure business pays for its share of taxes); welfare/workfare (encouraging

Bradley said he plans to continue advocating for local issues, such as increased local aid including education funding, transportation improvements, increased health coverage, fiscal responsibility, and budget reform. Getting home rule petitions, which come directly from Town Meeting, passed is another of Bradley's top priorities.

Bradley was also instrumental in the erection of illuminated signage at the Fore River Bridge alerting motorists of upcoming bridge openings and in notifying drivers by e-mail when the bridge is scheduled to go up.

Even though he has no Republican competition, Bradley has nevertheless been on the campaign trail, going door to door to speak with voters. "I'm asking people to support me so I can continue the work of my last four years as a state representative," he said. "People will make that decision on Nov. 2."

Why take the step of running a write-in campaign? "This is an historic moment, not just in Massachusetts but for our nation," Burns said. "Not everyone has a meaningful chance to weigh in on this civil rights issue, but our legislators will again, at the next Constitutional Convention. This is an opportunity to stand up for civil rights and do the right thing."

Voters can visit Burns' campaign website at votelauraburns.org for more information.

Burns is serving her fourth year on the Town of Hingham Advisory Committee. Last year she also served on the Town Capital Outlay Committee. She has been active in the Foster PTO since 1997. She and her husband Jude Miller have lived in Hingham for 17 years, and have two children, ages 10 and 14, in the Hingham Public Schools.

as well as the badges she has been awarded over the years have led up to this achievement. The Silver Award is the second highest award a Girl Scout can achieve. Aisling is one of four in Troop 4778 who have completed their Silver Award projects and she and the other girls received their awards at a ceremony held Friday, Sept. 17.

"I love to read, and I love kids," said 15-year-old Aisling, adding deciding on a her topic for her project was easy. She began to plan, choosing books she thought the kids would enjoy, and art project to coincide with the lesson. Aisling said her parents suggested she contact Sharon Moody, the children's librarian at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, for project ideas and age-appropriate books, and she was extremely helpful. Moody was previously a kindergarten teacher at Osgood, and Aisling said she had books of crafts and was able to help her focus on the particulars of planning her lessons.

When she was younger, Aisling attended the Kids Connection preschool, and her brother Thomas, 4, currently attends the preschool. With that connection, Aisling was able to speak with its director, Judith Coyne, about using her facility to host the program. Coyne was happy to oblige. The preschool hosts a summer camp program for students from 3 years old up to fourth grade, and Aisling enjoyed the diversity offered working in a school closer to the city.

During the planning portion of her project, Aisling had expected to be working with students only at the preschool age level. She took into consideration their ability level, making sure anything that needed to be pre-cut was taken care of and books were age-appropriate. Aisling said with Moody's help, as well as the help of her younger cousin who tested the books and the activities, she was confident the books she chose would be a success.

During the four-day session, which ran from 10 a.m. until noon for three days, and from 9 a.m. until noon on the last, Aisling said the children read Eric Carle's "Very Hungry Caterpillar," and "The Very Grouchy Ladybug," as well as "A Color of His Own" and "Fish is Fish," by Leo Lionni. The children completed art projects, such as creating construction paper ladybugs to go along with the Grouchy Ladybug story, compiling their own books with caterpillars, allowing children to share their favorite foods to eat, coloring fish, and designing their own colored chameleon.

Aisling took the ability levels of the children into consideration and had to enlarge some coloring pages to assist the yougnsters. With a larger image, the younger children "could be proud of what they were doing, and not get frustrated," she said.

But after the first day, Aisling realized some of her preschool planning would not be appropriate for the older children who participated in the camp. The older children were bored with coloring large pictures and assembling lady bugs which had already been pre-cut, so Aisling needed to modify her lessons. The fourth grade children were more independent and more advanced than the preschoolers, which allowed her to incorporate new books and new activities. She said it was a challenge to change her lessons at the last minute, but her attention to detail and her thoughtfulness to ensure everyone's needs were met helped for a smooth transition.

Of the entire experience, "My favorite part was the reaction from the kids," she said, adding on the first day, some of the little ones were shy, but on the second day, they were really excited to see her and find out what the next book would be. She said some of the children who would never volunteer to help out in class were volunteering, and that made her feel like she had made a great connection.

As a result of the project, Aisling said it really got her thinking about her future, and whether she might one day like to pursue a career in teaching. "I like to do so many things, but after working with kids, it's a really good possibility," she said. Aisling said she loved thinking up activities that would be fun for the children, and said having Coyne as a role model really helped her see the kind of teacher she would like to be.

In addition to Girl Scouts, Aisling said she enjoys playing sports and is on the lacrosse and basketball teams at Cohasset High School. She is also in the jazz band, concert band, and pep band, and plays the clarinet, trumpet, and tenor saxophone. Aisling also has plans to try out for this year's school musical, "Grease," for which performances will be held in December. Aisling also traveled to various countries in Europe over the summer as a People to People student ambassador and participated in the Summer Institute at the Center for Student Coastal Research.

eral investigation. "However, that investigation does not involve the Town of Cohasset and is not focused on her employment with the town," the release states.

The release goes on to state, "An initial review of the town's bookkeeping procedures by the Selectmen has shown that all of the existing financial controls and procedures are in place," and reiterates that an independent accounting firm will be conducting a complete audit of the town's bookkeeping procedures and will issue a report. "The Selectmen anticipate that this audit will be completed over the next few weeks and the results will be announced shortly afterward."

Girls soccer team survives slow starts to pull out a pair of league wins

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It took the Cohasset High girls soccer squad a little more time than its coach would have liked to get things going in two games this past week, but all's well that ends well. The Lady Skippers took wins of 3-1 and 2-0 over South Shore League rivals Harwich and Hull to improve to 4-2-1 on the season.

The looooong bus ride to Harwich is never any fun for the various Cohasset High teams, but most of the teams must make it once a year, so there's no sense in complaining.

Of course, when traffic proves a nightmare and the team does not arrive at the lower Cape school until 4:40 for a schedule 4:30 start, well, you've got to cut a coach a little slack.

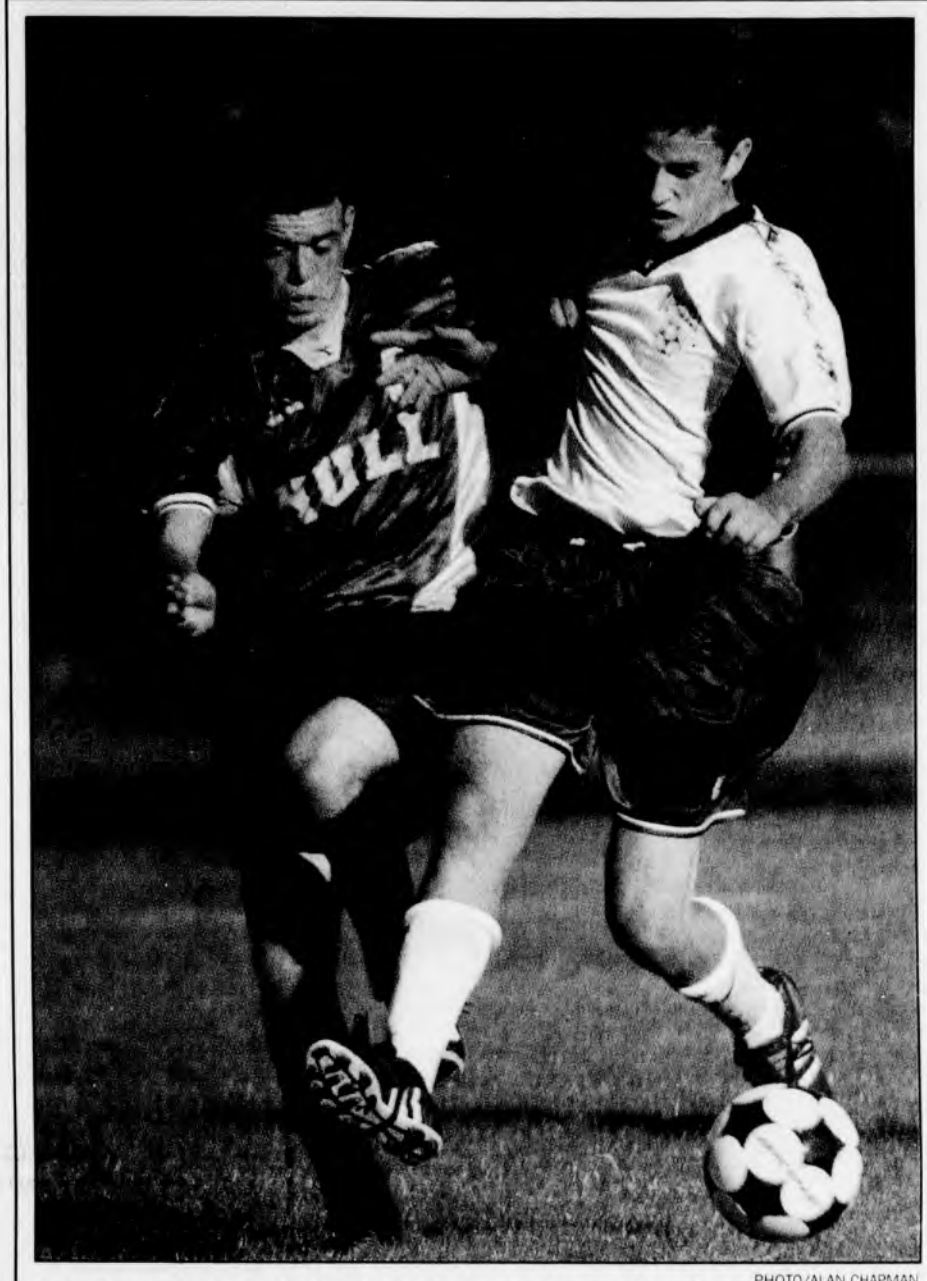
"The bus ride is long and it takes a little longer to get the blood flowing when it is time to play," lamented CHS girls soccer coach Deb Beal. "We were granted our 20 minutes to warm up (after the late arrival), which is never enough by the time we put the finishing touches on our uniforms."

Big surprise: the game starts, and the visiting Lady Skippers appear a bit sluggish.

"The first five minutes were frightening and the next 20 weren't much prettier," reported Beal.

Harwich finally took advantage of the sub-par Cohasset play and potted the game's first score at the 22:37 mark.

As it turned out, that may have been a mistake.



"Their goal seemed to give us the kick in the butt we needed," noted Beal. "We began playing smarter and more cohesively."

The tying goal was delivered by sophomore Lindsay Durkin just six minutes after Harwich broke the ice, sending the game into the halftime break at 1-1.

With the blood seemingly lowing well to all parts of the body at this point, the visitors picked right up where they left off to start the second half.

"Things were much brighter

Boys soccer team on a roll heading into Norwell showdown

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

By George, he thinks they've got it.

It took a while, but the members of the Cohasset High boys soccer team are finally starting to play the way Rob Leary wants them to, the way their second year head coach felt pretty certain all along they could.

"I think the guys are really starting to get it," lauded Leary following a 3-0 win over South Shore League rival Harwich last Thursday. "We moved the ball very well and really dominated the game.

"I couldn't ask for anything more than I've gotten the last two games," he added, referring also to a 2-2 tie with Carver last Tuesday.

A second straight 3-0 win in league play, this one at home over Hull on Monday, has the Skippers at 3-2-1 overall, including 3-1-1 in league play, and with a chance to move

Skippers fly past Cardinals

Strong second half lifts CHS gridders over Spellman, 20-7

By Scott Roche
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For 34:38 of Saturday night's non-league game, the Cardinal Spellman football team was in prime position to pick up its first win of the season, but everything fell apart in 11 seconds.

Punting from their own 20 yard line and guarding a 7-6 lead with 5:22 left, the Cardinals lost the lead when the snap from center went out of the end zone for a safety to give Cohasset an 8-7 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, the roof caved in on Spellman as Cohasset's Joe Durkin returned the kickoff 60 yards for a touchdown to give the Skippers a 14-7 lead en route to a 20-7 victory.

"We played well up to that point," said Cardinal Spellman coach Peter Ambrose. "One thing that has hurt us in our first two games leading into tonight has been us giving up the big play. That was the case again tonight."

Spellman took over after falling behind, but the Cardinals turned the ball over on downs at the Cohasset 46.

Durkin sealed the Skippers' victory with a 54-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage, scoring with 1:28 left.

"Cohasset is a very good football team with very good speed," said Ambrose. "Once they were able to get to the outside, we had

Cape fears

Field hockey team proves no match for SSL powers Harwich and Mashpee

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Some may argue the Cohasset High varsity field hockey team has dug a hole deeper than the Greenbush tunnel through Hingham Square. In fact, the Skippers think they have hit rock bottom with a no win-five loss-and one tie record. They can't wait to bust out.

Last week was not the week to do it. They hosted the South Shore League's top two teams, Harwich and Mashpee, and came away with two losses, each by an identical score of 5-0. Of their five goals Harwich banged in four of them in the first half.

Senior Captain Allison Dean put a positive spin on the contest when she said: "We went into the Harwich game on Tuesday with our heads held high. Because we have built up our self- confidence, we worked as a team better than in some of the earlier games."

"We all walked into this match knowing Harwich as a very tough team," reflected Coach Deb Bostwick. She recalled how last year the Rough Riders romped over the Skippers by a 9-1 score.

The coach continued: "(Harwich) has a very strong midfield line. I decided to sacrifice one of our offensive positions and add an extra midfielder into our lineup."

Bostwick's tactic paid off, forcing the Rough Riders to keep the ball on the outsides of the field.

Two days later, the Falcons of and team soccer was being played," noted Beal.

Sophomore Christina Pinkus found the back of the net twice, and that was all she wrote on this game.

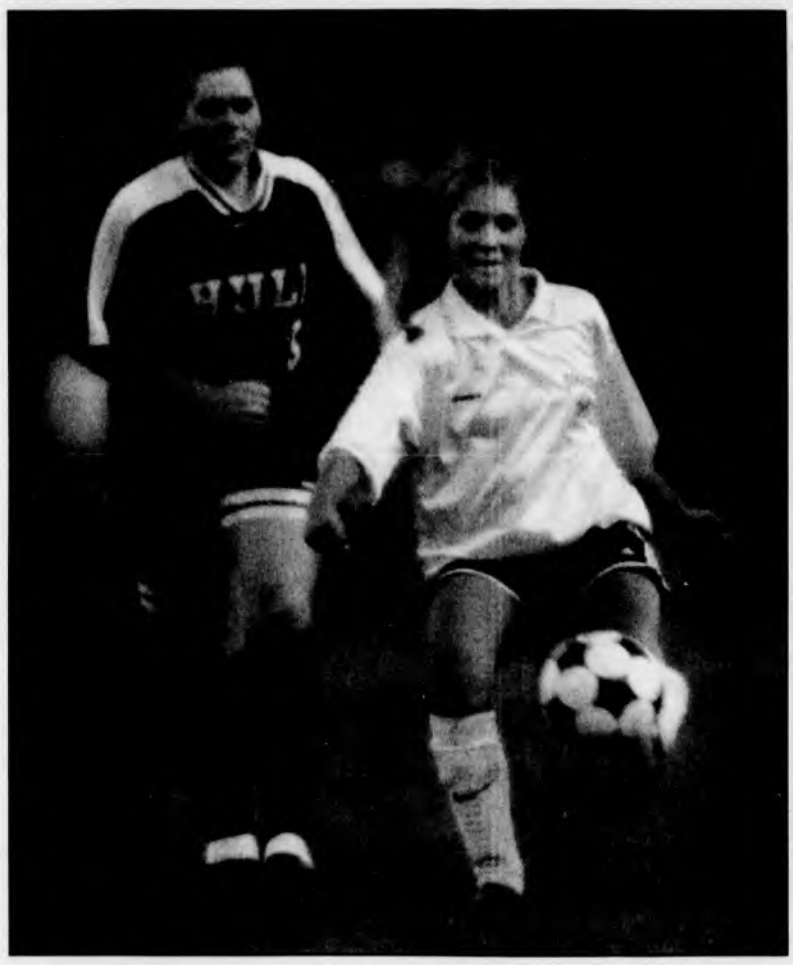
"Christina has really started to get a feel for her position and her role," lauded Beal. "She is an excellent athlete and she has been playing really well. I am happy with my decision to keep her on varsity."

Monday night saw another slow start, but this time the Lady Skippers had no excuse, with the game being played on Alumni Field, no more than 50 or so paces from the CHS locker room.

"Again, we came out slow and almost a little disorganized," appraised Beal. "This time, though, we were much quicker to adapt to the task at hand and we played very well."

"First five, last five," has long been a favorite expression of Beal's in the locker room and the sidelines. This is her way of reminding her charges that games are often won or lost in the first five minutes and last five minutes of each half.

"You can never let your guard down when there are just a few minutes left to play," she asserted.



That message found its mark on Monday, as the Skippers "stole" one from Hull inside the final five minutes of the first half, Lindsay Durkin feeding Casey Anderson to break the ice and give the hosts a 1-0 edge at the break. Still, Beal was far from pleased.

"At halftime, we determined that a 1-0 lead was not good enough and we needed to score more," said the veteran coach.

Twelve minutes in, Durkin and Anderson combined again, this time reversing roles, to make it 2-0.

The goal by Durkin placed her second on the team in scoring with three tallies, just 3 just one behind Anderson.

"The nice thing though about this team is many people are scoring," said Beal. "Nicole Whitney, Emilie Shea, Lauren Rizzotti, Lindsey Kennedy and Christina Pinkus and Jen Dinger have all tallied in our 16 season goals."

CHS senior Mackenzie Holway is being lauded by Coach Beal for her decision making and ability to adjust to a new position.

The girls were hoping this modest win streak would give them some momentum heading into tonight's showdown on the road with unbeaten league rival Norwell (5:15 p.m. start).

"We have some people playing really great soccer and taking their roles very seriously," lauded Beal. "I cannot say enough about Mackenzie Holway. She is playing a new position and starting to make good decisions on the field. She is in great shape and is proving that, with hard work, she can compete.

"Keepers Cecelia Chapman and Melissa Crowley-Buck are feeding of one another and the position is getting hot. Defensively, we are strong with Christine Lovallo and Danielle Hajjar. The forwards are working hard in practice to perfect their shots and support one another."

As part of the Homecoming festivities, the girls will get back into action Saturday morning (11 a.m. start) with a hosting of tough non-league rival Scituate. Tuesday brings another trek back over the Sagamore Bridge, though not nearly as long this time. SSL rival Mashpee is an upper Cape school. Friday features another non-league tilt, this one at Holbrook High.

trouble controlling them."

The game started well for the visitors, as Cohasset's defense had difficulty containing the Cardinals hard charging running backs and were plagued with successive and untimely off-side penalties. This helped set up the game's first score with 2:10 left in the first half, as sophomore running back Justin Murray finished off a six-play, 77-yard scoring drive with a 39-yard touchdown run. Devon Callinan booted the point after to give the Cardinals a 7-0 lead.

Cohasset needed only 90 seconds to answer the Spellman touchdown.

Starting the touchdown drive at their own 14, the Skippers young offensive line provided running room for Joe Durkin and quarterback Crandon Leahy. They took advantage of the opportunities, combining for successive first down yardage. The drive was highlighted by a 40 yard Durkin run through a big hole on the right side of the line following punishing blocks by Nick Arment and Jake Cuneo. Durkin scampered untouched through the hole, sidestepped a would be tackler in the secondary and out ran the remaining Spellman defenders before being knocked out of bounds at the 26-yard line.

After a pair of incomplete passes, Leahy connected with Dan McCarthy for a six-yard pass to the Spellman 20 to set up a fourth-and-short situation.

On fourth down, Durkin, on a sweep to his right, bolted 20 yards untouched for the touchdown to draw the Skippers to within one. The Skippers failed on the two-point conversion pass, sending it into the halftime break a 7-6 game.

The Skipper defense started strong in the third quarter, as both teams traded punts. The Skippers D also held on the Cardinals second possession, forcing the punt from the CS 35-yard line. A high snap from center forced to punter to scramble back to field the ball. A multitude of Cohasset players descended on the ball at the same time, forcing the punter to kick the ball back into the end zone to give the Skippers a 2-point safety rahter than a recovery deep in Cardinal territory.

With the score now 8-6, Spellman chose to kick off from the 20 yard line. The ball was fielded by Durkin on the run. Several key blocks gave him some day light and he scampered down the left side line for his second touchdown of the game. The extra point failed and Cohasset's lead was extended to 14-6.

By the forth quarter, the Cohasset defense had figured out the Spellman offensive attack. Forcing Spellman to punt, Cohasset took over in good field position near their 40-yard line.

After gaining quick first down yardage on the ground and eating up much of the clock, Durkin again exploded for another long touchdown following a key block by Arment. The junior tackle drove a Cardinals linebacker backwards and to the outside 10 yards down the field, allowing Durkin to cut left off the block, slide between two defenders and then turn on the speed to score Cohasset's third and final touchdown late in the fourth quarter. The extra point again failed.

The Cardinal offense began a desperate attempt to recover but the drive was ended when Anthony Depaolo made a spectacular leaping interception of a deep Spellman pass and returned to ball all the way to the Spellman 2- yard line. In typical good sportsmen like fashion, Cohasset coach Tony Rolfe chose to forgo another score. Quarterback Leahy took two knees to run the clock and end the game.

Cohasset's young offensive line stepped it up a notch this week. Center Matt Casey was forced to sit out the game due to an ankle injury. Sophomore Nick Camby took over center responsibility and did well in his first varsity start. Sophomore Justin Alexander, Leo Clougherty, Arment, Cuneo and Dan McCarthy provided the blocking that raised the Cohasset ground game to another level.

On the other side of the ball, Matt Baroudi, Scott Wakefield, Dave McKenna and Kelvin Ferriera combined to stop the Spellman running game in the second half.

Next up

The Skippers will host Pembroke High, a first year school and football program, on Friday, as part of the school's homecoming festivities. The kickoff is at 5:30 p.m..

Cohasset's Remy Lee battles a Norwell player for control of ball in recent SSL loss for the Lady Skippers, 2-1.

Field hockey team proves no match for SSL powers Harwich and Mashpee

FROM FIELD HOCKEY, PAGE 17

Mashpee swooped into Skipper territory like ants on a piece of sugar.

Captain Christina St. Pierre remained sidelined as a result of illness. Nine minutes into the game, key player Katie James took a nasty hit to her knuckles and never returned. After her unfortunate injury, the game deteriorated very quickly. So much so that Goalie Aaron Bigley wound up fielding 25 shots on goal.

"We just had an off night," said Courtney Hurley. "Our confidence level fell and we were run down from the Harwich match up."

Coach Bostwick felt the pain of facing the top two league contenders in two days.

"We struggled a lot with our ball control and our defensive pressure," she observed.

On the bright side, the veteran coach commended Allison Dean, Remy Lee, Kathrine Whoriskey, Liz Condos, Katie James, Mia Lieb-Lappen and Aaron Bigley for their improved play in recent games.

The Skippers show little signs of throwing in the towel.

"We can definitely dominate the Hull Pirates in our next game," stated Coach Bostwick. "As long as the girls stay positive and work hard, this is a game we can win."

Bostwick added one more observation, "The teammates need to put their hearts into the games and stay positive."

Unfortunately, that game was postponed due to rain, so the CHS girls had to wait a little longer to go for that first win.

Seventh grade boys 2-0 in Cranberry League soccer

Cohasset's 7th Grade soccer team opened Boys U-14 Cranberry League Soccer play this weekend with an easy 5-0 win in Scituate on Saturday morning and then followed it up with an impressive 4-1 road win on Sunday against a very tough Stoughton team.

After first half domination in Scituate in which Cohasset peppered the Scituate goalkeeper with shots but couldn't score, Nick "The Quick" Cannon punched in the first goal of the season in the second minute of the second half. Solid play up the middle all game long from Ollie Forrer, Andrew Littauer and Brendan Doonan, who also scored on a great shot, forced Scituate to try to work their way up the side lines, but they didn't have much success there either. Jo-Di Rosano stole the ball away several times and chipped in two goals from the right forward position while left forward Jackson Dean also made several nice plays. Tyler Durant, Sam Game, Will "Wheels" Evans and Justin Yeager turned in solid mid-field plays to keep Scituate in their end of the field for most of the game. Eamon Davis played a spectacular second half and scored a beautiful goal after playing goalkeeper in the first half and barely touching the ball.

The defense was solid all game long as James "Early" Earle, Andrew Graham and Joe Leighton kept Scituate's scoring chances to a minimum. Graham Stevenson was a solid anchor at center fullback until a hip injury forced him to the sidelines for most of the second half. On Scituate's only real scoring threat late in the second half, goalkeeper Will Evans came up with a great save to preserve the shut out.

Sunday's road game against Stoughton was a make up from last weekend's Ivan rainout and the Cohasset boys again put the pressure on right from the start. Brendan Doonan streaked in for an early scoring chance that was denied, but later scored twice to lead the team to victory. Midfielder Ollie Forrer got his first goal of the season to put the team up 2 –1 at the end of the first half and played a spectacular game from end to end.

Ivan Sceery scored the team's fourth goal filling in for Jo-Di Rosano at forward and Lennart Brown contributed a solid mid-field performance filling in for Andrew Littauer. Will Wise played a brilliant game in goal, denying every Stoughton shot but one that deflected in high off the crossbar late in the first half. Graham Stevenson also played well at center fullback until his hip injury acted up again, forcing him to sit for most of the game.

Sam Game continues to improve and impress and Tyler Durant continued his head's up play with some dazzling foot-work at midfield. Speed, ball control and nice passing by forwards Nick Cannon and Jackson Dean helped to keep the Stoughton defense on their heels, while steady strong play by Andrew Graham, Will Evans, Joe Leighton and Justin Yeager on defense kept Stoughton off balance and shooting wide time after time.

The team's next game will be played this Saturday on the road against Sharon.

Getting in synch

FROM BOYS SOCCER, PAGE 17

into first place heading into today's much anticipated showdown at Norwell (3:45 p.m. start).

The victory over Harwich, the same team that stunned defending league champ Norwell on Monday with a 2-1 win, featured a well balanced Skippers assault all over the field.

Freshman Mike Grimm scored his first ever varsity goal, and juniors Nils Sceery and Aidan Buick added the others.

Sceery's goal proved the backbreaker for the visiting roughriders, and it came after an electrifying end-to-end rush by Trevor Brady. The junior fullback collected the ball near the top of Cohasset penalty area, split a pair of Harwich defenders with some nice footwork and then outran the chasers up the right sideline, finally serving a picture perfect cross to Sceery for the relatively easy re-direct home.

"That was absolutely one of the prettiest goals I've ever seen at the high school level," said Leary, a former head and assistant coach at Rockland High.

Apart from discussing that one play, however, Leary is pretty adamant in his stance not to single out any one, two, or even a handful of players.

"I know it might sound like a cliché, but we're winning right now because of a total team effort," said Leary. "You want to put kids names in the paper. Why don't you just list our roster. We're really spreading the field right now, and getting everyone involved."

And it's not just him seeing it. The Harwich coach made a point of lauding the type of "team game" the Skippers played in their spanking of his team.

"Yeah, it's a pretty nice feeling when an opposing coach makes a point of coming over just to say something like that," noted Leary.

The second straight 3-0 win came over a perennially weak Hull team, made even poorer on Monday by the absence of their top scorer. Buick added two more tallies to his team best total and junior Tristram Norman scored the other. The Skippers dominated the possession and territorial battle throughout the game, but the coach still felt his charges played down a bit to the level of their competition.

Nevertheless, he wasn't complaining... much.

"That was a trap game, but we did what we needed to win," said Leary. "Maybe we were looking ahead a bit too much at the Norwell game."

Leary speculated that perhaps Norwell's players were guilty of the same thing in their loss in Harwich on Monday. After all, the Skippers and Clippers have waged some pretty memorable battles in recent years.

"Yeah, it's a pretty intense rivalry," noted Leary, who has never beaten Norwell as a head coach, including his three year tenure in Rockland. "The kids are really getting up for it "

The Skippers will next play on Saturday, when they host struggling neighbor to the south Scituate (0-5) in a non-league tilt (3 p.m. start). It's back to league play next week, with Mashpee in town Tuesday, a trip to Abington on Wednesday and a hosting of Carver Friday night.

Golfers stay on course

Win over Carver keeps Skippers in contention for SSL crown

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High golf team remains in the running for a South Shore League title, though rain the last two days isn't helping that pursuit.

The Skippers, 3-1-1 in their first go round through the South Shore League, had been slated to host at the Cohasset Golf Club the two teams they're locked up with in the league standings to open this week—Harwich (5-1) and Norwell (4-2). However, Mother Nature had different plans, and now there is a chance the Cohasset golfers might actually have to play a tri-match with these two teams.

"That would be a lot of pressure, and it's something I'm hoping to avoid," said Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney. "But we're running out of time and available times (at the Cohasset Golf Club). We may not have a choice"

What Sweeney was trying to arrange at the time of this writing was adding Norwell to the slate for tomorrow's hosting of Mashpee, making that a tri-match, and then making separate with Harwich for next week, possibly adding it to the card for Tuesday's non-league match with Cape Cod Academy.

Of course, getting Norwell and Mashpee on the same day wouldn't be any great shakes either for the Skippers, considering their lone loss came to the former team and the tie with the latter.

"Whichever way it goes, we've got out work cut out for us," said Sweeney. "I figure we'll have to win out these last five matches to take the championship."

A loss to Harwich would probably leave the Skippers fighting for second place at best, as Harwich has already beaten Norwell twice, leaving it with only three teams it beat up on pretty handily the first time around— Abington, Carver and Mashpee.

The Skippers kept pace with the top pack by knocking off Carver at home last Thursday, 39.5-14.5, behind a stellar round of 39 out of the fourth spot in the lineup by senior Chris Simms.

Simms was low scorer on the day and took eight of nine holes from his counterpart.

"Chris really played a sensational round," said Sweeney. "He made some big shots. He's one of a couple of guys who are really showing right now the strength of our team is in the depth."

Sophomore Kevin Barber shot a solid 41 out of the number one spot to win 5.5 of nine points, and senior Colin Magruder added a 42 out of the second spot, good for a 7-2 match win.

Junior Dave Bouchard, playign out of the sixth spot, also hit a 41 to dominate his match, 6.5-2.5.

Junior Dan Sullivan, who's been hit under 40 repeatedly in recent practice rounds at the Cohasset Golf Club, hit a 45 on Thursday out of the fifth spot. This was still good enough, however, for a 9-0 sweep.

"Danny has really bee tearing it up lately in practice, and forcing me to get him in the lineup somewhere," said Sweeney. "It's tough, though, because we've got other players playing well too."

North Scituate celebrates fall

Revamped festival set for this weekend

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMO@CNC.COM

It's that time of year again.

There's a chill in the air and the leaves are starting to change colors.

The arrival of autumn also heralds a familiar tradition in North Scituate.

This weekend North Scituate Village invites residents and visitors to Fall for Scituate, in the annual autumn festival formerly known as Octoberfest.

Sponsored by the Scituate Chamber of Commerce and the Scituate Visitors Center group, "Fall for Scituate: A Hometown Celebration," will be held this Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 2 and 3, and the two-day celebration promises to be packed with family fun, great food and fund-raising efforts.

Fall for Scituate will put North Scituate businesses in the spotlight allowing local merchants to showcase their products. And this year's celebration features a wide variety of events and activities for festival-goers of all ages.

A Matter of Taste owner Nancy Murray Young, one of the organizers of the event, said those planning the event wanted to create something that displays the personalities of North Scituate's businesses.

"We didn't really want a flea market," she said. "The purpose is to see the resources (the businesses) have here. They are participating in very imaginative ways."

The fun gets underway Saturday morning with a community fair set up at the tennis courts from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The fair will feature a woodcarving demonstration with North Scituate's Carol Balquist, voter registration from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and the MBTA Touch-A-Truck event for children.

Over at the Village Common, the 15th annual chowderfest featuring piping hot cups of local restaurants best recipes will take place from 12 to 2 p.m. and a silent auction will continue throughout the day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Musical entertainment will be provided by Ray Papile, a Scituate native who will perform from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

From 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., Scituate contractor CJ Robinson's 1937 Ford Dwarf Race Car will be on display at Wilder Bros. , while the Visitor's Center will host the Harvest Hat Contest at 2 p.m. with a prize awarded to the most fashionable hat made from corn husks, leaves, berries, apples, turkey feathers and gourds.

From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Vinette Day Spa will offer complimentary makeup consultations and chiropractor Dr. Tara Frare will be on hand to provide free spinal screenings.

Funtastics will get in on the fun with its "attic sale" from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. featuring costumes, props and party goods just in time for Halloween and all to benefit the Scituate Community Christmas. Also at Funtastics, there will be an open gym session for kids from ages 3 to 10 from 1 to 2 p.m., followed by a gymnastics demonstration.

Stain removal expert Ken Grippi will provide solutions for your soiled garments at Dependable Cleaners from 12 to 4 p.m., and at Grand Gables Realty, visitors can stop by for free expert advice on how to sell your home in the spring from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Weinery will pop the cork on a special wine tasting event called the "Red Season" from 2 to 5 p.m. Other special events merchants plan include a sidewalk sale at Tedeschi Food Shop, CT Outfitters, and Pipeline Salon, an "Outdoor Café" at Circe's Grotto, "Sideawalk Snack Stop" at Jamie's Pub & Grill, "treat table" at Wilbur's North, and samplings and store savings at A Matter of Taste.

The fall festival continues into Sunday with the community fair from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and more voter registration from 12 to 2 p.m.

Visitors can take tours of the Glades Estates Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m. Departing from the North Scituate Post Office., the tours will be narrated by Bob Thorndike, shareholder of the estate. The one-hour trip is $10 and advanced tickets will be sold at South Coastal Bank and Pipeline Salon. Limited seating for the tour is available.

Pumpkin painting will be available for children at the Visitor's Center from 12 to 2 p.m., and Pipeline Salon's "fundraising and fun" event will offer cotton candy, face painting and hair braiding to benefit the Crossroads for Kids organization from 12 a.m. to 2 p.m.

At 2 p.m. on Sunday, an apple pie contest will be open to "home-bakers," 18 or older who live or work in Scituate at A Matter of Taste. Bakers have a chance to be named the 2004 Scituate Apple Pie Baking Champion. Three prizes will be awarded.

Unlike year's past, there will not be hayrides through the village for the event, said Murray Young, who noted many local farms have discontinued hayrides due to liability issues and with the event's earlier schedule there wasn't enough time to work out an arrangement. Next year, festival organizers hope to bring the hayrides back, she said.

Scituate contractor CJ Robinson's 1937 Ford Dwarf Race Car will be on display at Wilder Bros. Saturday during the Fall for Scituate celebration.

For more information on Fall for Scituate: A Hometown Celebration, contact Nancy Murray Young at A Matter of Taste at (781) 545-7548.

An educated move for charter school

New year, new location

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

South Shore Charter School Assistant Principal Ted Hirsch helps seven-year old Jacob Gray of Braintree find his classroom last Friday

Students from 21 communities — from Boston to Plymouth — comprise the charter school's student body. Here, students in once class settle into lunch.

There are 30 full-time teachers who comprise the faculty of the South Shore Charter School in Norwell, four of whom are known to their students as Kathy and Rick, Seth and Andre.

There are 25 additional staff members including administrators, aides and part-time instructors, who go by official titles such as Pamela and Mary, Claudia and Thomas.

While still tackling the basics of English, science and mathematics, there are numerous things that are different about the South Shore Charter School starting with the usage of first names; in the hallway and the classroom students and teachers address each other on a basis that's strictly casual.

Michael Munhall, the school's Executive Director, said this friendly naming convention is representative of the school's educational philosophy as a whole.

"We're trying to give a more personal education," Munhall said. "We want the teachers to take a personal interest in their students' success. It's an informal environment."

Using only first names is one way to teach students that everyone in the school, from the principal to the first-grader, to those on the janitorial staff, should be treated with respect.

Munhall added that within this environment, students can be encouraged to take on difficult tasks, while knowing they have the support and guidance of the school's staff to rely on.

"We want to push the kids as far as they can go," he said.

While students and teachers have been getting to know each other since the school year began two weeks ago, the charter school is also familiarizing itself to its new location in Norwell.

Founded in 1995, the South Shore Charter School spent its first nine years of existence at a three-building campus in Hull.

In December of 2003, school officials purchased the current school building, and Munhall described the 53,000 square foot structure in Assinippi Park as "a dream come true."

Since last year, the building which was formerly home to a pharmaceutical company, has been converted from 114 individual offices, to 28 classrooms, with additional work to be done.

One-third of the building remains unoccupied, and Munhall said plans are in place to build additional classrooms as well as computer and science labs.

In March, grades 9-12 made the switch to the new building, while the remaining students arrived for their first classes in Norwell in September.

In all, 468 students in grades kindergarten through 12, hailing from 21 communities from Plymouth to Boston, attend the school.

"There's a lot of life here," said school principal Dr. Tom Gorsuch.

During their tenure at South Shore, Munhall said faculty and administrators want to convey to their students that learning is not just a 13-year project, but an activity to be pursued for a lifetime.

He added that learning at a charter school is just "an opportunity to succeed in a smaller environment."

While school administrators would like to one day enroll 36 students in each grade, Munhall said class sizes will be kept to a minimum, and most are currently under 18 students per class.

Spanish teacher Howard Bean, who previously taught at the Jeremiah Burke School in Dorchester, said smaller classes allow teachers to devote more time to each student.

He added that one of the benefits he's seen working at the charter school, is the educational approach, one which he described as "a lot more open to different ideas."

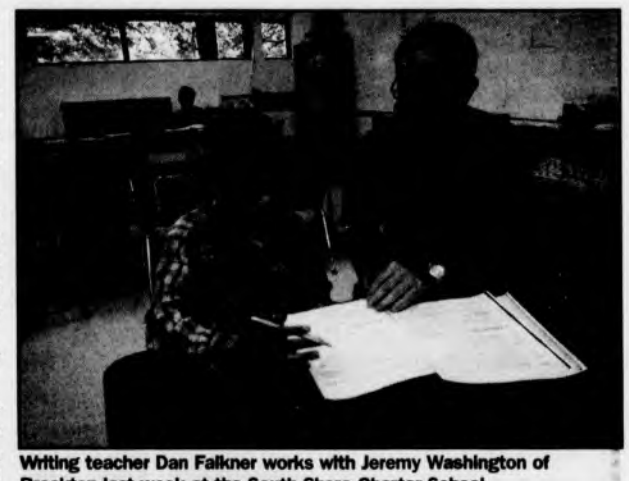
The school's focus on experiential learning projects is one of these.

In addition to the coursework of their everyday classes, students in every grade also spend six hours per week working in groups to complete one large project.

Students in the younger grades work on specific predetermined projects including learning about gardens and butterflies, while older students have the opportunity to choose which project they want to get involved in.

Some students will learn the ins and outs of working at a newspaper, and by year's end they'll be writing and producing one themselves.

Others will be studying gerontology, and making connections at a local nursing home.



This year, Bean will be working with approximately 14 students on a project that could bring them to Honduras. Throughout the year, Bean's students will be researching, writing and designing a children's book that could be used to teach Honduran children about life and culture in The United States.

Bean has a personal interest in Honduras, as he spent two years volunteering there with the Peace Corps.

Last summer, he returned to La Esperanza, Honduras, and visited the Southwest School where he used to teach, and spoke with the principal about establishing a cultural exchange program with his students at 'South Shore.

Bean's students will also raise money so they can travel to Honduras during their February vacation, and personally deliver the books they create.

In addition to the knowledge they gain, Bean said projects like these help to instill in students a sense of responsibility. Although Bean said he will put goals in place for the group, and assign them individual missions, the responsibility of "making it happen" lies with the students themselves.

Writing teacher Dan Falkner works with Jeremy Washington of Brockton last week at the South Shore Charter School.

Mike Munhall, Executive Director of the South Shore Charter School, described the school's new Norwell campus as "a dream come true."

Each group must establish different roles of leadership during the year, and they must also create a Web page where they will describe what they've done and how it worked out.

As the school year draws to a close, students will be asked to demonstrate what they've learned about their subjects by showing an "exhibition of mastery," in form of a paper, art-piece or presentation.

It's these projects that "set the school apart" from the rest, said Munhall.

Another educational opportunity that the school's juniors and seniors wouldn't find at most other schools, is the chance to take courses at local colleges.

In order to graduate from SSCS, students must apply for and be accepted to a college, said Munhall. To prepare them for this after-graduation experience, he added that each student must complete two courses during their junior and senior years at a local university.

Munhall said many of the charter school's students will be the first in their families to attend college, and enrolling in these courses is one way to show them they can do it.

Another inspiration for students comes with the grading policy for these courses: If they earn a B-grade or higher, the charter school will pay their tuition fees.

"When they graduate from here," said Munhall, "they've already been a college student."

Students in their junior and senior years can also acclimatize themselves to the working world through the numerous internships the school has established with local businesses.

The school also offers a limited amount of after-school activities, including playing for the school's one sports team — boys and girls basketball — or studying various musical instruments in after school courses.

Richard Levitt, the school's Director of Development, said school officials are planning an official dedication ceremony which will likely take place during the second week in October.

The event will be open to the public, he added, and state and federal office holders will also be invited.

The South Shore Charter School is located at 100 Longwater Drive. For more information, check out its Web site: www.sscs-ma.org.

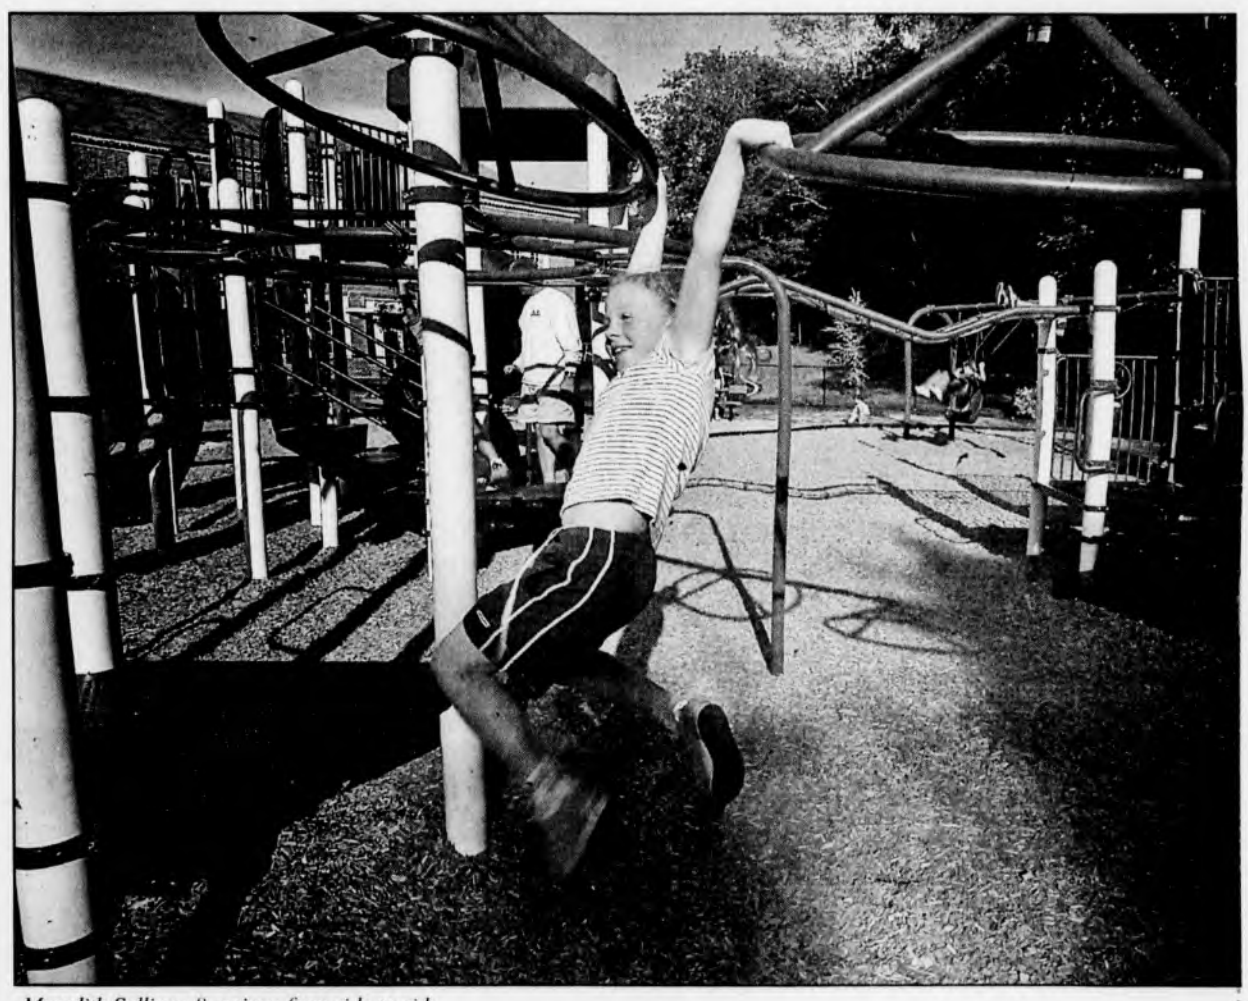
The swing of things



Stairway to fun: Austin Tarpey, 3, of Cohasset makes the lofty climb to check out the slide.

Jungle fever has hit Eric Sullivan, 10, who enjoys the sunshine at the recently opened playground, which is attracting many admirers.

A curious youngster looks into the tube slide at the new Cohasset playground behind the library.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

DEER HILL SCHOOL BEGINNER BAND

Grade 4 students are invited to learn to play a musical instrument and participate in the Deer Hill Band Program. No musical experience is necessary. Weekly lessons are held during the school day and are free of charge. Most band instruments were demonstrated at in-school assembly on Monday, Sept. 27. If you don't have an instrument available, Goulet & Co. will be at the Deer Hill Cafeteria on Monday, Oct. 4 at 7:00p.m.to explain their rent-to-own program and distribute instruments. A more detailed letter and registration form was sent home with your child on Sept. 27. If you have questions please contact Mr. Biagini at 383-6115 ext. 155 or SBiagini@CohassetK12.org.

BAND INSTRUMENT SALE?

Now is the best time for sellers to post a note on the Deer Hill Band Bulletin board. Include at least the type of instrument, brand, condition, price, your name and phone number. Drop it at the Deer Hill office or band room and it will be posted. Buyers - call or stop by the school to check out postings. 383-6115 ext. 155

Dance etiquette for students

Donald Mason and the Committee for the Cohasset Assemblies announce the opening date will be Tuesday, Oct. 5. The Assemblies are a series of 10 social dance classes for fifth and sixth grades designed to introduce youngsters to the basics of social dance and etiquette. The Assemblies have been an important part of the social education for children in Cohasset and the South Shore for several generations.

Each class is opened with a formal receiving line in which the children learn to properly shake hands, look people in the eye while speaking, and correctly introduce themselves by their first and last names. The dance instruction focuses mainly on social dances, Fox Trot, Waltz and Swing, so the children learn to comfortably dance together. The social emphasis is on basic courtesy and respect, to be polite when inviting a partner to dance, or when accepting, and in conversation with each other.

Although the classes are structured and supervised, they also include party dances, contemporary dances and dance games with prizes, making the Assemblies a fun way for the children to learn and practice their social skills together.

The classes are held on Tuesdays, approximately twice a month, at St. Stephens Church on Highland Avenue. Invitations have been distributed to all fifth and sixth grade Cohasset students. If your child has not received one, call Mason at 617-983-0106 or contact a Committee member: Patricia Leahy, Barbara Mullin, Elizabeth Naughton, Sharyn Studley and Lucia Flibotte.

Coffee with the authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present "Coffee with the Authors" on Tuesday, Oct. 12, from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m. at the Atlantica Restaurant in Cohasset. Enjoy a continental breakfast and a stimulating morning with four authors as they discuss the art of writing and their latest work. Featured authors will be Archer Mayor for "The Surrogate Thief," Ann Napolitano for "Within Arm's Reach" Sharon Pywell for "What Happened to Henry and Karen Shepard for "The Bad Boy's Wife." Archer Mayor is the winner of the 2004 Book Award for Fiction from the New England Booksellers Association. "The Surrogate Thief." He received a starred review in the Sep.13, 2004 edition of Publisher's weekly. "Within Arm's Reach" by Ann Napolitano follows three generations of an Irish-American Catholic family who are jarred into crisis by an unexpected pregnancy. Sharon Pywell will discuss her book "What Happened to Henry", a story about a close-knit family forever changed by tragedy – and mystical forces. Karen Shepard explores the reality of marrying the bad boy- the reckless, irresistible cowboy who steals your heart and then throws it back at you, in her latest book, "The Bad Boy's Wife". Advance reservations and ticketing are required and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 781-383-2665. Tickets are $13 per person and are non refundable

Bradley named 'Guardian' of small business

Representative Garrett Bradley (D-Hingham) was named a Guardian of Small Business by the Massachusetts Chapter of the National Federation of Independent Business for his strong support of small business during the 2003-4 legislative session.

"NFIB Guardian awards go to those legislators who, by their votes, have demonstrated support for small business. With a 70 percent voting record on some tough issues, Rep. Bradley has been a proved supporter of the small business owner in Massachusetts when it counts" Bill Vernon, Massachusetts/NFIB State Director, said in presenting the award.

NFIB's legislative voting record includes floor votes on issues of vital importance to small business in the 2003 and 2004 sessions, including the cost of health insurance, unemployment insurance reform, and property tax relief.

"There are nearly 200,000 businesses in Massachusetts with fewer than 100 employees – more than 95 percent of all firms. They employ more than half of the Commonwealth's 3.2 million workers. And they create more than two-thirds of the new jobs in the state every year" Vernon noted

World-famous real estate investor and author reveals secrets of buying homes with no money down

Robert Allen's legendary workshop reveals how to change your financial future in 90 days or less

Years ago, when I invented the now world-famous "No Money Down" real estate system, people thought it simply couldn't be done... Buying real estate without investing a dime of your own money! But, I have proven it can be done, year after year, in all kinds of housing markets. Perhaps you've seen me on TV — or perhaps you've read one of my bestselling books.

I've shown millions that just about anyone can make a fortune in real estate. But I have to tell you, in all my years of showing people how to create wealth through real estate, I believe it's never been as easy as it is today. Plus, I believe you can make more money now in real estate than ever before. And you can do it quicker.

Before the end of the year, you could be my next real estate millionaire — perhaps even a multimillionaire. Even if you're stone cold broke right now, you can still become richer than most Americans will ever be. The profit floodgates have truly opened for so many of my students. I believe you too can take advantage of all the lasting wealth that real estate can provide. And I'd like to tell you how in my updated workshop, Creating Wealth with Real Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO

Challenge #1: Find fast wealth in any city, town, or neighborhood

When I first developed my revolutionary system for buying real estate, I very publicly challenged the media to... "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money." Keep in mind, I would have no cash to invest. No connections. No firsthand knowledge of the real estate market where I was going. But I would have my new system for buying real estate. And that meant none of the above mattered.

DONE

I didn't buy one property. I bought seven!

The Los Angeles Times took me up on my gutsy challenge. In just 57 hours, I had taken title to not one, but seven properties — adding $722,000 in assets to my real estate portfolio. That's the equivalent of more than $10,000 an hour.

ST. LOUIS

Challenge #2: Take someone from unemployed to over $100,000 in equity

No better example of "ANYBODY CAN DO THIS" exists than when I made another major public challenge. As you might be able to guess, I'm not shy about proving my system works. So I declared..."Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, that person will be back on his/her feet with $5,000 in the bank."

DONE

It was in St. Louis, Missouri, where I pulled a couple out of the unemployment line and placed them on the path to wealth. Within 90 days, these first-timers earned more than $5,000 in cash. But that was just getting started. For within the following 12 months, they garnered more than $100,000. It changed their lives forever. Think of how an extra $100,000 or more could change your life and improve your family's future. What dreams have you put aside that $100,000 could reawaken?

NEW YORK

Challenge #3: Prove anyone can do it

I've become famous as America's leading expert on purchasing real estate with no money down. I've been interviewed in newspaper, and on radio and TV. In fact, Regis Philbin challenged me on the spot to prove my system worked for anyone. I selected a young woman right out of Regis' studio audience and guided this first-timer to earning more than $20,000 in 90 days. And now, I'd like to pull you out of your chair and invite you to discover why my powerful and internationally acclaimed Creating Wealth with Real Estate program has been so hugely rewarding for people across the country — and why it can also be your path to substantial wealth.

DONE

Your turn to succeed

Can you become a millionaire? Dozens of my students have. At the FREE preview of my workshop, you'll see real-life examples of how my powerful wealth creation strategies have helped people jump into making money right away.

Challenge #4: Make you my next millionaire! STARTS NOW!

I've proved time and again that my system can work just about anywhere, anytime, and for just about anyone — even people who are flat broke. Now, I'd like to prove it can work for you.

In fact, my big mouth could make you a millionaire. That's because I've challenged myself to create millionaires all across America. Yup, I went right for the "M" word: millionaire. Raised a few eyebrows with that one. But remember, you don't need money in the bank to buy real estate. You don't even need good credit. All you need is my Creating Wealth with Real Estate system and the personal gumption to go out and apply it.

Now it's your turn to take a step toward real wealth

The wealth is out there. I will show you how it's possible to find it and grab it. Take a life-changing step toward financial independence for yourself and your family today. The road (it's more of a superhighway actually) to millionaire status begins right here. Right now. I'm hoping to create at least 1,000 millionaires. And I'd like to count you among them. There's no telling when the free preview of my workshop will be back in your area because it's simply impossible for me to bring my famous workshop to every city. Grab this unique opportunity to discover hidden wealth opportunities in real estate.

Bring someone you care about

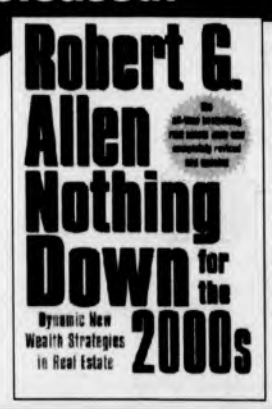
If you have a friend or family member who wants to increase their wealth, bring them to this FREE empowering event. I believe there's never been a better time to invest in real estate. Forecasts call for soaring demand for homes and rising prices. At this free event, you'll see how it's possible to ride this historic trend to personal riches.

True Stories. True Success.

"In my very first deal using one of the techniques I learned at the workshop, I made $6,000."
– Pat Wyman, California

"Since attending the workshop, I was able to buy two properties and sell them immediately for a $30,000 profit."
– Joseph Powe, South Carolina

"I've made $250,000 in real estate in about 10 months using Robert Allen's Creating Wealth with Real Estate System."
– Sharon Creel, North Carolina



"In my first-ever deal, I'm acquiring a $5.7 million, 91-unit apartment building for $4.25 million using none of my own money."
– Greg Warr, New York

"We're up over half a million dollars since attending this workshop just 18 months ago. We now have a positive cash flow of $1,500 per month, and by purchasing the right properties, we've also reduced our state and federal taxes by 70 percent. You don't need to do this 40 hours a week to create huge equities and a great positive cash flow."
– Larry Norve, Massachusetts

You will discover it's possible to:

- Buy prime real estate without a penny of your own money
- Acquire properties at below market value and put the difference in your pocket
- Profit in unexpected ways from some of the lowest mortgage rates in decades
- Generate immediate cash flow
- Turn your retirement account back into the comfy nest egg it's supposed to be
- Locate hugely lucrative properties nobody else knows about
- Find fantastic foreclosure properties before they ever hit the courthouse steps
- Build substantial monthly income

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

NOISE HURTS MORE THAN YOUR EARS

It is no secret that noise-induced hearing loss poses the biggest threat to the hearing of young and old alike. Noise in excess of 85 decibels (dB), which is approximately equal to the sound of a bulldozer at idling, can cause permanent hearing damage. This damage happens to the microscopic hair cells found inside the cochlea (inner ear), which respond to mechanical sound vibrations by sending an electrical signal to the auditory nerve. Noise of even less intensity (less than 75 dB) has been linked to hypertension, and the deleterious effect that noise has on health does not stop there. At just 65 dB, noise leads to stress, heart damage, and depression. This makes noise pollution a public health threat.

At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we believe that a hearing loss is a serious problem that deserves professional care. A hearing loss can affect your job and it makes it more difficult to meet people and enjoy social gatherings. A hearing loss can act as a barrier between you and other people. That's why Helen Keller said her hearing loss was a greater problem than her blindness. Is a hearing loss diminishing the enjoyment of your life? Perhaps it's time for a free professional evaluation here at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. While one loud, explosive noise can cause immediate hearing damage, prolonged exposure to lesser noise is cumulative and, therefore, potentially equally harmful.

School chief likes working in a small town

Took over from Malvey in July

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Superintendent of Schools Dr. Denise Walsh can hear the sound of a whistle blowing and the cheers of students, who have just scored a goal on the field outside her office window at the middle-high school. After 25 years of serving as an educator, they are sounds she has come to know well and now, she couldn't imagine being anywhere else.

"I really do feel like I've come full circle."
— Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Schools

Walsh, a former Middleborough superintendent, hadn't been looking to leave her former district.

"I was very happy," said Walsh, but the possibility of working in a small school district led her to apply for the

Firing known before hiring

Employment dispute settled

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although former Town Manager Mark Haddad hasn't been seen in Town Hall since last May, his decisions are still affecting Cohasset. Information has surfaced this week that he hired his $46,000-a-year administrative assistant knowing she had been fired from her previous job for employee misconduct.

Nicole N. Bartlett, 43, of Marshfield, has recently been charged with stealing more than $200,000 from her former employer — the Boston Children's Museum — by allegedly forging and cashing

History may settle trees' future

Selectmen want them preserved

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In an effort to preserve two large ash trees off Elm Street the Cohasset Historical Society would like to remove — the Board of Selectmen must ironically look into the history of the trees.

Town Counsel says if the board can prove the trees were planted with town funds roughly 75 years ago, a public shade tree hearing would be required before the trees could be cut down, even though they are located on private property. On the other hand, if the trees are found to be naturally occurring, Town Counsel says their fate will be the Society's decision.

However, the Society's lawyer, Richard Henderson, believes the Board of Selectmen has no jurisdiction on the matter at all because the trees are located on private property. Members of the Historical Society say in light of that finding, it will move ahead as planned with its renovation project at the Captain Wilson House and Maritime Museum, both located on Elm Street.

This is the latest chapter in an ongoing dispute about the trees that surfaced two weeks ago and continues to generate letters-to-the editor and controversy around town.

Co-President of the Historical Society Kathy O'Malley said the Society enlisted the help of two arborists to help aid in the decision. The one she spoke to said there is no doubt the trees are currently stable, but the work planned for the site would damage the trees' roots. The second arborist, which Co-President Paula Morse spoke with, said the roots of the tree closest to the Maritime Museum are currently compromised because they are on ledge and hit both the house and the sidewalk. "It makes for a less than stable situation," said Morse.

The Society maintains the trees are a hazard and, "We're going to proceed with the project," said O'Malley, which has been in the works for roughly three years.

But Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who has been very vocal about his wish to save the trees, said the trees themselves are a historical asset. He said he heard second-hand that arborist Gary Barrows said, "They'll outlive us." Dormitzer added the tree closest to the street is the last large shade tree at that end of Elm Street. If the trees are in good health, he doesn't see any reason to cut them down. "They're going to ignore the wishes of the majority of selectmen. Why would you do that?" he asked.

Since the early 1800s, the Captain Wilson House has been sustaining water damage and the Society has begun a drainage project which will re-route water away from the buildings. The maritime building is partially built on ledge, and water currently flows through the north wall, down through the south wall, and out. There will be some ledge removal necessary to re-route the

ZBA ponders KoKo Island site

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Picture hundreds of apartment dwellers heading to work in the morning converging on the same spot, at the same time along Route 3A with dozens of commuters needing caffeine fix.

Is it a recipe for disaster?

That question is on the minds of members of the Zoning Board of Appeals as they grapple with plans for redevelopment of the Koko Island-Hair Affair site into a combination family restaurant and Dunkin' Donuts with a drive-through window.

The single, entrance-exit curb cut for the business development is almost directly across the street from the proposed driveway to the future Avalon project – a 200-unit apartment complex that is permitted, pending environmental approval of its wastewater disposal system.

Thanks to the extensive review by the Planning Board that was expected to close its hearing on

REMEMBERING BROOKS

David, Molly, Taylor and Ryan Singer of Marshfield release doves at the dedication of Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset Saturday. The museum's performance center was dedicated to the Singers' son, Brooks, who died suddenly in his sleep last year before beginning his sophomore year at Marshfield High School. The Singer family has been involved with the museum, which strives to teach children about other cultures.

Cohasset Mariner to move to Friday

In two weeks your Cohasset Mariner will be arriving in your mailbox and at newsstands on Friday rather than Thursday.

This is a business decision that includes reorganized press schedules to be able to accommodate more color capability.

The process behind moving your hometown paper founded some 26 years ago in 1978 to a new day wasn't reached without considerable thought, discussion and research.

A survey of national and regional newspaper organizations revealed the move should be a seamless one.

The new day actually means an extra day for the editorial department. Everyone knows that most news happens on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. With our new day, the Cohasset Mariner will be able to provide more thorough coverage of selectmen's meetings that same week as well as timely coverage of the Planning Board and other boards that meet Wednesday night.

So while our Cohasset subscribers will have to wait one more day to receive their hometown paper – the Mariner will be better and more inclusive than ever.

We are excited about the opportunities that "picking up an extra day" can afford us. We pledge to continue to do our best to be the comprehensive paper you, our readers, have come to expect.

We continue to be committed to excellence and providing the most thorough coverage of the place you call home.

OVER 35 YEARS IN BUSINESS!

Don't let this be the last time you see your child.

They see the family car. We see life and death.

The moment you hand the car keys to your child, you are sending them into a danger zone. Car crashes are the number 1 killer of 16-20 year-olds.

Fortunately, you can protect your child with In Control Advanced Driver Training. We pick up where standard driver's education leaves off. Others teach young drivers to pass a test, we train them to drive safely. You can't afford anything less!

Reassuring you. Protecting them.

"Having seen the In Control program first hand with a group of Milton High kids, I am positively convinced that Advanced Driver Training is one of the greatest public safety initiatives to come along in a long while."

Police Advisory Council

Plans are moving ahead with forming a Police Advisory Council, Chief James Hussey said. Any residents interested in serving on the council should contact Town Manager Michael Buckley at 781-383-4105 or stop by the Selectmen's office at Town Hall.

The Police Advisory Council will include members of the police department and will look at ways to provide better community policing and communication.

CMHS students are recognized

Cohasset Middle-High School Principal Jack DeLorenzo is happy to announce many students are serving as wonderful leaders among their peers. Melody Maurer and Mary Kay Richardson have been elected to the School Council. In addition Peer Leaders, Tim Pilczak Molly Kirk, Jim DeGiacomo, Dominic Strazzulla, Peter Bunstein, Jenne Daley, Allison Dean, Christina St.Pierre, Miranda Lanzillotti, Courtney Hurley, Lauren Rizzotti Jenn Murray,Casey Anderson, Bill Carbone, Jacqui Blake, Kevin Dinsmore, Rachel Garber, Christine Lovallo, Jon Littauer, Elizabeth Stone, Lucy Gardner, Jake Kovach, Ricky Lordan, and Jon Grimm donated their time during the ninth grade outing to Camp Marist.

ASP pumpkin patch begins

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will host the Grand Opening of its Pumpkin Patch Friday, Oct. 8 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., in the North Main Street entrance of Wheelwright Park There will be cider available as well as a sea of fresh-picked pumpkins.

The Pumpkin Patch serves as the fall fund-raiser for the ASP program, which sends volunteers down to areas of Appalachia to make badly needed home repairs each year. The Patch will be open Oct. 9 through Oct. 31 from 10 a.m. until 7:30 p.m.

TM committee hires search firm

Chairman of the Town Manager Search Committee Rob Spofford said his group voted Monday in favor of hiring a third party search firm. The committee has chosen Bennett and Yarger Associates, based out of Scituate to go forward with the 10 chosen finalists, and take care of the logistics, such as conducting reference checks, which can be very time consuming.

The committee has been working diligently to narrow the 85 applications received for the town manager position down to 10. The process can now begin to contact applicants to make sure they are still interested in the opportunity.

Dick Bennett of Bennett and Yarger met with the board last week and it was impressed with what he had to say. In light of that interview, the committee decided to ask him if he would be willing to come on board even though the committee had already begun the search process. Bennett agreed and will be paid a flat fee of $8,000. He also agreed to help bring the candidates all the way through contract negotiations if the town would like.

The fee does not include the $400 charged for each background check, which will be completed for every finalist. However, the committee said it wants to participate in every aspect of the process, and will be conducting some background checks of its own. The number of finalists the town will have is still unknown, although it will be between three and five, and the cost will be factored in at a later date.

Spofford will come before the Advisory Committee next Thursday and will ask for a $10,000 reserve fund transfer to hire Bennett.

Suspect arrested in MV theft, break-ins

Cohasset Police detectives arrested Michael P. Doherty, 32, Sept. 30, at 6 First Avenue, Scituate, on five arrest warrants. An investigation conducted by Cohasset detectives resulted in charges being filed against Doherty for five motor vehicle break ins and one larceny of a motor vehicle, all of which occurred during the early morning hours Sept. 5. The vehicle, stolen from Border Street, was recovered by Scituate Police near where Doherty was staying. Doherty was also charged with four counts of larceny related to the vehicle break ins.

Correction is noted

An article in the Sept. 30 edition of the Mariner incorrectly stated the Cook Estate will bring the town 95-units closer to meeting the state's affordability threshold. While developers plan to build 95 total units of senior housing, 28 of those units will be considered affordable by state standards. The Mariner regrets the error.

What's on 'Our Town'

A repeat of Cohasset's very own cable TV show - OUR TOWN - featuring Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin will air on Thursday, Oct. 7, at 8:30 p.m. on Comcast Channel 10. Guests for this show include Cohasset's new superintendent of schools, Dr. Denise Walsh and Chairman of Cohasset's Board of Sewer Commissioners, Ray Kasperowicz. Viewers of OUR TOWN can e-mail questions for guests or provide thoughts and suggestions to ourtown@theclickstudio.com.

Selectmen to host 'long overdue' sewer forum Oct. 19

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Just as the Vice Presidential debates were getting underway Tuesday, the Board of Selectmen announced it will host a debate of its own, which many might say is long overdue. Tuesday, Oct. 19, the board has plans to hold an open sewer forum to come up with a final solution for wastewater disposal throughout the town.

With the Sewer Commission choosing a more managerial role in the sewer process through articles to be presented at the Dec. 6 Town Meeting (see related article), Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said the public policy issues which that board used to handle have been "put on our desk." He said at a time when there are many sewer issues coming together all at once, it is important to make a plan moving forward.

Avalon, Cedarmere, the Cook Estate, and Little Harbor will be the main points of discussion. The three senior housing projects have been looking to tie-in to town sewer, and for the Cook Estate, that may be the only wastewater option, as soils cannot support an on-site system, and alternate off-site plans have not panned out. However, sewer is given out on a first-come first-serve basis, and the residents in Little Harbor who have been waiting patiently may not want to see other projects step ahead in line.

A large portion of the discussion centers around capacity at the wastewater treatment plant, and Sullivan said he believes hooking up some of the senior housing projects in town could provide money through connection fees that will be able to pay to fix the infiltration and inflow problems at the plant, and make the improvements to tie-in Little Harbor. Infiltration and inflow occurs when water from outside the pipes seeps in and causes more flow to the plant that users are dispensing. Sullivan said it is his understanding that the town has paid for a state-of-the-art plant which is bringing in an unnecessary 70,000 gallons per day.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said it will be important for the board to make a list of criteria by which it will make its decisions, to ensure everyone is on the same page. He said there are a lot of current sewer problems in town and the town may have an obligation to fix the homes which are currently experiencing sewer problems before adding more development to the sewer.

In addition, Selectman Fred Koed said one of the complications with doling out sewer capacity is the fact that Little Harbor was told they're next in line, and hooking up any other project first could be a conflict However, Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she doesn't think there is a conflict because Little Harbor has capacity allocated which will become available when an expansion of the plant takes place, and their capacity is not at risk. "I don't see there's any conflict," she said.

However, Koed said if the board brings the question of giving capacity to the Cook Estate to Town Meeting, he said he believes, "Many people will vote against it."

McMorris said it will be up to the board to alleviate the concerns of residents and make them understand the town has already undertaken the Little Harbor project and has been moving toward a solution. Any new connections will not have an impact on that, she said.

Selectman Rob Spofford said moving forward, he would like to see the board hire its own engineer because from what he has heard, the Cedarmere engineers say the plant has abundant capacity and the Sewer Commission's engineers say there is very little. "Maybe we should hire our own independent third-party engineer. I am not adept enough to know who is telling me the straight answer," he said. Spofford added the board is going to be asked many questions on the floor of Town Meeting, and it needs to be prepared to answer them in laymen's terms so everyone can understand. "We need to put this to bed for the community," he said.

Sullivan said he doesn't believe there is enough capacity at the central plant to tie-in Cedarmere, the Cook Estate, Avalon and Little Harbor. He said the town needs to begin trying to negotiate capacity with Hull because that town has a capacity of 3 million gallons per day, and it only uses roughly half that amount.

However, Koed said the problem with looking to Hull for capacity is that they are looking for a good deal of money to connect. "The Sewer Commission doesn't think it's viable," he said, and added he doesn't think it's viable either.

At the Oct. 12 meeting of the board, Town Counsel will be invited in to help with the preliminary discussions regarding sewer, and Sullivan said he will try to get in touch with Jack Dawley of Northland Residential, the company the town is working with to develop the Cook Estate. Koed said it is important to have an update to ensure Cook developers have exhausted all off-site alternatives for wastewater disposal before suggesting the project can tie-in to the sewer.

Representatives from Cedarmere, Avalon, Little Harbor, the Sewer Commission, the Planning Board, and other town boards, as well as Town Counsel, will be invited to the sewer forum, slated for Oct. 19. It is anticipated the meeting will be a few hours long, and the board is hoping to set a start time for the meeting prior to its usual 7:30 p.m. meeting time. The board will decide on a meeting time within the next week.

For more information on the sewer forum, please call the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Sewer Commission grants hook-ups

The Sewer Commission voted Monday to allow 13 vacant lots in the central district to tie-in to the municipal sewer lines, but those with vacant lots waiting for a North Cohasset verdict will have to wait a little longer.

The Commission wants Town Counsel's opinion on an agreement signed with the state Department of Environmental Protection, which the commission believes dictates the hook-ups that can occur in the north district.

Commissioner John Beck said the north district was created as a result of the Second Amended Final Judgement, which ordered Cohasset to clean up pollution in certain areas of town, including around Straits Pond and other waterways. Wording in that agreement might require hook-ups are given to existing homes with on-site failure, followed by vacant lots which abut sewer lines, and then adjacent roads such as Rust Way and Old Coach Road, and, if possible, Deep Run.

Bylaw change could give voters sewer authority

But jury is out on its effect on lawsuits

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Sewer Commission approved the second of two articles it will bring before voters at Town Meeting Dec. 6. The article would change the town's current bylaws to give sole control over the three outlined sewer districts in town — the central district, north Cohasset district, and Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue district — to the commissioners.

While currently the sewer commissioners have jurisdiction – other boards often weigh in on sewer issues.

To help reduce lawsuits over sewer access, the article would also ensure any expansions of sewer districts would have to be approved by voters at Town Meeting. New separate sewer districts could also be created, but only when presented by citizens and voted in by citizens at Town Meeting.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said the intention of the bylaw change is to "take the authority away (of establishing new districts) from the Sewer Commission." In addition, it would only give the commission the authority to install sewers in established districts. Voters would be responsible for deciding where future districts and sewering will occur. In addition, he said it is an effort to "try to stop people from suing every time someone is unhappy with a decision," the board has made, he said, especially those "attacks" which come from property owners outside the district.

Richard Brooks, 68 Nichols Road, asked if the bylaw would allow Town Meeting to establish new sewer districts. For instance, he asked whether voters could decide they would like to see the Cook property as its own district. DeRensis replied yes, but added "there is a price tag for everything," and there must always be a way to pay for it. Brooks also asked whether a "No" vote to begin a satellite district could be amended on the floor of Town Meeting and overturned, and DeRensis said that wouldn't be a simple process.

However, Brooks reminded DeRensis that at last year's Town Meeting, residents early on did not vote in favor of paying one of his bills. An astute resident voted against paying the bill on purpose in order to bring the matter up again at the end of the meeting when the crowd had diminished, and at that point, the decision not to pay the bill was overturned. Brooks said he worried a similar situation could present itself in the future, where a new sewer district, which developers would have the finances to support, could be voted in at the last minute with a sparse Town Meeting crowd.

Attorney Charles Humphreys, who was attending the meeting for another matter, said as of right now, the Sewer Commission is in charge of all the sewers in town.

"You're taking away your discretion," he said, adding that if the commission is trying to avoid lawsuits, this new policy could just as easily lead to more. He said the bylaw change makes it sound like there are three districts, and "the rest of the town doesn't exist." He said it is the commission's job to oversee the sewers in town and, "You don't abdicate (that responsibility)."

Humphreys said the changes will most likely lead to more suits from residents outside the district, and Kasperowicz said the commission can be sued now.

"You can always be sued, that's the joy of getting up in the morning," said Humphreys, adding the commission can't serve only the portions of town it chooses.

Kasperowicz said he thinks if the board were a full-time commission or if they had a planner on the board, things might be different. "But we're a volunteer board."

"All it does is change who makes the policy changes," said DeRensis of the bylaw change. "You either believe in the voters of this town, or you don't. The voters are sophisticated enough to deal with issues like this," he said. In other words, Town Meeting will be given the ultimate authority over new districts and expansions.

However, Humphreys asked why the town should have elections, "If the voters can do it all," at Town Meeting. He said the bylaw will restructure town government and turn the Sewer Commission into a sewer management board. "I'm not saying your job is easy, but it's what you were elected to do," Humphreys said.

Kasperowicz said the commission is looking for a way to proceed "step-by-step," with sewer expansion, and the bylaw will enable that.

Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, suggested conducting a town vote at the ballot box for expansions or new districts because more people show up at the polls than Town Meeting. However, DeRensis said town votes are taken when money is involved, as is the case with overrides. He said if a district or expansion was approved, a town vote could decide on funding to make the expansion happen.

A Home Rule Petition, which is also expected to come before the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting, would amend the Cohasset Sewer Act to allow for "checker-boarding" of sewer districts in areas where the sewer commission deems it is necessary. The Home Rule Petition would first be approved by voters, then approved by the Legislature, and would likely take between an year and 18 months until it goes into effect.

The two Sewer Commission sponsored articles are slated to be included in the Warrant for Town Meeting, which will take place Dec. 6. The Warrant will be open Oct. 12 and closed Oct. 19. Any citizens wishing to submit an article must submit 100 signatures for citizens' petitions.

Selectmen want new firm to conduct financial audit

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen will approach the Advisory Committee next week to seek funding to hire a company to conduct an independent audit.

The town began conducting its own investigation of payroll records when charges surfaced alleging former administrative assistant Nicole N. Bartlett stole more than $200,000 from her previous employer, the Boston Children's Museum.

"There is no concern after the preliminary review, but we still want to have a third party come in," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

Sullivan said the town has historically dealt with Tucci and Roselli during routine audits. He said with the circumstances surrounding this audit, hiring a new firm might be beneficial. However, on the other hand, having a company which is familiar with the town might enable them to work more quickly because they are familiar with the process.

"Tucci and Roselli would involve less time," said Sullivan, both on their part, and as a disruption to employees. "They can come in and do their thing." However, he added on the opposite end, if for some reason the company had overlooked something in the past, "They would want to protect themselves," which might change the results the town receives.

"There is no concern after the preliminary review, but we still want to have a third party come in."

— Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she would like Sullivan and Selectman Ralph Dormitzer sit down and review with some independent auditors what they have to offer and come back to the board with an answer, but not necessarily rule out Tucci and Roselli.

However, Dormitzer said with the investigation, "Our object is to make sure nothing is wrong. In general, you do want to have someone independent come in," he said. While Dormitzer said he is happy to take a look at independent auditors, he said he would like to see Selectman Rob Spofford a part of the process due to his experience with matters such as this, adding he feels the matter is one for the entire board.

Spofford said he believes having the firm which has a history with the town conduct the audit is a "serious conflict of interest," adding the town doesn't want to put the firm in an awkward position where a relationship has already been established. "I'm surprised our auditing firm would even want to do it," he said, adding it might be prudent to ask for Town Counsel's opinion on the matter. However, he said if the board is going to hire an outside firm, which would need to be paid for with funds from the Advisory Committee, there must be a clause in the contract which says the town will not conduct any further business with the company for at least two to three years.

The board agreed to pursue hiring a new firm to conduct the audit, and Spofford said he would come before the Advisory Committee next Thursday to ask for the funding.

more than 400 checks against the museum's payroll account between October 1998 and March 2003. Haddad hired Bartlett in May of 2003, for a position which entailed overseeing both the town and school payrolls, all employee benefits, and the town and school retirement systems. If convicted, Bartlett could face up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

"I knew there were accusations, but I thought they had been investigated and were found to be untrue," said acting Town Manager Michael Buckley. "Now I know better," he said, after talking to Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Police Chief James Hussey.

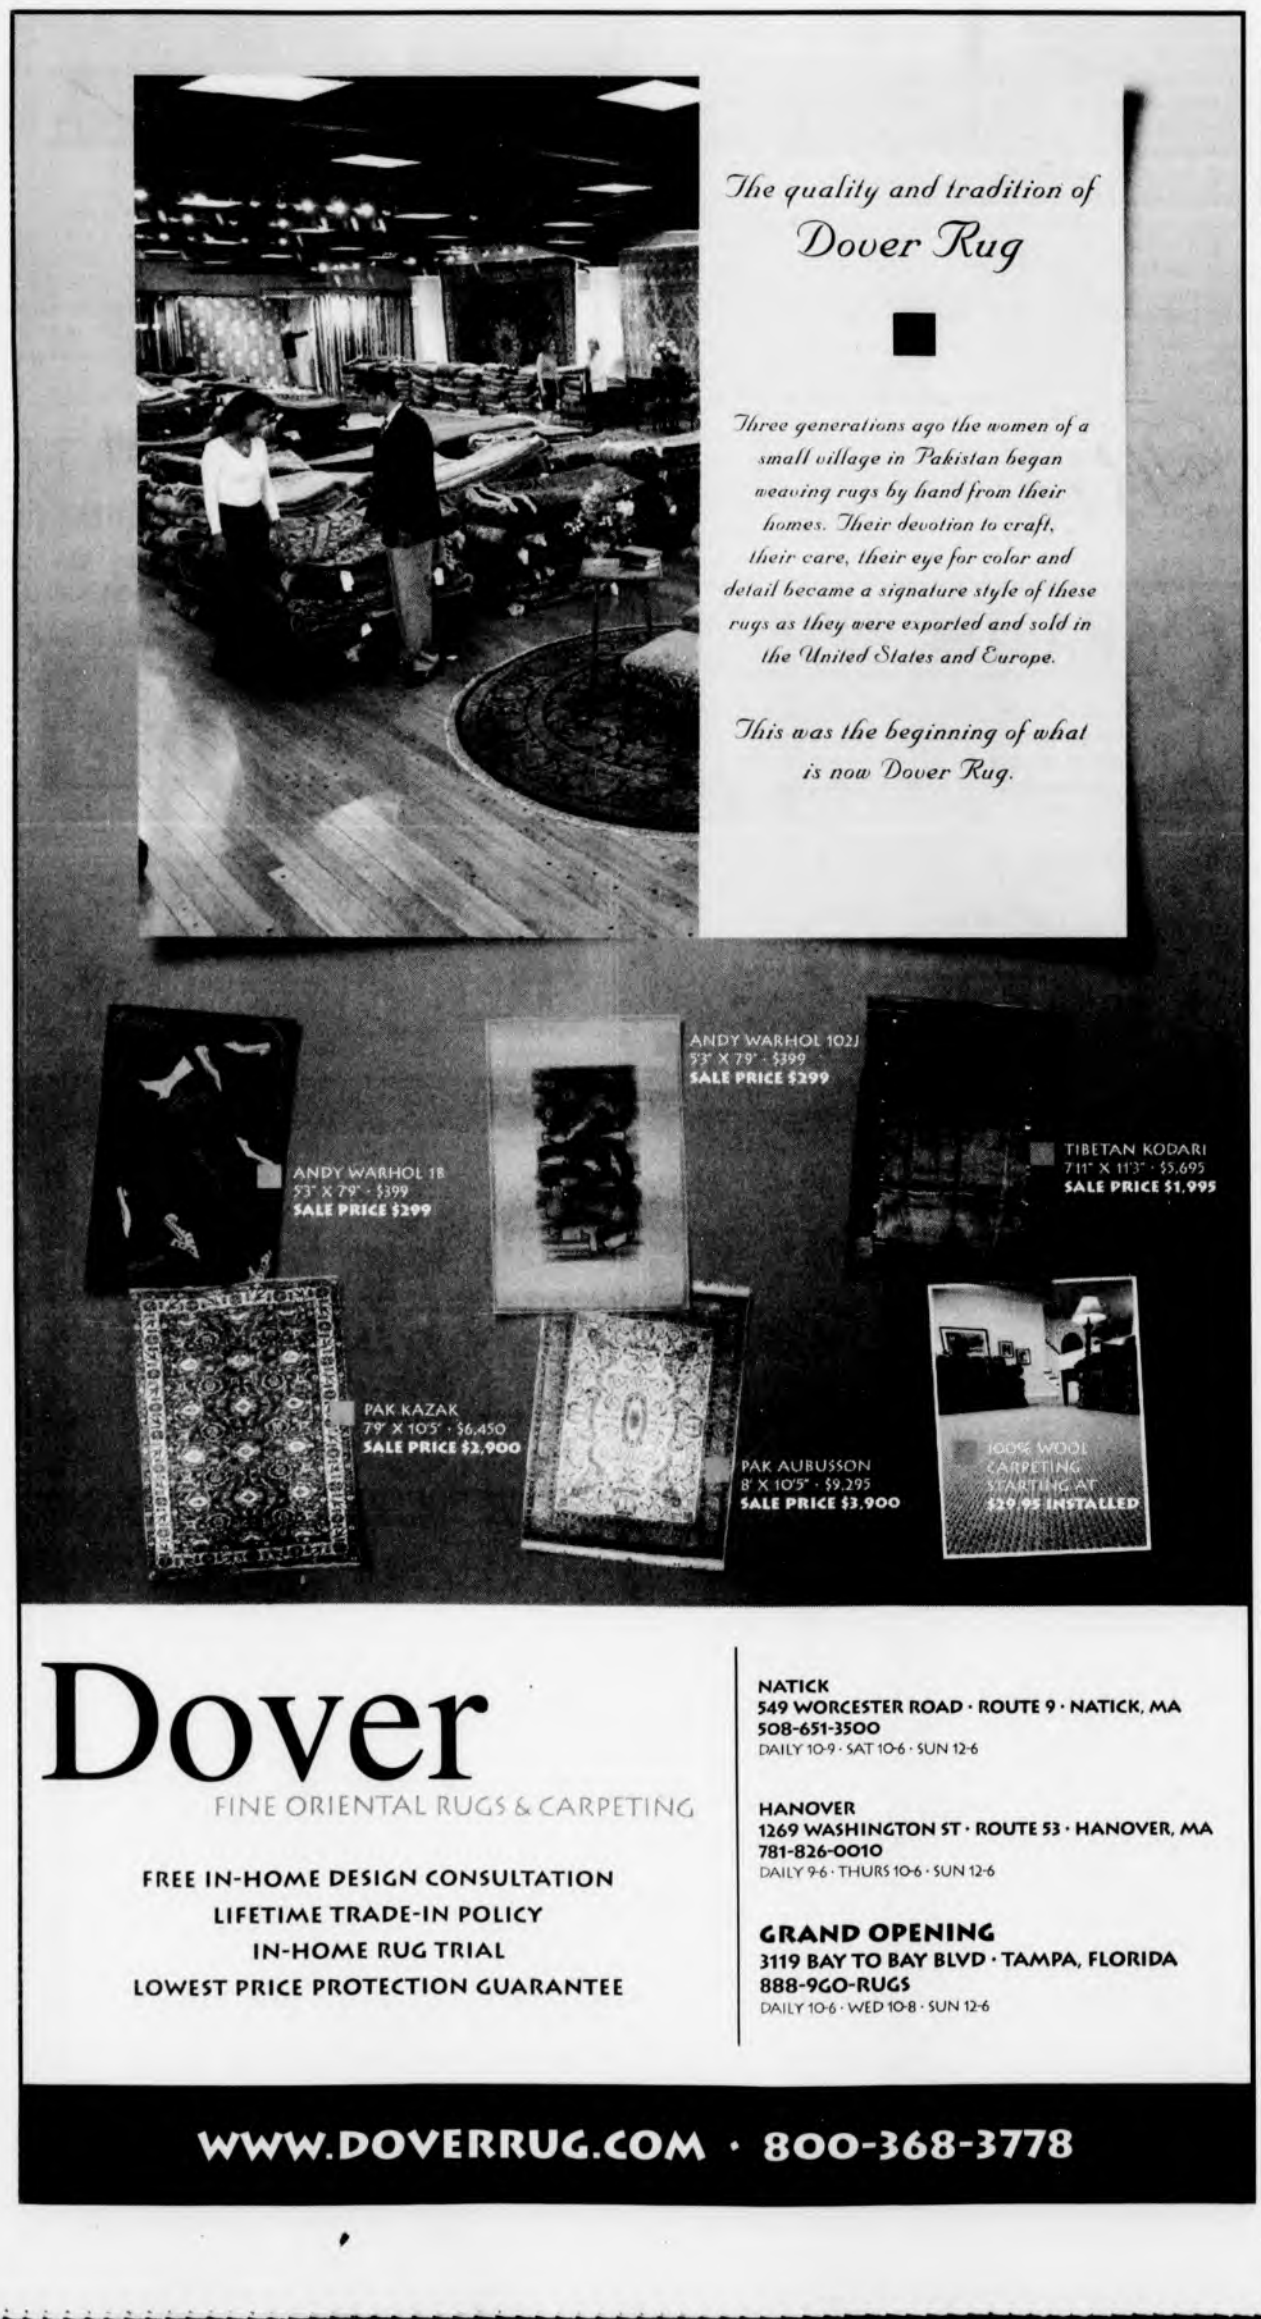
Multiple sources also confirmed the town's insurance company recently settled an employment dispute out-of-court with Bartlett, reportedly involving her manager, Haddad. While the settlement amount is not public, paying the insurance company deductible may have to be authorized by voters at this December's Special Town Meeting.

Buckley declined comment on the employment suit.

Prior to Bartlett being hired, Lennon completed a background check on her, at the request of Haddad. Hussey said as a result of that inquiry, "information was discovered that the employee had been terminated from their prior employment," although the specifics were unknown He said the information was then given to Haddad, who advised the police department he would look into her background further.

"I think it's extremely unfortunate knowing it was employee misconduct, that Mark still hired her."

— Selectman Ralph Dormitzer



However, after the information was provided, the department had nothing more to do with the matter. "The Town Manager hires, but they made him aware," said Hussey.

Hussey said generally, background checks are conducted by his department for potential police employees, including civilian workers. Hussey said the department also conducts checks for potential fire department employees. The town has requested some background checks in the past and he said he understands there may be certain positions in town government for which the town feels it needs a background check.

Bartlett resigned from her position last Monday, at which time the town decided to conduct a full audit, dating back to the time Bartlett was hired. Selectmen voted Tuesday in favor of hiring an independent company which is not familiar with the town to conduct the audit (see related story).

"I think it's extremely unfortunate knowing it was employee misconduct, that Mark still hired her," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer. However, he said what is in the past is in the past, and the town has to take a look at the issue moving forward. He said the first order of business will be to ensure there was no misappropriation of funds, and from there, "make sure it doesn't happen in the future."

Haddad abruptly resigned from his position in Cohasset May 5 citing personal reasons. He is currently one of three finalists for the Town Manager position in Abington.

Former police chief being paid

Separation agreement is still being finalized

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although Selectmen announced former Cohasset Police Chief Robert Jackson's retirement June 1 – the 25-year veteran of the department is still receiving a paycheck.

Town Manager Michael Buckley said because the town needed to retain Jackson through the transition period while new Chief James Hussey became acclimated with the new department, Jackson's salary, which Buckley said is roughly $1600 a week, has remained in tact, including five weeks vacation owed.

Buckley estimates within the next couple of weeks, Jackson will receive his last check.

"We are drafting an agreement to his employment contract," said Buckley, explaining the document is really a separation agreement. He said when an employee in Jackson's position retires, it is not uncommon practice for a town to sign such an agreement, "to make a clean break."

When Jackson's retirement was announced, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said Jackson had agreed to stay on part-time to offer support when necessary to the interim chief. At that point, it was estimated Jackson would be needed for about one month, and could then enter into his retirement years.

Jackson, 56, was named chief in February of 2002 after a grueling search process that eventually narrowed down a field of more than 54 candidates to four. Jackson was sworn in that March to replace chief Brian Noonan who retired after serving the town for 28 years. Jackson was the only local finalist for the job.

Jackson experienced a rocky last year at the helm of the small-town police force which has been riddled with controversy. Two officers who crossed paths with members of his family were placed on paid administrative leave last October, but returned back to work July 1.

At the time Jackson's retirement was announced, Sullivan said Jackson's departure was not connected to the two officers. In addition, two former dispatchers filed sexual harassment lawsuits and the former animal control officer, who reported to Jackson, is also suing the town claiming unfair termination.

Jackson's retirement also came on the heels of an abrupt resignation from former Town Manager Mark Haddad, who cited personal reasons when leaving his position last May.

Buckley said the employment agreement is expected to be signed soon, once Town Counsel finalizes some remaining details. Buckley said once it is complete, the agreement will become a public document.

Detergent use unlikely cause of septic system problems

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Just like any family – the Cifrinos of 792A Jerusalem Road across from the Greek Church don't want to think about what happens when wastewater reaches their septic system. They just want the septic system to do what it's supposed to do.

But unlike households with old, failing systems – the Cifrinos' system is new and state-of-the-art and should do the job. But it isn't.

There's no "lemon-law" for septic systems, which are installed in the ground. In other words, you can't easily return them.

Numbers from regular testing of the Cifrinos' system continue not to meet Board of Health standards. That ongoing situation put the couple before the Board of Health Monday (Sept. 13) where board members tried to figure out what could be causing the breakdown.

"This has been a nightmare," said Jane Cifrino about numbers indicating suspended solids and nitrogen levels that are above the allowed limits, keeping the septic system out of compliance.

There are no easy answers. With the engineer who designed the system and the installer present, the Board of Health enumerated scenarios that included potential leaks, contamination from fertilizers, and water purification back flow as potential culprits.

Leaving no stone unturned, the Board of Health quizzed Mrs. Cifrino about what detergent products she uses; the board also asked if she used ammonia.

She said she stopped using drop in tablets for the toilet tanks. She uses bleach-based cleaner for the bathroom; she uses "All free" for laundry; Pine Sol; Cascade, Dawn and Downey softener.

The list raised no red flags for the Board of Health, which explained that surfactants in detergents – that loosen soil – can be problematic in septic systems that breakdown solids biologically.

The engineer plans to conduct more tests, including installing a flow meter on the Cifrinos' well to see how much water goes into the system and will report back to the Board of Health.

The Board of Health requires regular testing of the alternative septic systems to make sure they are working properly.

The Cifrinos, who live in a newer house, have a FAST Wastewater Treatment System, which uses friendly organisms in the inner aerated media chamber to digest the wastewater and turn it into clear, odorless effluent, according to the company's Web site. FAST is an acronym for Fixed Activated Sludge Treatment.

Samantha Liberty has her hair cut to help other children

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

BACK TO SCHOOL HAIRCUT

Samantha Liberty knew she wanted to get a haircut before school started, she also knew that she wanted to donate her hair to Locks of Love.

Two questions, did she have enough hair to donate? And could she still put her hair up for cheerleading?

Her hair dresser, Kim at Joanna's House of Beauty in Hingham, said yes to both questions. So on Sept. 7 off came 11 ins. of Samantha's beautiful strawberry blonde hair.

Samantha is 12 and in the sixth-grade at the middle-high school.

Locks of Love is an organization that provides wigs for children who suffer from medical hair loss. To learn more about Locks of Love, which helps both boys and girls, visit: www.locksoflove.com

NEWCOMERS CLUB

It's not too late to join Newcomer's! The Scituate/Cohasset Newcomer's Club is still accepting applications for the 2004-2005 season. You don't have to be new! Catch up with old friends and make new ones in a year filled with parties and events. Membership forms can be found at the Scituate or Cohasset libraries, the South Shore Community Center, or www.scnewcomers.com. For general membership information call Jen Harris at 544-3910.

Looking for a playgroup? The Newcomer's club organizes weekly playgroups to help moms, dads, or caregivers get out once a week and make new "adult-size" and "tot-size" friends! Playgroups include a weekly meeting at a different house each week and seasonal events and parties throughout the year. Playgroups are scheduled to begin in mid-October. It's not too late to sign up!

Please send in a membership form found at the Scituate or Cohasset libraries, South Shore Community Center, or at www.scnewcomners.com. For membership questions, please call Jen Harris at 544-3910.

CALL IT A WRAP

It's time to call it a wrap! The Cohasset PSO would like to thank everyone for your support and generosity with the Innisbrook Giftwrap fundraiser! Be sure all forms have been completed, money collected and returned to your school today, Oct. 7. Please do not collect sales tax and be sure all checks are made out to the Cohasset PSO. If you miss today's deadline, be sure to send it in on the last extension date of Oct. 12 (so that the PSO can have a delivery before the holidays). The PSO looks forward to making this a successful fundraiser — thanks to you!! If you have any questions, please contact Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125.

HAUNTED TOUR HELPERS

Looking for haunted tour volunteers: Do you love Halloween, want to have fun & help kids at the same time? The Magical Moon Foundation and the Cohasset Dramatic Club are looking for teen and adult men and women to volunteer to act as characters from popular movies and scary stories at their Halloween/Harvest Festival to benefit the "Magical Moon Foundations Children's Cancer Project." The event will take place on Saturday, Oct. 30, at Donna Green's Marshfield far. Organizers are looking for sea captains, pirates, mermaids, ghosts, goblins, witches, hobbits, assorted creatures of the night and Harry Potter/Johnny Depp types. Please contact Jean at 617-750-8987 to learn more and for time and location of orientation meeting.

Historical Society dinner to feature Michael Tougias

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual meeting and fall dinner on Oct. 24 at the Cohasset Harbor Inn. The event will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a cash bar followed by a buffet dinner.

The speaker for the evening will be author Michael Tougias who will give a slide and lecture presentation on "King Phillips Indian War in New England". Tougias will discuss the Indian way of life, Colonial settlements and the events leading up to the war as well as the battles and strategies employed during this disastrous conflict.

Michael Tougias

Reservations should be made prior to Oct. 15 by calling the Historical Society headquarters at 781-383-1168.

Tougias is the author of 15 books about New England's history and natural history and received recognition by the Independent Publishers when his book "There's a Porcupine In My Outhouse" was named "Best Nature Book of 2003".

The cost of the dinner and lecture is $31 for Historical Society members and $36 for non-members. The buffet dinner will consist of mixed green salad, herb roasted chicken with a garlic herbed jus, penne pasta with a plum tomato sauce and cheese, seasonal fresh vegetable and apple crisp with vanilla ice cream for dessert. Also included is a cheese and fruit platter to start and coffee or tea.

Reservations should be made prior to Oct. 15 by calling the Historical Society headquarters at 781-383-1168. Checks, payable to the Cohasset Historical Society, may be mailed to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. Please include your name, phone number and address as well as the number of attendees. Since this is a buffet dinner, no menu selection is required.

Arts and crafts for grades K-2

Cohasset Recreation is accepting telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for Arts and Crafts, scheduled to begin for grades K-2, on Monday, Oct. 18.

The fee for this 5 week program, which meets directly after school until 4:30 p.m. on Monday's, is $50 per child. Becky McArthur will instruct this program.

Cohasset native tackles Mae West role

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

If you'd like a crash course in learning about "Who Was Mae West," try playing the legendary filmand stage actress in a theatre production.

That's what it's been like for Cohasset-raised actress Caroline deLima, who will star as the original Diamond Lil in Norwell's Company Theatre production of "Dirty Blonde," Claudia Shear's semi-biographical play portraying Mae West in a modern context which became a sleeper hit when it debuted on Broadway in 2000.

The Company Theatre's presentation, directed by Peter A. Carey, opens tomorrow (Friday, Oct. 8) and runs through Oct. 24, with evening performances on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays and afternoon shows on Sundays.

deLima, who has been in two previous Company Theatre productions, admitted that she knew little about West before taking on the well talked-about role. But, she assured, once readings and rehearsals got underway, she got a fast brushing-up on the life and persona of the late, influential film actress that only increased her interest and appreciation.

"I got a call a few months ago from the higher-ups at the Company Theatre, and since I'd worked with them before they asked if I might be interested in playing the lead in this upcoming production of a show based on the life of Mae West," deLima said. "I'd heard of the 'Dirty Blonde' production on Broadway and of Mae West, but I had very sketchy information about he life and career and who she was.

"Since being cast though, I've done a lot of research to find about (West), who she was and what made her so famous, partly to prepare for the role and partly for my own personal interest. I read some books and magazine articles and watched some old film clips. I found her to be just an amazing character, almost like a force of nature on the screen. She had an amazing way of delivering a line, it was so real and natural and she showed it in a way that she didn't apologize, because by nature she was just a very sexual being."

The curtain rises tomorrow (Friday) on the Company Theatre's production "Who Was Mae West," starring Cohasset's Caroline deLima.

"She had an amazing way of delivering a line, it was so real and natural and she showed it in a way that she didn't apologize, because by nature she was just a very sexual being."

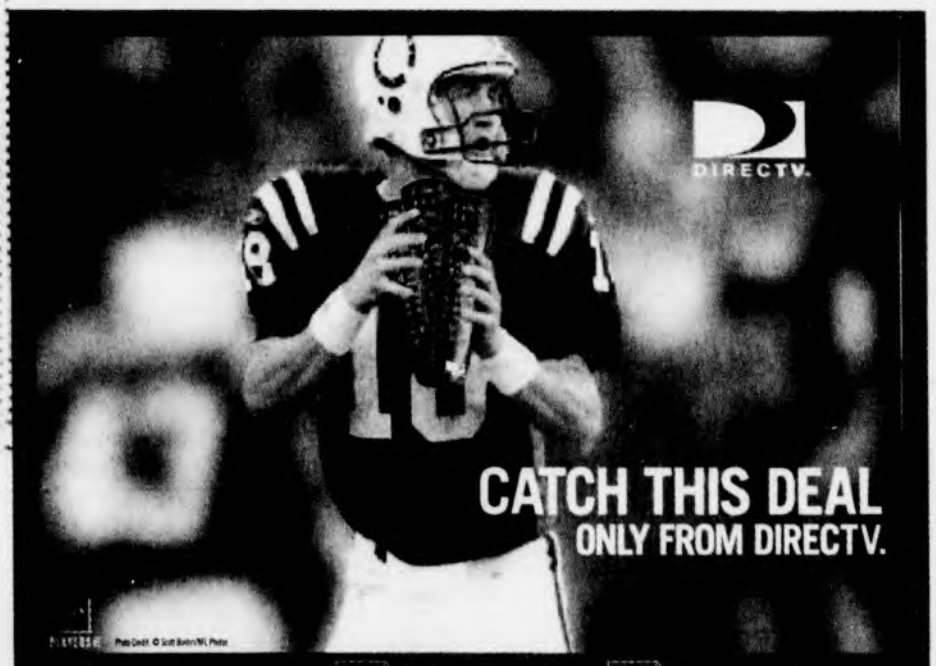
— Caroline deLima

West, who passed away in 1980, was famous for perfecting the stage and screen persona of sultry, nonchalant sexuality, with languid delivery of suggestive, double-entendre charged dialogue. She conveyed this persona first in repertory and vaudeville in the early 1900s, later on the Broadway stage in the 1910sand 20s before bringing the provocative act to films in the 30sand later, in such classics as "She Done Him Wrong," "I'm No Angel" and "My Little Chickadee," which she co-wrote and co-starred in with W.C. Fields.

Ultimately, West is the original model of virtually every blonde starlet who has followed her in the decades of show business, an influence on everyone from Jean Harlow and Marilyn Monroe to Bette Midler and Madonna.

"Dirty Blonde" parallels the life of West with that of a contemporary woman in a romantic relationship. The play features a wry and funny script with lots of recognizable West one-liners (such as the title line, "I was born platinum, but I made myself a dirty blonde"), plus some true-to-character vaudeville musical numbers.

"It's a very challenging role, because I'm playing not only Mae West but also the modern woman character in two parallel story lines. The script has a lot of flashbacks and flash forwards demanding a lot of quick costume changes. But I think Peter (Carey) ran a fun audition and made me feel at ease in the role. He deserves a lot of praise," deLima said.



deLima's other two Company Theatre appearances were in "Cabaret" as Sally Bowles and "Hair" as Sheila. Her most recent work was on the Boston Common this summer as Margaret in Commonwealth Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing," after she spent most of last year as an original cast member of Gloucester Stage Company's 'Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," first in Gloucester and then at the Stuart Street Second Stage.

deLima grew up in Cohasset and graduated from Milton Academy in 1996. She then earned a degree in theatre from Indiana State University and has joined Actors Equity since moving back to Boston three years ago. She also currently finds work as a nanny during day hours. In her next onstage appearance, deLima plans to share the spotlight with her mother. Sarah deLima, who is also a semi-pro actress. The two will perform together sometime in the fall in the concert musical "Strike Up the Band," presented by American Classics productions.

Jerry White guest of honor at dinner

St. Stephen's to make parish hall accessible

Jerry White and American landmine survivor, co-founder and executive director of the Landmine Survivors Network in Washington, D.C., will be the guest of honor at a gala dinner at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., on Oct. 16, at 6 p.m.

The dinner is to celebrate the beginning of a campaign to make Saint Stephen's parish hall accessible to anyone with a physical disability. The campaign also aims to create a Memorial Garden as a contemplative setting and, for some, a final resting place for interment of ashes.

The theme of the campaign, from the Gospel of Matthew, is : "Come Unto Me."

White, 40, a native of Cohasset, became disabled while visiting Israel in April 1984 as a junior at Brown University. Hiking on the Golan Heights, he and two friends unknowingly ventured into an unmarked minefield to camp for the night. The next morning White stepped on a land mine and lost his right foot. In 1997 he co-founded Landmine Survivors Network.

Since then, White has testified before Congress and published articles in the New York Times, Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, Christian Science Monitor and International Herald Tribune.

"We're in the business of putting things back together again and giving an opportunity for people to get back into the game," White says.

Saint Stephen's "Come Unto Me" campaign is also to ensure that those who have physical disabilities can participate fully, "get into the game," into the life of the community.

White stepped on a land mine in Israel and lost his right foot. In 1997 he co-founded Landmine Survivors Network.

There are many in our community, including parishioners, elderly and others with either temporary or permanent disabilities, for whom stairs are a serous obstacle. Saint Stephen's has been home for more than 20 years to the Social Service League of Cohasset with its Meals on Wheels program and other community organizations including Girl Scouts and Alcoholics Anonymous. Saint Stephen's is acutely aware of the need for elderly guests to be able to attend wedding receptions and to have access to the hall on the second floor for community meetings and events such as the annual Village Fair.

The "Come Unto Me" campaign will enable construction of an annex in which an elevator will access the several levels of the building plus the creation of a Memorial Garden for quiet and response. The goal is to ensure the right of all to participate fully in the life of the community. If you would like to support, in any way, access for all at Saint Stephen's, call the church office at 781-383-1083.

Register to vote by Oct. 13

Wednesday, Oct. 13, will be the last day to register to vote in the upcoming Nov. 2 election. Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office Oct. 13, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a Town Meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Because of a new federal law, the Help America Vote Act of 2002 passed by Congress; voters who register for the first time by mail will be required to show identification when they vote for the first time in a federal election. Those voters may either mail a copy of their identification to the Town Clerk's office with their voter registration form or they will be required to show it when they vote on Election Day.

Acceptable identification must include the voter's name and the address at which they are registered to vote, for example: a current and valid photo identification, current utility bill, bank statement, paycheck, government check or other document showing the voter's name and address.

Diversity Committee sponsors free speaker series starting on Nov. 10

The Cohasset Diversity Committee, a part of the Cohasset Parent School Organization, announces a number of events planned for the next five months. In response to the request to expand its programming and outreach to members of the adult Cohasset community, the Diversity Committee will sponsor a fall and early winter speaker series as well as a second International Day Party.

During its first 10 years, the Diversity Committee focused on being a resource for the public schools — students, parents, and staff. Existing and new programs that facilitate the understanding of diverse needs and respect for differences have been its principal focus.

International tensions and specific recent events have convinced the Committee to provide forums to engage the entire Cohasset community around issues and opportunities of diversity. The programs have all been suggested by local residents in response to questionnaires and conversations about what would interest them. Local residents will serve as panelists and discussion leaders.

Local residents will serve as panelists and discussion leaders.

The programs will take place on the second Wednesday evening of the month, from 7:30 – 9 p.m.

• On Nov. 10, several speakers will discuss how the United States and other countries are dealing with a common domestic and global policy problem: the control, treatment, prevention, and consequences of the AIDS pandemic. Health care, social, financial, governmental, and cultural issues may be addressed.

• On Wednesday, Dec. 8, the Diversity Committee will present a program about international arts and culture. The speaker will present some ideas about common and diverse trends. The evening will feature a presentation, background music, and extra festivity in keeping with the holidays.

• The subject for Wednesday, Jan. 12 is a discussion about how different customs affect the way people relate to one another. How easy is it to fit in to Cohasset, when you are from another country, or another culture, if you sound or look different from the majority? How can a welcoming environment be created, so that everyone feels valued for his or her differences?

• On March 9, facilitators from the Diversity Committee will join with a group of local residents to explore, in a group discussion with the attendees, the subject: How is the United States perceived in the world today? How can the United Nations and similar organizations provide opportunities for all nations to come to the table as equals? How much can or should individuals do to foster respect for a diversity of cultures, traditions, and priorities?

At each event, the audience will be asked to be part of the program. The speakers and presenters will serve to get the discussion started. These are not lectures.

Venues and specific speakers and panelists will be announced. There will be no charge for participation. Light refreshments will be served.

For further information, contact a member of the Diversity Committee subcommittee on the Speakers Series: Kathryn Earle, (781) 383-0061 or kbearle@aol.com; or Chartis Tebbetts, (781) 383-1662 or c-etebbetts@comcast.net.

OPINION

Redeveloping Route 3A

A look a the attractive architect's rendering of the proposed redeveloped KoKo Island site of Route 3A and one has to wonder where the same scrutiny was 40 or 50 years ago when much of the commercial property that stretches all along the state highway in Cohasset was built.

It's no understatement to say KoKo Island plans are a huge improvement over existing conditions and show how 3A is undergoing a renaissance of mega proportions.

We applaud the thorough — and yes, grueling — review process this project faced under the careful eye of the Planning Board and now, the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The end result is going to be a first-class site that has exceeded standards for noise and air pollution and will provide plenty of landscaping and screening for neighbors.

Safety and traffic issues have also been addressed.

When one thinks of what we love the most about Cohasset – 3A doesn't necessarily come to mind. We like to talk about a rocky coastline with spectacular views of Minot Light or the rural, small-town character of the Beechwood section of town.

Route 3A has in some areas become an "eyesore." But as 3A undergoes its transformation that will include a commuter train station, there is an opportunity to make sure we don't repeat the problems of the past.

Route 3A is the "gateway" to town. It's the way most people get here. It's a shame that much of the highway business district looks like it needs a facelift.

KoKo Island developers are dedicated and serious about transforming their site. The aesthetic improvements alone are going to create a pleasing oasis and hopefully, will start a trend. We hope more landlords will consider upgrading their properties.

Although they are being held to a high standard, KoKo Island developers are not the first nor are they alone in having to endure an often long, tedious and expensive approval process. Other star projects include Cohasset Plaza, Shaw's Plaza, Hingham Lumber, Cohasset Collision, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Sunrise Assisted Living, and the two brick office buildings near Crocker Lane, to name a few.

Yet much of the highway still looks "tired." Route 3A's commercial development is vital to the economic well being of Cohasset. Handsome, well planned redevelopment is a win-win. It will make the roadway more pleasing to the eyes and more attractive to new business.

Thanks to an extensive review process and strong zoning bylaws, the future of 3A is looking brighter every day.

Concern about effects over proposed windmill

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to voice my concern over a proposal in Hull to build a 330-foot windmill at the site of the town's former landfill. The problem is that this location is right in the middle of one of the state's designated Areas of Environmental Concern and right in the heart of the Weir River Estuary.

While I applaud the town of Hull for pursuing wind power, there are several unanswered questions about this plan. The town appears to be on a fast track — Hull voters are scheduled to vote on this proposal at a special town meeting on Oct. 14. Yet, I don't believe any testing has been done on the impact this structure would have on this delicate environment or the impact it will have on the wildlife in this area.

This is a location where the fewest number of Hull residents will see the windmill, but I'm very concerned about the impact this structure will have on the area. At 330-feet tall, this structure will tower over the estuary. It will be approximately 100 feet higher than the existing windmill in Hull. This proposed windmill is higher than the Statue of Liberty, and that seems like nothing to take lightly.

What factors were used to determine what height would be appropriate? What are the average sustained wind speeds at this location? What are the species who will be impacted by this structure's size, speed, and noise? How will this windmill change the migratory patterns of the area's many birds, such as the Osprey, Great Blue Heron, Snowy Egrets, Cormorants, Mergansers, Swans, and Buffleheads? These are just a few of the birds who call this area their home.

When I spoke to about 20 of my neighbors, not one had heard anything about this proposal. It just made me wonder who else is not aware of Hull's plan?

I want to be sure the necessary tests are done to ensure the Weir River is adequately protected. This seems to be an issue that should be a concern to more than just Hull's residents since we will all be living with their decision.

Save the trees at Society's museums

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Historical Society intends to destroy a huge old, beautiful and healthy and historic ash tree in order to provide wheelchair access to the Maritime Museum. They intend to destroy a second tree located between the Maritime Museum and the Captain John Winslow House in the course of work to be done on the foundation. The loss of these trees will leave the very center of the village relatively barren.

I feel there are many reasons to leave these trees alone.

• The big tree close to the entrance to the Maritime Museum adds immensely to your perception of age and history as you enter the building. Even young children can literally feel the time it takes for a tree to grow that large. Isn't a sense of history about feeling time and our place in it? I especially love how you must almost rub shoulders with this tree as you enter the building. What a perfect welcome to a historic place! We should honor this tree, not destroy it.

• Most of us are aware of tropical rainforests being devastated in South America and Indonesia, aware of old growth forests being clear-cut in the Pacific Northwest, aware of Julia Butterfly Hill living in a giant redwood for over a year to protect it. Julia has since become a cultural hero, especially for youth. But we feel helpless to do anything about those faraway trees. Now two fine old trees in the center of Cohasset are threatened, and we are not helpless to protect them. We can speak out, contact the Historical Society, plead with them to find another way to provide wheelchair access. The trees are not dangerous villains set upon destroying buildings or people.

• There are alternative ways of providing wheelchair access to the buildings. As an architect I rarely find a design problem with only one solution. On the contrary, the difficulty is usually narrowing down a wide variety of solutions. I refuse to believe no other solutions are possible except destroying these trees.

• These elder trees are not "big weeds" any more than elder humans in Cohasset are big weeds, although they too are sometimes treated as if they are and shuffled off to senior housing. These elder trees are a part of the history of Cohasset.

I urge you to take a walk by the Maritime Museum and see these trees for yourself. If you feel they should be saved, contact the Cohasset Historical Society, P. O. Box 627, Cohasset, Ma 02025, phone 781-383-1434, e-mail tlg@copper.net

Men's breakfast club welcomes newcomers

TO THE EDITOR:

The Chanticleer Men's Breakfast Club meets each Wednesday at 8.45 in the attractive top floor function room of the Red Parrot restaurant in Hull overlooking the ocean.

We welcome newcomers who are retired, male, and would enjoy fellowship and an excellent breakfast buffet with multiple choices. There are no other requirements; all one needs do is show up by 8.45 a.m. Wednesday.

We generally break up between 10.30 and 11, after some story-telling and lighthearted discussion; good fellowship is the ambiance. The cost is $10. For further information please call me at 781-545-0695.

Current attendance is about 30; members are from several towns in the area. The backgrounds and interests of our members covers a broad spectrum. Occasionally evening dinners or day trips are organized by those members who are interested.

Heartfelt appreciation

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to commend the following personnel for their professionalism, caring and dedication in their job for the citizens of Cohasset.

Lt. Tom Finegan, Firefighter/EMT Eric Wenzlow, Firefighter/Paramedic Sharon Leone, Firefighter/Paramedic Dan Smith and Patrolman Shelly Peters.

This past Friday morning, I had an experience that required immediate medical attention. They were at my side in less than three minutes. They were totally in control of the situation. I was naturally concerned, and they were a calming influence during this occasion. I was transported to South Shore Hospital by Dan Smith and Sharon Leone, and during that trip their professionalism again showed through.

We are very fortunate to have such dedicated people working for our town.

ASP at it again

TO THE EDITOR:

It's hard to believe the summer is over and it's ASP time again. On Sunday, Sept. 17, the registration meeting was held at Second Congregational Church. It was wonderful to see so many old and new faces.

Please make sure to get all applications in by Oct. 1. Space is limited and there will be a waiting list. If you need an application, they are available online at: www.cohasse-tasp.org.

Also, Oct. 9, marks the beginning of the second annual Pumpkin Patch Extravaganza. This year's event will include hayrides, storytelling, and much more fun for the entire family.

Please check here for weekly updates on Cohasset's 18th ASP year. Important dates and fundraisers will be highlighted as well as information about the project, and even stories and pictures from our volunteers, past and present.

Thank you, Cohasset, for your continuing support of the Appalachia Service Project!

HEALTH NOTES

Town has a plan to manage septic systems

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Two weeks ago, I began what has become a series on one of the primary occupations at the Board of Health: that of dealing with water in all of its aspects and conditions. By far most important and time consuming part of this activity – certainly for Tara Tradd, our overworked and understaffed Health Office Administrator who keeps track, not only of the Board's septic system oversight, but also the Sewer Department's activities — is the management of wastewater. In the first article we talked about the problems of both storm water and wastewater in Cohasset's rocky soil. However, in truth, storm water can sicken and ruin our ponds and estuaries, but wastewater can sicken our people and pets. So, obviously, the first priority must be with proper management of wastewater. Therefore, this week we're going to discuss the new revised Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan (CWMP).

The CWMP finds its roots in a court order imposed some 20 years ago on the Town for violation of the EPA's Clean Water Act. At the time, the thrust of the state was to clean up its waters; Boston Harbor, the Charles, and Cohasset's Little Harbor clam flats. Accordingly, the state wanted the Town to expand its sewer system to the homes around Little Harbor. Since that time, much has changed, but the thrust has continued to be that the Town should increase its attention to better management of its wastewater.

The CWMP really has two parts: Its first four paragraphs try to explain the relationship between the Sewer Commission and the Board of Health with its State required storm-water management. Actually, the Sewer Department, having a substantial infrastructure interconnected in the ground must have considerably more detailed plans, diagrams, staff, and coordination than needed with on-site wastewater management. Depending on population density, sewers can therefore be more expensive, or less, than on-site systems. But the natural inclination, where sewers are considered is to group so-called dwelling units as close together as possible to reduce connection costs. The natural inclination for on-site systems is to spread dwellings out to make use of the area for leaching fields. In most areas of Cohasset, sewers tend to be marginally more expensive than on-site systems. For purposes of processing wastewater it is now generally accepted that either sewers or on-site are a satisfactory and permanent solution depending on location, design and population density factors.

At the time of signing, an inspection will be made and, if a new septic system is needed to meet State Title 5 requirements, the Town will pay half the cost, and the homeowner will pay the other half using a low interest loan over 20 years.

The rest of the CWMP deals with a new and equitable way to manage wastewater both sewer and on-site. First, the Sewer Department's home rule petition will allow those wishing to have sewers to get approval therefor at Town Meeting. Sewers have traditionally been supported by some sort of cost sharing between the Town and the individual; also decided at Town Meeting. With the objective of equitability in mind, the CWMP has been modified to a program which will permit homeowners and businesses to sign a contract with the Town that, for a fee, the Town will inspect, upgrade and maintain their wastewater system.

At the time of signing, an inspection will be made and, if a new septic system is needed to meet State Title 5 requirements, the Town will pay half the cost, and the homeowner will pay the other half using a low interest loan over 20 years. Participation in the Plan is conditional on the property owner using due care in the use of the system.

If a repair, replacement or upgrade of a system is necessary, the Board will prepare a plan for the work. It will present that plan to the property owner for approval in the context of the usual Title 5 hearing process. If the property owner objects to the plan (either as to design or location), the property owner may secure his/her own plan and submit it to the Board for approval within 30 days. To also insure the integrity of the revolving enterprise fund, the Board is not obligated to put forth the most expensive design or most desired location possible, but instead may put forth a design and choose a location on site that achieves Title 5 and local regulation compliance at the least possible cost. If the Board is willing to accept the property owner's alternative plan, but the cost of such plan exceeds that of the Board's plan, the property owner shall be responsible for the additional cost. For a complete copy of the CWMP contact the Board of Health.

Don't give sewer capacity to developers

COMMENTARY

RICARD BROOKS

On Aug. 10, I submitted a letter to the editor of the Mariner for publishing. The focus of that letter was why, as a couple of town officials were proposing, the town could not and should not allocate previous sewer capacity to commercial developers for proposed, new housing projects and thereby, in spite of their denials, abandoning sewer commitments to thousands of existing, tax-paying residents who have been waiting for many years for sewer tie-in and all the while paying for that capacity via real estate taxes. Unfortunately, my letter of Aug. 10 was not published due to newspaper space limitations.

However, as I predicted in that letter based on my long experience and professional credentials, I note that one of those developers has now "discovered" technology that will allow the developer to provide "on-site" wastewater treatment, rather than demanding, via a filed lawsuit, unavailable sewer capacity from the town. I am also convinced that the Cook Estate project can and will provide on-site wastewater treatment once they realize that existing, taxpaying homeowners will not tolerate nor support any "free lunch" of sewer capacity going to ineligible, for-profit, commercial housing developers at the expense of diverting that taxpayer-funded capacity away from existing, long waiting residents.

I noted in my letter that these same town officials have committed, under a long-standing Superior Court Order against the town, to finally move to comply with that order by sewering that portion of town that is the principal source of the pollution in violation of the Federal Clean Water Act. If the capacity is given away to developers, I can assure you that as a consequence the state Attorney General and the DEP will shortly thereafter most likely levy non-compliance fines against the town in an amount of $10,000 per day for reneging on the compliance Plan and Schedule submitted to the court this past February. Frankly, as a technical professional and a nationally honored environmental businessman, I am appalled and embarrassed at the lack of good faith and "games" that our town officials have been playing over the years to avoid compliance with cessation orders to stop polluting our precious coastal waters, let alone risking the health of our citizens, especially our children, due to the prevalence of obsolete and openly failed septic systems in major areas of the town.

The bottom line here is that commitments by town officials to thousands of existing residents, approved by Town Meeting voters, cannot be abandoned and cast aside!

The two paragraphs that follow below have been extracted verbatim from my unpublished Aug. 10 letter and I include them in this letter to reinforce my prior conclusions that on-site wastewater treatment can be used for the proposed housing projects once the prospects for a "free lunch" have been withdrawn:

"Cohasset may gain some small but needed 'senior' housing benefits and increased tax base if either of these projects go forward under the 'for-profit' developers involved. However, no free lunches are available at the expense of the thousands of existing residents of Cohasset, including the 440 senior citizens who currently reside in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Ave. Sewer District, let alone the other districts, who have been growing old waiting for years, indeed decades, for sewer service and all those years paying taxes that built the Central Treatment Plant and much of the collection sewer lines. Each of these new housing projects can apparently move ahead fairly promptly if the developers involved will simply redo their sums and pay to have the required, on-site wastewater treatment systems installed. A vast array of new and old technologies can be chosen from — whatever it takes to comply with our environmental regulations. As Nike advocates, 'just do it'! Further, as an experienced, professional engineer, based on the information I have seen relative to the testings for an on-site wastewater treatment system for the Cook Estate proposed housing, I believe an on-site system is feasible and practical and I predict that such a system will be 'discovered' and installed by the developer once the 'no sewer' ruling is confirmed and accepted as reality. I sense part of the acceptance problem here is that the concept of sewering the Cook project has been on the table since at least January, 2002! Interesting!"

"The bottom line here is that commitments by town officials to thousands of existing residents, approved by Town Meeting voters, cannot be abandoned and cast aside! Nor can we the town continue to pollute our precious coastal waters, indeed the neighborhoods we reside in, in violation of the Clean Water Act. That's simply irresponsible. There is no fair nor practical nor voter-acceptable way for Cohasset to provide scarce, costly sewer capacity to new, 'for-profit' housing developments proposed to be built in this town!"

LIBRARY CORNER

Story & craft

Limited space is still available in the afternoon Story & Craft which meets on consecutive Thursdays October 7 through Oct. 28. Story & Craft meets from 1 to 2 p.m. and is for Cohasset residents ages 3-6. Call now and reserve your space!

Sing in Spanish

On Saturday, Oct. 9, from 10 to 11 a.m., Jodi Craft will kick off the LSTA Discovery Kit grant called "Cultural Connections". Join Jodi for a dynamic, lively, musical hour and learn more about the grant. Jodi will continue the program on Tuesday Oct. 12, 19, and 26 from 10 to 11 a.m. in the Story Hour Room. Join all four Spanish song sessions. No registration required. All ages are welcome. Caregivers must accompany children.

School Scrabble

The National School Scrabble Championship will be held on April, 8 and 9, 2005 at the Marriott Copley, Boston. Grades 5 to 8 are eligible to put together two-member teams. Registration will open on line on Oct. 12, at 9 a.m The registration fee is $100. To register, log onto hhtp://school.scrabble-assoc.com. Limited space is available. All registered students will receive a free annual membership to the school Scrabble Club and a free digital timer for game play.

T-shirt pickup

Students that participated in the summer reading program should pick up their T-shirts within the next two weeks.

Cultural connections to kick off on Oct. 9

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has been awarded a $7,500 grant for its program, "Cultural Connections". This project is being funded through the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners from LSTA (Library Services and Technology Act), a federal source of library funding provided by the Institute of Museum and Library Services. Cohasset's "Cultural Connections" grant program presents the opportunity to stimulate and challenge young students as they learn about the diverse cultures, languages and histories of the world's peoples.

Country Kits will be created using educational and cultural resources that will acquaint students in preschool through high school with the language, culture, art, music, history and geography of many countries. The grant materials and programs will support the curriculum frameworks in multiple areas. Kits will be available as check-out resources for home use and may be used as deposit collections in local schools. Story hours will reflect world and native cultures and special musical and dance performances will educate and entertain children and adults of all ages.

On Saturday, Oct. 9, from 10 to 11 a.m., Jodi Craft will kick off our "Cultural Connections" grant program with Spanish songs for young children. Come join us for a lively song and dance hour! Drop-In Spanish song groups will continue on Tuesday, Oct. 12, 19, and 26 from 10 to 11 a.m. Join all four Spanish song sessions. No registration required. All communities welcome. AK-04 the assault vodka?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see that Mikhail Kalashnikov, the Russian who invented the AK-47 assault rifle which has become the weapon of choice everywhere from Baghdad to Roxbury, is about to bring out his own brand of vodka.

Good. Now folks can drink themselves to death over a longer period of time than it takes his rifle, which is capable of firing 600 shots a minute from a 30 or 100 round clip, to do the same job in a fraction of a second.

When it is available in the United States sometime next year, Kalashnikov vodka will sell for $24 per 22.5 ounce bottle. The going rates for AK-47s on the black market, I'm told, is $100 in Honduras and $50 in Pakistan.

I've never been much of a vodka fan myself. Back in the days when ice covered the earth and I had to do something to keep warm, I chose gin, preferably in its natural habitat, wedded to vermouth and surrounding an olive.

When it is available in the United States sometime next year, Kalashnikov vodka will sell for $24 per 22.5 ounce bottle.

Kalashnikov is said to have invented his assault rifle while a Soviet soldier recovering from his wounds on the Eastern Front in 1941 but it wasn't accepted by the Russian army until 1947, hence the name: Automat-Kalashnikova 47.

The Red Army liked it because you could drop it in water or bury it in dirt and it would still function. It is beloved in places like Baghdad because you can fold it up and hide it under your robes to be pulled out as an American drives by.

Kalashnikov himself, now a retired general, told the Times of London that soldiers in Mozambique — the African birthplace of Teresa Heinz Kerry, incidentally — are naming their first-born sons "Kalash," after their favorite killing machine.

The 84-year-old retired soldier has a retort for those who write him critical of the killing power of his invention. "Tell them I sleep well," he told the Times. "Weapons are not to blame. The ones to blame are the politicians, not the designers."

Spoken like the president of the National Rifle Association.

The only gun approaching the AK-47 in popularity on the mean streets is the Uzi, which was invented by an Israeli Army major named Uziel Gal about the same time Kalashnikov's assault rifle hit the black marketplace.

The major's nickname was "Uzi" but I haven't heard that parents anywhere are naming their first-borns after him. And if he's thinking of bringing out his own brand of sacramental wine, I haven't got the skinny on it yet.

I remember an American-made gun similar to an assault rifle called a "Reising" that was entrusted to me briefly by my uncle during the late unpleasantries with Japan. After one performance, I think, it was dropped in favor of a bow and arrow.

The Reising did have one redeeming quality, though. It could be field stripped (that is, taken apart) in parts small enough to be mailed home in individual envelopes. A lot of the guys did.

ASP NEWS

It's hard to believe the summer is over and it's ASP time again. On Sunday, Sept. 19, the registration meeting was held at Second Congregational Church. It was wonderful to see so many old and new faces.

The application deadline was Oct. 1. Space is limited but there will be a waiting list. If you would still like to apply, and need an application, they are available online at: www.cohassetasp.org.

Also, Oct. 9 marks the beginning of the second annual Pumpkin Patch Extravaganza! This year's event will include hayrides, storytelling, and much more fun for the entire family! Volunteers are always needed for this event. Anyone interested in assisting with the unloading of the trucks on Oct. 9, or signing up for a time to volunteer, please contact Phil Lehr at 383-0783. Hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Please check here for weekly updates on Cohasset's 18th ASP year. Important dates and fundraisers will be highlighted as well as information about the project, and even stories and pictures from our volunteers, past and present.

Thank you, Cohasset, for your continuing support of the Appalachia Service Project!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't chop down historic Elm St. trees

TO THE EDITOR:

The Historical Society has in their sights two trees to which they repeatedly refer as "their property." They claim the trees are robbing the building of needed light and the roots are disrupting the building's foundation. Evident to me, however, is that the society wishes to eliminate these fine old trees to more easily construct handicapped access to the building enabling them to secure federal grant money, having fulfilled these requirements. Their intentions are fine — their process is totally not.

Two weeks ago the society appeared before the Board of Selectmen, accompanied by their expert, who oftentimes in Cohasset needs only to have an unfamiliar face to qualify, and informed the board of their intentions. Rightfully the board, some of whom are coming off discussions with the Waterfield Company's emphasis on the value of street trees, bristled.

Probably not an expert, but my last college stop was at U. Mass. in this field, and the value of mature street trees was always at the top of any priority list on streetscapes. For a group of three or four or five to come before the Selectmen, proclaiming a town treasure such as this as their private property, and propose eliminating something that we are striving to create in the rest of the downtown, tells me they need to be saved from themselves.

I might remind the society that the Wilson House was donated to them by a wonderful man named William McGaw, an old uncle of mine. In another Cohasset, Uncle Will, as we knew him, would see to it that some folks in town less fortunate than he might be helped out some, or that all people in town might get to enjoy the holidays — in another Cohasset indeed!

May I suggest the society view themselves more as fortunate stewards of this little gem rather than owners, and find an architect expert enough to preserve the whole premises including the wonderful trees that actually enhance it so.

A thorough pruning will easily afford the building of any light it may now be deprived of, and the root expansion of such an old growth tree is negligible. Simultaneously, trees with beautiful crowns will emerge. If the tree blows over it will be in an easterly direction, and will land on me, across the street, a chance I'm willing to take.

With problems such as Iraq and Africa it often seems petty to sweat the small stuff — but not always.

Safety fair slated at Senior Center

The first annual Safety Fair sponsored by the Cohasset Elder Affairs and the Norfolk County Sheriffs Office, TRIAD, will be held Oct. 13, from 10 a.m. to noon at the Senior Center, 3 North Main St. Opening remarks from Michael Bellotti, Sheriff, Norfolk County, followed by demonstrations, lots and lots of information on safety and brochures, and professional people to answer your questions will be available at Safety Fair.

There will be more than 25 vendors participating. Many with new information on how to remain safe, at home and in your community. This event is a great way to meet people and talk to provider first hand. You will be able to get important health questions answered and do one stop shopping for health and safety needs. Area seniors and families are welcome.

Suzanne Gunthier, OTR/D from the Arthritis foundation will speak before lunch. The luncheon will be served at the First Parish House, 23 North Main St. If you plan to attend this special event, RSVP To CEA office your lunch reservation at 781-383-9797.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen
beaconhill@aol.com
October 1, 2004

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on the roll call vote on election of a new House speaker and on two roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the Senate last week.

ELECTION OF HOUSE SPEAKER

The House elected Rep. Sal DiMasi (D-Boston) as speaker of the 160-member House. DiMasi received 133 votes while House Minority Leader Brad Jones (R-North Reading) received 22 votes. DiMasi replaces former Speaker Tom Finneran who resigned as speaker a day earlier and plans to soon resign from the House to take a new job with the Massachusetts Biotechnology Council. DiMasi had been the second in command in the House as majority leader under Finneran.

FINES FOR CIGARETTE SALE VIOLATIONS (H 4913)

House 21-134, rejected Gov. Romney's amendment to a budget provision increasing the fines on retail stores that sell cigarettes at a cost that is less than the cost that the retailer paid for the cigarettes and on wholesalers who sell cigarettes at less than the cost to the wholesaler. The current fine is up to $500. The budget provision increased the fine to up to $5000 for a first offense, $15,000 for a second offense and up to $30,000 for subsequent offenses. It also requires the reporting of a third offense to authorities for possible disciplinary action concerning the offender's license. The governor's amendment would increase the fine to up to $5000 for each offense and eliminate the reporting requirement. Amendment supporters and opponents agreed that the fine should be increased but differed on the amount of the hike. They both said that these violations are serious offenses that are designed to escape the excise tax on cigarettes and lower their price to make them more affordable for teenagers. Amendment supporters said a standard $5000 fine for all violations is sufficient and argued that the hike to up to $30,000 for a third offense is excessive. Amendment opponents said it is time to get serious with these violators and argued that it is important to increase the fines for additional offenses. (A "Yea" vote is for increasing the fine to $5000 instead of the three-tiered approach of $5000, $15,000 and $30,000. A "Nay" vote is against the increase to $5000 and favors the three-tiered approach).

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION (H 4904)

House 155-0, gave final approval to a bill creating a Department of Early Education and Care to serve as the lead agency for the administration of all public and private early education and care programs and services in Massachusetts. The measure also creates a Board of Early Education and Care to oversee the development and implementation of a program of voluntary, universally accessible high-quality early childhood education for all preschool-aged children. Gov. Romney had proposed some minor amendments to the proposal and after the House rejected those amendments, this final vote on the bill was required. Supporters said this bold initiative would consolidate existing early education and care program under a new and streamlined independent department. They noted that the landmark plan would eventually give all three and four-year-olds access to high quality early education and care through a system of both public and private providers. Gov. Romney has signed the bill into law. (A "Yea" vote is for the creation of a Department of Early Education and Care).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL

ABOLISH PREMARITAL BLOOD TEST (H 75)- The House gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate a bill repealing the current law requiring couples to have a premarital blood test to determine if either person has syphilis. Supporters said this antiquated requirement, established during a syphilis outbreak in the 1930s, is no longer worthwhile and noted that thousands of tests annually only reveal three or four cases of syphilis. They argued that the tests cost millions of dollars annually and said these healthcare dollars could be better spent elsewhere. In 2002, the Senate approved the bill and sent it to the House that never acted on it.

ELDERLY WATER CHARGE ABATEMENT (H 4001)- The House has accepted the Senate's amendments to a local option bill allowing cities and towns to abate the first $500 of water charges paid by seniors over age 65 who meet certain low-income and other requirements. The abatement would be provided to single seniors whose income is less than 16,000 annually and to married seniors with a joint income of less than $24,000. These seniors would qualify only if they have lived in Massachusetts for at least ten years and have owned property in the state for at least five years. The measure needs only final House and Senate approval prior to being sent to Gov. Romney.

School chief likes working in town

Cohasset post that opened up when former Supt. Dr. Edward Malvey stepped down. She said the Cohasset position was the only one she applied for and she would have stayed in Middleborough if it hadn't panned out. However, sometimes in life, timing is just right.

Walsh began her career in education in 1979 as a history and government teacher at Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth. "I have a love for the political system as well as teaching at the secondary level, and I found a way to combine my passion for politics and education early on," she said. Walsh said while she was teaching, she really enjoyed being able to bring the subject matter to life for her students, especially where government was concerned. She even took a trip down to Washington D.C. with her students to help them realize the significant role government plays in their everyday lives.

Although she loved to teach, after seven years she felt it was time to move on to something else. "You reach a point where you realize you have a greater influence in one position over another," she said, and hoped by moving from a teaching to an administrative position, she could "make a difference on a larger scale." However, even still, "I do miss the one-on-one," interaction with children, she said.

In 1986, Walsh was appointed assistant principal at Hingham High School. And in 1992, Walsh moved from her position in Hingham to become principal of Dedham High School, where she stayed until 1997.

"It was a very interesting time to be taking on a principalship," she said, adding curriculum frameworks were suddenly given to the schools and the state was telling them what they needed to do. Schools started operating on a more collaborative level, as school councils were developed and the community started taking a more proactive role in the education of children.

From there the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System, or MCAS tests began being administered to children to assess the curriculum the schools were required to follow. "It was a time of change, which was not easy because it happened so fast," Walsh said. "It began the era of accountability."

During that time she had been busy working toward earning her doctoral degree from the University of Massachusetts. Then she decided it was time to take the next step in her career and went on to become the assistant superintendent for the Silver Lake Regional School District.

"I needed budget experience," said Walsh, and the assistant superintendent role for the regional school allowed her to work with five budgets for four different towns, in addition to 55 school buses, and more than 500 students in each class. "The coordination necessary and the experience I had there was very valuable," she said.

In 2000, Walsh decided the time was right to take on the role of superintendent. "I had the training and the background, and felt I had the experience behind me," she said, which led her to apply for the job in Middleborough.

When she began in Middleborough, Walsh said it was once again a challenging time because many retirees had left their positions, and she was responsible for building a new administrative team. In addition, the town was experiencing a change in demographics as new, young families were continually moving to the area, increasing the population a little more every year. With more children, more teachers were required, more supplies were needed, and it affected the budgets for the schools.

"The town faced the issue head-on," said Walsh, adding under her direction, the budget was able to be increased to bring on additional staff and resources.

When former Cohasset Supt. Edward Malvey announced his retirement in October of last year, Walsh said the prospect of working in a small district which has such a wonderful reputation couldn't be passed up. In Middleborough, there had been roughly 4,000 students in the entire system, and she worked out of a building which was separate from the schools.

"I missed the closeness," of working in a small system, she said, and Cohasset felt like a perfect fit. In fact, when the Cohasset School Committee interviewed Walsh, its members instantly knew she was the person for the job as well. The night the committee voted to appoint Walsh as the new superintendent, Member Mark DeGiacomo said during the interview, "I slipped Pat (Martin) a note that said, 'She's the one'."

Since Walsh came on board this July, she said she has been slowly getting to know the students in all of the grade levels. She said she took a trip down to Camp Bournedale to visit the sixth-grade students who were there for the week on a class trip. In addition, she paid a visit to the students at Deer Hill to watch Principal Keith Gauley roll out the red carpet for students. "That is something they will never forget," she said.

Walsh said she likes to attend the various events students are involved with throughout the year. "It helps keep us focused. It reminds us why we do what we do," she said, adding even thought it is easy to sometimes become preoccupied with tough issues such as preparing the budget, "We need to put it in perspective that it's all about the children. The only reason we put together the budget is for them."

Walsh said because her administrative career began next door in Hingham, returning to the area, "I really do feel like I've come full circle." She looks forward to meeting many new people in Cohasset, as she has already been made to feel welcome. She said in her travels around town, people have started to recognize her and she has begun making introductions. "That is one of the many joys of working in a small town," she said.

Walsh currently lives in Plymouth and when she's not in Cohasset, enjoys spending time with her son and daughter. Her son is currently a legislative consultant on the North Shore, and her daughter is a school psychologist in Mashpee. Walsh said she also has a 2-1/2 year old granddaughter, "Who gets all of my spare time and attention."

But Walsh always looks forward to returning to the office, and thrives on the challenges of keeping the school district running smoothly. "I still love it and I can't imagine doing anything else."

History may settle trees' future

water, which one arborist said will surely damage the roots of the tree which could eventually lead to its becoming weak and collapsing on the historic building. Members of the Society say if the building is damaged, the collection inside will be damaged, and they feel the potential loss of a part of Cohasset's history outweighs cutting down the trees.

The drainage project is being paid for with money from the Community Preservation Fund, which selectmen say is essentially taxpayer dollars. Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said that makes the property "quasi-town property." As a result, the town is eligible to obtain a deed restriction on the property, which allows it to regulate the use of the building and the rights and access by the public. The deed restriction is currently being negotiated, and in Town Counsel's opinion, "The town can use its leverage of providing CPA funds to the Historical Society and try to include the preservation of these trees in the deed restriction. The town can suggest that the trees are as important as the buildings itself because of their age and historical value to the site and the public." However, Town Counsel also said the Society may not agree to those terms and the appropriate state agency which would review those terms may not agree either.

The drainage project is just one of many projects the Society has been working on in recent years. Last year, the Society moved from its former headquarters in the Lothrop House into the Paul Pratt Memorial building, which used to serve as the town library. The Society restored many original fixtures in the building, and has transformed the building itself into a town treasure. The building is now climate controlled to help preserve artifacts, and special shades to block ultra-violet light which can damage artifacts were also installed.

Just after the Society made its move, it celebrated its 75th anniversary with a weekend-long festival, which served as a way to showcase the new headquarters, and promote the history of the town.

This June, Society members Lynne DeGiacomo, David Wadsworth, and Morse published "Images of America: Cohasset." The book, which is the first pictorial history of the town, features many photos from the Historical Society's archives, as well as some which were donated, whose captions tell the story of days gone by.

The most recent accomplishment of the Society is the completion of two apartments in the lower level of the Paul Pratt building. The apartments will be used as affordable housing for the town and will help the town meet the 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state.

Dunkin' Donuts traffic studies to be scrutinized the development last night (Wednesday), the ZBA heard a presentation that won accolades by several townspeople present at its hearing Tuesday.

Generally, the ZBA appeared to like what it saw about the project, which is widely viewed as a vast improvement over current conditions.

The ZBA is considering issuing a special permit for a change of use for the Hair Affair site from a hair salon to a donut and coffee shop.

The plans include expanding the square footage of the two, separate existing buildings on the site by connecting the Hair Affair (to be a Dunkin' Donuts) to KoKo Island which would become a family-style restaurant that wouldn't compete for the breakfast crowd, according to the developers.

But ZBA member Ben Lacy expressed concern about Avalon renters making a left turn northbound onto Route 3A at roughly the same spot and during the peak coffee hour of 7:30-8:30 a.m. that northbound commuters would be making a right turn into Dunkin' Donuts.

Lacy said he hoped to read in the extensive traffic reports on the KoKo Island project that included peer review by a town consulting engineer to better understand the traffic picture.

Consultants for the KoKo Island project assured the ZBA that traffic had been studied and reviewed extensively.

KoKo Island engineers state they used the highest and therefore most conservative estimates of roughly 190 customers for Dunkin' Donuts during the peak hours of 7:30-9:30 a.m.

Richard Bryant of Rizzo Associates, traffic engineers, described the KoKo Island site as ideal for a Dunkin' Donuts drive-through. He explained the Dunkin' Donuts is unlikely to generate very much new or "destination" traffic and is primarily a draw for those who are already traveling the busy state roadway.

He said roughly 1,500 cars travel 3A from 7:30-8:30 a.m. and studies show 10 percent or about 150 would make the turn into Dunkin' Donuts. But at the recommendation of the town engineer, KoKo Island developers used the 190 customers for its study.

Bryant provided a detailed presentation comparing the proposed Dunkin' Donuts to others around the state and to other local coffee shops.

"But the big question we have is relative to the people coming out of the 200-unit apartment development across the street," Lacy, the ZBA member, said.

"A lot of people are going to cross over into the right lane, do you think you can handle it all?" he asked.

Bryant explained that KoKo Island developers would restrict customers to a right-turn-only out of the site during peak morning hours. He assured the ZBA there was more than adequate site distance in both directions from the entrance-exit.

Merle Brown of Beechwood Street, who is a member of the Advisory Committee but was speaking as a private citizen, gave the plans top marks.

"It's a great site and a great improvement and would be an advantage to the town," he said.

Agnes McCann of Doane Street agreed, saying she couldn't see how the ZBA could reject the project.

Daniel Tripp of Mendel Road said the aesthetics alone would be a big improvement.

Some others present expressed concern about the speed and general traffic conditions along 3A and questioned whether this proposal exacerbated the problem.

The ZBA took the matter under advisement and continued the hearing until its next meeting, Nov. 8.

Captains Ted Straughn (#34) and Joe Durkin (#20) are the first players to break through the banner to kickoff Homecoming ceremonies, Friday night, at Cohasset High. It was all uphill from there, as the Skippers took it to Pembroke, 30-6.

Skippers scuttle Titans

First year Pembroke gridders no match for Cohasset

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It's becoming clear the Pembroke High football team is going to give even teams with good defenses some fits this season.

Now, if the Titans can tighten things up a bit defensively, they might actually win a game or two, which would be a remarkable first season achievement.

The Titans opened their second straight game with an impressive scoring drive, this one going for nine plays and 70 yards on Friday night at Cohasset High. Pembroke senior captain Justin Mucci capped things off with a five yard burst up the middle to pay dirt. This cast a brief pall on Cohasset High's Homecoming ceremonies... "brief" being the operative word .

It was all Skippers from that point forward, as the hometown team scored on all four of its first half possessions to run away with the 30-6 victory.

Cohasset (4-0), the defending South Shore League champions, compiled a total of 167 yards on just 16 first half plays to take the 30-6 lead into the break Pembroke (0-3) had one punt blocked and saw the snap on another sail over the punter's head, giving Cohasset plum field position both times.

Cohasset senior backfield mates Crandon Leahy and Joe Durkin did the bulk of the damage to Pembroke. Quarterback Leahy finished with 83 yards on six carries, including two TD runs, and also completed all three of his passes for another 21 yards. Durkin, at tailback, ran nine times for 84 yards, including a pair of TD scampers. Neither player saw much of the field in the second half, with all of the scoring done by the break.

"They were just more physical than us and, defensively, we just couldn't stop them," appraised Titans coach John McIntyre, who does not have a single player on the defensive line weighing over 200 pounds. " They had a lot of speed and we had some responsibility breakdowns."

The Skippers answered right back on the Titans game opening score with an efficient seven play-61 yard touchdown drive.

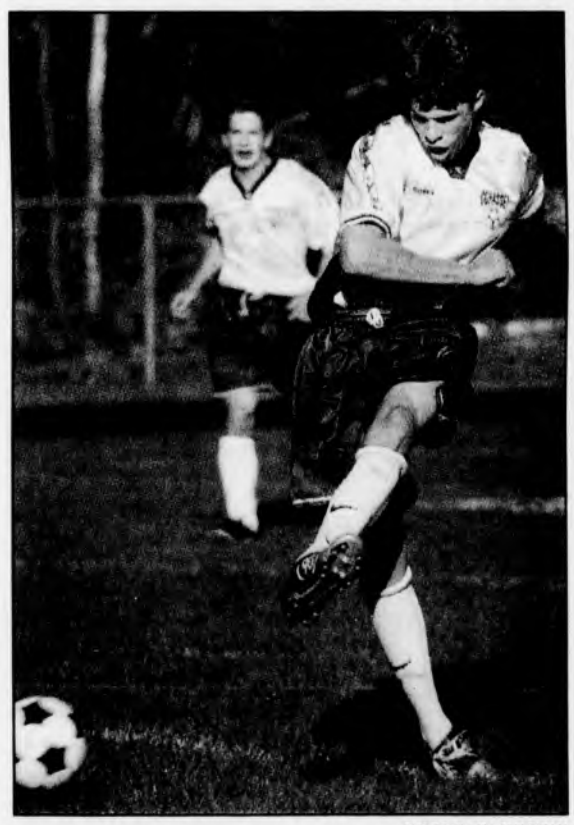
Late Kitchen goal lifts Norwell booters past arch-rival Cohasset, 2-1

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

There's no such thing as a "bad win" when the Cohasset and Norwell boys soccer teams meet. The age old adage "a win is a win is a win" most certainly applies.

There is a lot of recent history between these two South Shore League programs, and not all of it is pleasant. One thing one can never question in these games is intensity.

Execution, however, can be another matter, and it most certainly was in the first of two scheduled meetings between the teams this past Thursday at Norwell High..



The Norwell and Cohasset squads that battled it out for the top spot in the SSL a year ago were each slammed by graduation this past spring, but both have bounced back better than most observers expected, as indicated by their records of 6-1 and 3-2-1, respectively, heading into Thursday's much anticipated showdown.

Still, following the 2-1 win, it was apparent both teams still need work.

"We're a good team, and I couldn't ask for my kids to play much better than they did in this one, for the most part," said second year Cohasset coach Rob Leary following the setback. "But we're still making mistakes. We made a few bad mistakes today and Norwell cashed in on two of them. Those are kinds of mistakes we just can't afford to make."

His counterpart, Norwell's Jack Browne, was happy to come away with the win, but that was not true with everything

Unfortunately, Aidan Buick's lone goal in last Thursday's much anticipated showdown with Norwell did not hold up, as the Skippers fell, 2-1.

Field hockey team nets first win

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

For one game in particular, the Cohasset High field hockey team's rebuilding program hit the nail squarely with the head of the hammer.

After going five games without a win, the Skippers put up win number one with a 2-0 shutout over Norwell late last week. The loss of 12 seniors to graduation is a pretty good reason why this is seen as a rebuilding year at CHS.

Another reason for the ongoing construction project is this year's entire Cohasset team is made up entirely of last year's junior varsity team.

The hammer slipped a bit the next game, the Skippers playing Scituate to a 1-1 tie. On Monday, the hammer smacked Cohasset right on its make believe thumb, dropping a 1-0 decision to previous winless Hull.

After Monday's setback, Cohasset was left with a 1-6-2 record, with Notre Dame scheduled for Wednesday and Carver at Cohasset on Thursday (6 p.m. start).

"The rebuilding continues," said Cohasset coach Deb Boswick. "We have a very young team, and we have been faced with a lot of obstacles. But the team has been coming along and we think the players are ready to go."

It appears the Cohasset team was looking a game beyond when it played Hull, a winless team without a home field. If Hull had a field, it would have been the Pirates home game at Hull. Instead, the Hull team visited Cohasset and the Skippers, nice kids that they are, made Hull the home team, along with the goodies that go along with being the home team.

Getting back to win number one, the Skippers scored the first goal and what proved to be the Lady booters can't afford to drop winnable games

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Considering some of the monsters the Cohasset girls soccer team has on its schedule, it can simply not afford to let "winnable games" slip through its fingers.

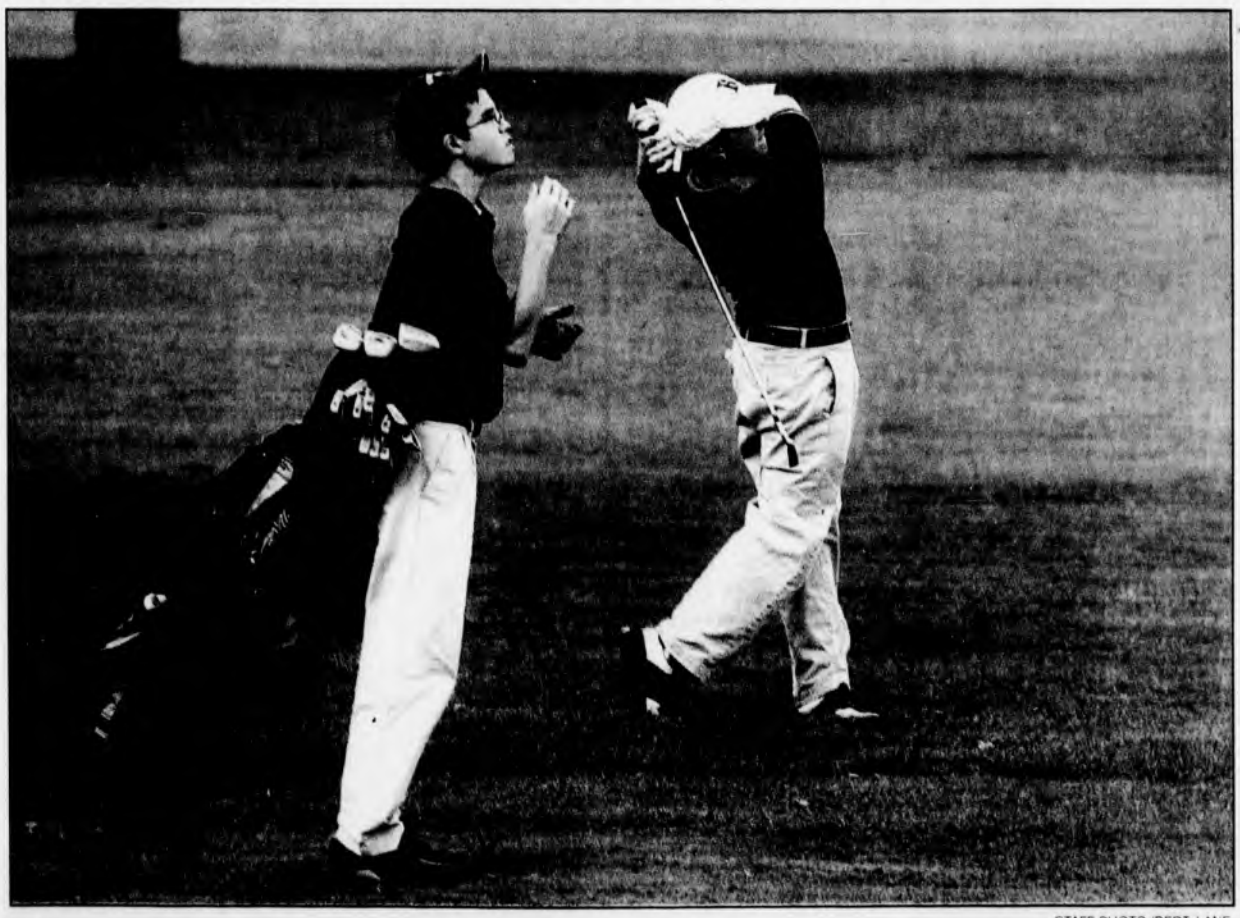
Tuesday's 1-1 tie on the road versus South Shore League rival Mashpee was a perfect example of "one that got away." The tie left the Lady Skippers right at the all-important .500 mark, at 3-3-2.

A pretty solo effort by Lauren Rizzotti, splitting the defense on her own and tucking the ball away, gave the Lady Skippers an early 1-0 lead. However, with three minutes left in the first half, Mashpee freshman Katie Drew scored the equalizer with a well placed bullet from 18 yards out.

Coach Deb Beal accepted some of the blame for the game-tying goal, noting "I should have subbed my midfield line. They were tired and they needed a break. I thought they could hold on for four more, but we gave up a goal."

This fact simply added on to what Beal felt was a miserable afternoon. It started with a long ride to the Cape, and, once off the bus, it was discovered the weather was colder and windier than the team had anticipate. And things only went downhill from there.

Beal was not at all happy to learn that the game had been switched last minute to Mashpee's tiny JV field.



"That's probably the smallest field I have ever seen," stated Beal. "It could not have been more that 85 yards long. It was obvious early that this was no field condition switch. They had a plan, and they executed it very well. They pulled their defenders up real far and were able to draw our forwards offsides probably 10-12 times."

Of course, the veteran coach was just as unhappy, in general, with the play of her team. Beal figures her team gave up at least three solid scoring opportunities by "not paying attention to the defense."

"It was quite frustrating from the sidelines and I felt sorry for the girls," said Beal, "but if they had been paying attention and staying patient then just maybe it may have been different.

"Play all around was not as

Coastal Stars report

Mite C1

Coastal Stars Mite C1 faced Hanover at Hobomock Arena on Sunday, October3. The Stars put up a great fight but lost a tough game 7-4.

Goalie Tyler McKinnon had many great saves and some strong defensive help by Davis Cronin, Sean Feeney, Jake Moore and Tommy Pendergast.

Forwards Liam Manning, Hugh Healey, and Jack Conlon put the Stars on the board. Also adding to the offense was Cameron Mastrangelo,Christopher Bertone, and Joseph Deyeso.

There was other great action around the puck with Daniel Cronin, James Dietrich and Joseph Proctor all keeping the pressure on Hanover.

Jake Shaw and Benjamin Smith had some great moves and kept the puck moving fast.

A hat trick was scored by Jack Conlon.

The Stars look forward to facing Hingham next Saturday at Hobomock.

Mite A

The Coastal Star Mite A team is off to a strong start to the 2004-2005 season. The team had its first sunrise game against Plymouth on September 25. The Coastal Stars controlled the play of the game through the first two periods with strong defensive play by Charlie Blackington, Matt Burchill, and Garrett Leahy limiting the Plymouth Team to just three shots on goal during the first two periods. The Plymouth goalie also played a strong game denying shots by David Cataldo, Jeremy Duchini, Tommy O'Brien and Brendan Crane. The first goal of the game came early in the third period with defenseman Patrick Holway skating end to end to score the first goal for the Stars. Plymouth tied the game and then scored their second goal with eight minutes left in the game. Just under a minute later, Patrick Holway again brought the puck up the ice for his second and the tying goal of the game. Excellent net minding by Jeff Nagle for the remainder of the game helped the Stars end with a 2-2 tie against a strong Plymouth team.

The Stars Mite A second game of the season was held this past Saturday in Taunton against the Brewins of Taunton. The Brewins scored their first goal just two minutes into the first period but goalie Jeff Nagle would deny them of any more goals until late in the third. The Stars scoring began with a nice rebound shot by Brendan Crane to tie the game at one. The Stars defensive players Sam Topham, Jeremy Duchini, Charlie Blackington and Garrett Leahy did a great job backchecking, preventing breakaways and killing power plays by the Brewins. During the second period the Stars lit the light three more times with goals coming from Kenny Parnell, the "Cohasset Connection" of Brandon Winn to Martin Buckley and another nice rebound goal by Colin McDonald. The game ended just about how it started with a goal by Brendan Crane giving the Stars the 5-2 victory.

Squirt A

Hustling, aggressive play was the key to the Squirt A Coastal Stars' 6-0 win over the Mohawks. Defensemen Kevin McDougall, EJ Culhane, DJ Evans, and Dan LeBlanc consistently stepped up at the blue line to keep the puck in the zone and set up scoring chances with smart passing and accurate shots from the point. Jake Durkin and the other forwards were tenacious in the corners and frustrated the Mohawks with their backchecking. But despite constant pressure and several close attempts, the first period ended scoreless.

Jonathan Spitz started the scoring early in the second when he flipped a Chris Carpenter pass from the boards past the defender at the blue line, broke in alone, and fired top shelf. Mike Carbone outskated the defense from the Mohawk blue line and tucked the puck into the right corner at 3:27. About a minute later, DJ Evans and EJ Culhane fed Chris Carpenter, who shifted through center ice, broke free, and fired into the right side for a power play goal. Connor Maher, who was brilliant when necessary, denied the Mohawks' best scoring chance when he flashed the right pad on a breakaway shot. Mike Carbone picked up a John Ryan feed at center ice, zipped his way through traffic, and rifled one to the top corner at 9:33 for the 4-0 lead after two.

"Cohasset really took it to us in the first half," said the fourth year head coach. "They definitely had their chances. We were having trouble moving the ball out of our zone, and that's a concern.. But Cohasset's a good team. I've got to give them credit too."

The difference in the game turned out to be a direct kick by Norwell leading scorer Scott Kitchen with just over five minutes to play in the game, taken 35 yards straight out from the left goal post. On the re-start, junior Ben Healey ran at the ball first moving right to left as if he were going to pass it toward the left corner, but he stepped over the ball and Kitchen then ran onto it from the left to strike the ball around the four man Cohasset wall, hooking it beautifully just inside the far goal post.

"That was a beautiful shot, but it was a breakdown by us defensively, and a bad play that put them in a position to score that goal," said Leary.

A quick counterattack led by Healey, Kitchen and freshman Colin Henry gave Norwell a number's advantage deep in Cohasset's end that resulted in Healey being taken down from the rear by a midfielder trying to get back into the play.

All of the game's scoring came in the second half, the first two goals potted on penalty kicks. Healey gave Norwell a lead in the 50th minute when he blasted his PK into the top left corner past helpless Cohasset keeper Prescott Busk, but Cohasset's Aidan Buick returned the favor six minutes later when he ripped his freebie 10 feet inside the right post past equally helpless Norwell keeper Drew Caldwell.

The Norwell PK was awarded a few ticks after Kevin McCord sent fast emerging Norwell freshman Colin Henry in all alone on Busk with a long through from midfield. Busk came out to cut down the angle, and Henry's chip attempt caromed off the inside of the right post. Kitchen won the race to the rebound to the left of the net, however, and was taken down as he attempted to get off the shot.

It was a nice run with the ball by midfelder Brandon Smith up the left sideline and slip pass into the goal box to fellow junior Ben Libby that resulted in Cohasset's PK, as Libby had a step on his man as he began to move in on the goal from the left and was bumped hard from the rear as he attempted to crossover and give himself a better angle.

The best soccer of the match was played over the remaining 24 minutes with the score tied at 1-1. It was evenly played, exciting, up and down soccer.

This was much unlike the early part of the game, and really almost all of the first half, when Cohasset maintained a clear edge in the territorial battle.

Of course, Browne had made a few personnel adjustments in the wake his team's first loss, a 2-1 setback to Harwich on Monday, and his team seemed to struggle at first with those. The coach moved the multi-talented Kitchen from midfield to the attack in an effort to bolster the flagging offense, but the junior got few touches in the first half. The Norwell coach also made several changes in his back four alignment, and complications were compounded there when talented sophomore sweeper Mike Pelletier went down with an ankle sprain midway through the first half.

Cohasset senior captain Kevin Dinsmore was a force in the first half from his center mid spot, repeatedly breaking down the Norwell defense with some nice runs in the midfield and quick through passes. However, the Skippers forwards struggled in the front third of the field.

Buick, the Skippers leading scorer, also set up some scoring chances with powerful throw-ins from deep in Norwell's end and well placed corner kicks, both of which the Skippers had in abundance in the first half, but nothing came out of it.

Late in the half, Libby was sent through on a nice pass from Buick, but Norwell's Caldwell charged out without hesitation and smothered Libby's attempt at a quick second touch shot.

Norwell's best opportunities in the opening half came on counter-attacks. McCord was able to split a pair of defenders late after a slick forward pass from Healy, and chipped it just over the cross bar as Busk rushed out at him.

The Norwell defense did a much better job clearing the zone in the second half. Sophomore Mike Valencius, who had been playing a fullback spot prior to the Pelletier injury, moved back to sweeper and acquitted himself well Junior Brett Cleaves came off the bench to play a very strong second half at fullback, and sophomore Craig Pacella filled in well in back as well.

Doing a nice job of marking up in the second half for the Clippers were midfielders Jim Barrett, Ryan Hines and captain Cliff Hanson.
